SIR,—I have the honour to submit the Twenty-fifth Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada. This report, which covers the calendar year 1935, was prepared in the Labour Intelligence Branch of the Department. Like previous reports on this subject, it contains much information concerning the labour bodies with which organized Canadian workers are identified, and gives statistics of organized labour in the Dominion.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

W. M. DICKSON,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

OTTAWA, May, 1936.

LABOUR ORGANIZATION IN CANADA

This is the Twenty-fifth report, in a series which began in 1911, on Labour Organization in Canada. The purpose of these annual reports is to give statistical and other information as to central labour organizations operating in Canada, delegate bodies and local unions, with names and addresses of chief officers, business agents, etc. In nearly all cases the particulars for the various labour bodies were secured from the organizations concerned, but where this was impossible, the information was obtained from Departmental records or other reliable sources. The numerous phases of trade unionism are dealt with in the various chapters of the present volume. This volume also contains important data on organizations of wage earners not connected with the trade union movement but which are considered of sufficient importance to be recorded. The present report, in the main, follows closely the form of those in the series which have been issued.

The monthly issues of the Labour Gazette contain information as to conventions of the various labour organizations as well as other union activities.

In Canada, labour organization falls into two classes: (1) international organizations having membership in Canada and the United States; (2) organizations whose membership is wholly in Canada. The Canadian branches of nearly all of the first group are in affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in a subsequent chapter). The second group, made up of wholly Canadian bodies, is grouped according to affiliation under: Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; All-Canadian Congress of Labour; National Catholic Unions, affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, etc.

The principal types of labour organization are the craft unions, including workmen in a single craft or a number of closely related crafts or trades, such as bricklayers and stone-masons, and the industrial unions, those having members in the various occupations in a particular industry, for instance, in coal mining. Several of the first mentioned class include several crafts with helpers and labourers, so that they may be considered quasi-industrial unions. There is also a type of organization which organizes workers in all industries under one general union, centrally controlled, usually with subdivisions by industries and localities. In a later section of this chapter the development of the various types of labour organization in Canada is briefly outlined.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN 1935

The figures published in this report, covering the calendar year 1935, show that the trade union membership, as reported to the Department, is slightly lower than that recorded in the previous year. This decrease is wholly due to the fact that the Workers' Unity League, which reported a membership of 24,086 in 1934, did not make a return for the present report. The explanation given was to the effect that negotiations which had been carried on for the greater part of 1935 culminated in the absorption of almost the entire affiliated membership of the League by the various international organizations.

The decrease in membership of all classes is shown at 1,070, making a total of 280,704. The membership had reached its highest point in 1919, when it stood at 378,047.

The international craft union group, which consists of the Canadian members of 81 organizations, 2 more than recorded in 1934, according to returns received in the Department or obtained from some other reliable source, had 1,782 branches in the Dominion, an increase of 32, with a combined membership of 139,370, a gain of 5,701. The Industrial Workers of the World reported 12 local unions in Canada, a gain of 1, with 4,200 members, an increase of 45. The group of Canadian central organizations which numbered 23, a loss of 1, had 734 branches, with a combined membership of 80,078. This is an increase of 72 in branches and 24,592 in membership. The National Catholic group consists of 140 unions, an increase of 18, the membership as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada being 38,000 a gain of 7,654. There were 49 independent units, 7 more than in 1934, with a combined membership of 16,859 an increase of 6,407. The local unions of affiliates of the Workers' Unity League which reported to the Department numbered 11, as compared with 105 the previous year, with a combined membership of 2,197, a loss of 21,889.

A computation of these figures indicates that there were in Canada at the close of 1935 a total of 2,728 trade union branches, a loss of 12, with a combined reported membership of 280,704, a decrease, as stated above, of 1,070. According to the census figure as at June 1, 1935, trade unionists represented about 2.6 per cent of the population, adding 113,915, the number of members comprised in the non-trade union associations, the organized wage-earners in the Dominion at the close of 1935, represented 3.6 per cent of the population.

The number of branches and the membership reported or obtained from other reliable sources, of the various classes of labour organizations operating in Canada at the close of 1935, with the number of members of each group affiliated, are indicated in the accompanying table:—

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP AND LOCAL BRANCHES

The first report of the Department of Labour on Labour Organization in Canada was for the year 1911. The table following shows, for each year, the number of trade union branches in Canada, together with their combined memberships:—

The chart appearing on page 10, based on above membership figures, indicates at a glance the fluctuations which have occurred in the standing of organized labour in the Dominion for the past twenty-five years, the period covered by these annual reports.

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE GROUPS

The accompanying table and chart show the division of union membership among the various industries and trade groups. The membership of each central body is included in the trade group in which most of its members are employed. For instance the membership of the various carpenters' unions are classified under building trades. The membership of each central body is shown in Table I and IA Chapter XVIII (Statistics).

The railroad employees' group as usual contains the largest number of members, namely 68,692, representing 24.47 per cent of the total.

Mining and Quarrying.—Coal miners' unions constitute the chief organizations in these industries. The United Mine Workers of America, which has a large membership in Alberta and Nova Scotia, District 18 and 26 respectively, and the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia include all classes of workers in coal mines, mechanics, engineers, etc., as well as miners. The Mine Workers' Union of Canada has all of its membership among coal miners in Alberta. A number of independent local coal miners' unions in Alberta and in British Columbia had a combined membership of approximately 2,000. The National Catholic Unions and an independent union had asbestos miners in Quebec.

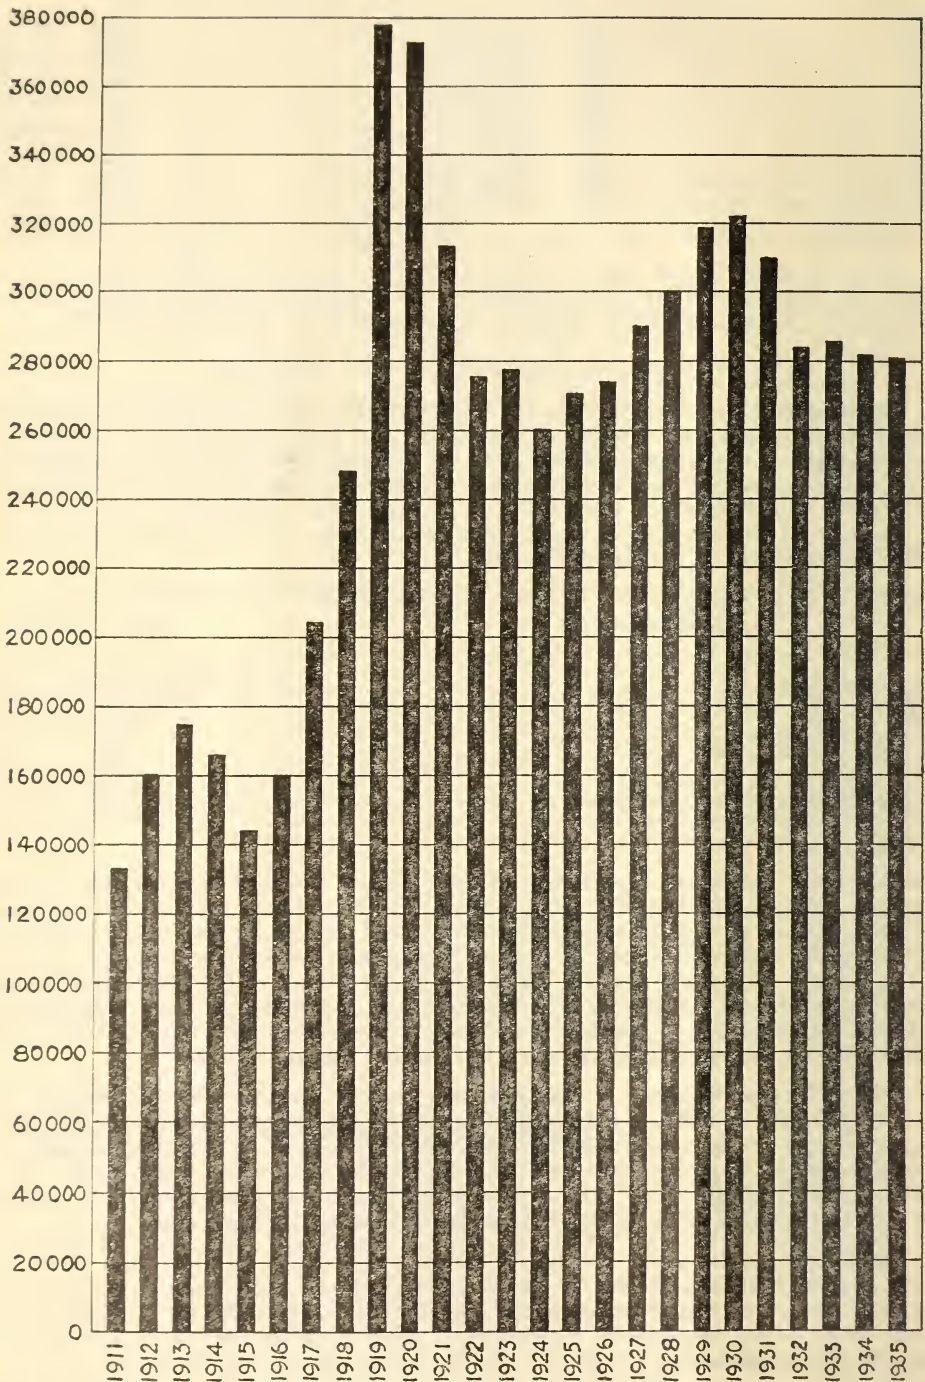

Building Trades.—Included in this group are the various unions whose members are engaged principally in building and construction. There are some exceptions, however, such as carpenters in wood working establishments, electrical workers on electrical railways, in railway shops and in electric light and power plants. Building trades councils have been established in the larger cities. The carpenters, bricklayers and masons, electrical workers and plumbers together make up about 70 per cent of the total membership.

Metal Trades.—This group includes the various unions whose members work chiefly in metal working establishments and in railway shops, but elevator constructors and bridge structural and ornamental iron workers are also included. Machinists and moulders constitute over half the membership in this group. An independent unit under this heading has over 1,700 members.

Printing and Paper Making Trades.—The members of the unions in this group work chiefly in printing and publishing establishments and in pulp and paper mills. The carpenters and electricians, as well as the engineers and firemen in the pulp and paper mills, belong, however, to the building, metal and engineering unions. The members of the Typographical Union, together with the paper makers and the pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers, make up over 68 per cent of the total membership in this group, while the printing pressmen have considerably over 1,300 members.

Clothing, Boot and Shoe Trades.—In this group, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, whose members are employed in men's and boys' ready-made clothing factories, ranks first, but the International Ladies' Garment Workers, composed of employees in cloak, suit and dressmaking establishments, has a large membership. The International Fur Workers' Union, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' Union have over 1,000 members each.

Railroad Employees.—Included in this group of organizations of steam railway employees are the four independent international unions, sometimes referred to as "the big four," namely, the Locomotive Engineers, the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Railway

Conductors and the Railroad Trainmen, the membership of each ranging from over 4,000 to nearly 12,000. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees, whose membership is composed of section men and the mechanics in the bridge and building departments, had the largest trade union membership in Canada, being over 12,000. The Railway Carmen, which includes car repairers and car building trades, such as carpenters, upholsterers, etc., had a membership of nearly 10,000. The locals of this organization, along with certain locals of the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, moulders, sheet metal workers and electrical workers' unions which have members chiefly in railway shops, constitute Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor (Federated Shop Crafts), which represents these classes of employees in negotiations with the railway companies. The Railway and Steamship Clerks and the Railroad Telegraphers had memberships of 5,000 or over. The former includes clerks, freight handlers and station employees, not only on steam railways but employed by steamship companies; most of its members, however, are employed on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

In the Canadian group the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is outstanding, having the second largest membership of any union in Canada. While membership is open to nearly all classes of railway employees, the organization is composed chiefly of clerks, freight handlers, station employees, shop labourers, dining and sleeping car employees on the Canadian National Railways and among employees of the Canadian National Express Company. It has also some members in car shops and among steamship clerks and freight handlers. This union as well as the Canadian Association of Railwaymen, the latter reporting nearly 3,000 members, are affiliates of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

Other Transportation and Navigation Trades.—In this group the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees has the largest membership, and is composed of motormen and conductors and miscellaneous classes of electric railway employees, as well as motor coach drivers. Electrical workers, machinists, etc., usually belong to the unions of their respective crafts, but in some instances by arrangement with these unions are in the street railway organization. A considerable membership of the One Big Union is employed on the Winnipeg Street Railway and its suburban lines. There are several longshoremen's organizations. The International Longshoremen's Association has in its organization the employees of this class in Halifax, Saint John and some Ontario points, but in Montreal, Vancouver and Victoria they belong to independent units. Two organizations of ship employees, with considerable memberships, but not classed as labour bodies, are referred to in the last chapter of this report. In these industries the National Catholic Unions had nearly 1,000 members.

Public Employment, Personal Service and Amusement.—The total membership of those organizations of Federal Government employees which are classed as unions was nearly 8,000. These unions include postal clerks, letter carriers, railway mail clerks, and the members of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada. The only union of provincial government employees to be included in this group is the Civil Service Association of Alberta with a membership of 1,200. Among civic employees, the local unions chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada had a total membership of approximately 4,500. The International Association of Fire Fighters and the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters had a combined membership of over 2,500. The total membership of the unions in this class chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was about 1,600. A civic employees' unit of the One Big Union had 300 members, while an independent Firemen's union in Montreal reported a membership of 900. In personal service, the hotel and restaurant employees had over 1,500 members, and the barbers over 600. The musicians' union, with about 4,000 members, was the strongest numerically in this group. The stage employees organization, which includes moving picture operators, also reported a large membership. The National Catholic unions under this heading had a membership of well over 2,600.

All Other Trades and General Labour.—The largest organization in this group is the Industrial Workers of the World, with 4,200 members, mostly lumbermen, in Ontario and British Columbia. The Commercial Telegraphers and the Brewery Workers' Union had over 1,500 and 1,000 members respectively, while the membership of the directly chartered unions of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in this class totalled over 2,900, and that of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour more than 1,300. Two fishermen's organizations on the Pacific coast had memberships of 1,050 and 600 respectively. Included under this heading are 2,377 members of the National Catholic Unions and almost the entire membership of the One Big Union, being 23,755.

UNIONS HAVING LARGE MEMBERSHIPS IN CANADA

Of the 105 central organizations with branches or members in Canada, there are 12 with 5,000 or more members, 6 of which are composed of employees who are identified with railway operation. Nine of the organizations referred to above are international bodies, while three are in the Canadian group. The names of the 12 organizations appear in the following table, being arranged according to numerical strength, and among them they represent a total Canadian trade union membership of 99,777, comprised in 871 local branch unions, 35.5 per cent of the total membership and 31.9 per cent of the total trade union branches.

CHARACTER AND DEVELOPMENT OF TRADE UNIONISM

A small number of independent trade associations had been formed in Canada before the middle of the last century, each usually consisting of the workmen of a single craft in a given locality. With the establishment of more unions, a movement developed for wider organizations of work people. Following the trend of development in Great Britain and in the United States, some of the central organizations which resulted were general in character, including workmen of all occupations in various industries.

There were formed also industrial unions, each including all classes of labour in a particular industry. On the other hand, many were confined to workmen of a single craft, or a number of related crafts, having one or more local branches in each locality organized, and by the end of the century this type of union predominated. The Knights of Labour, an organization of the general type with local and trade assemblies, formed in the United States in 1869, and operating also in Canada, had reached its greatest numerical strength about the year 1885, when the total membership was near the million mark, but declined rapidly thereafter, having a comparatively small membership at the beginning of the twentieth century. It will be of interest to know that at least one branch of this organization was in operation in Canada up to 1935, when the last remaining assembly passed out of existence. This was the Papineau Assembly located in Quebec City. An instance of the formation of a general union for a smaller area was the Provincial Workmen's Association established among coal miners in Nova Scotia in 1879, which attempted to organize all classes of workmen in the province. The scheme was not successful, and later the organization became a purely coal miners' union. In the meantime, most of the craft organizations (chiefly international, that is, having local branches in Canada as well as the United States) had become united through affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, formed in 1881 to promote the common interests of the various unions in legislation, etc., and to charter local trades and labour councils, state federations, etc., for similar purposes. As explained in a subsequent chapter of this report, the Federation has in affiliation a number of unions, each of which comprises all classes of labour in a single industry, for instance the coal miners' union, the United Mine Workers of America. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, established in 1873, similarly functions in promoting the common interests of the various organizations in Canada represented in it, chartering also provincial federations, trade and labour councils, and local unions, whose membership does not come within the jurisdiction of affiliated organizations.

When the National Trades and Labour Congress (subsequently the name was changed to the Canadian Federation of Labour) was formed in 1902, the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada decided in future to deny representation to local assemblies of the Knights of Labour and other unions whose jurisdiction conflicted with international unions. The unions affiliated with the Federation, with certain others later formed, merged in the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927.

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, formed in 1921 following conferences of National Catholic Unions in 1918 and succeeding years, included a number of national unions expelled from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in 1902, and similar unions organized later.

Separate chapters in this report are devoted to the above mentioned organizations and to several separate organizations formed subsequently, the Industrial Workers of the World, the One Big Union, and the revolutionary organizations.

TRADE UNIONS ACT, 1872

Previous to the year 1872, trade unionists in Canada encountered difficulties in connection with organization and other activities, as under English law, still in force in some of the Canadian provinces, these were considered as being in restraint of trade. In that year printers in Toronto and other cities went on strike to secure a nine-hour day, and some were arrested on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade. As a result of these arrests the Dominion Parliament passed the Trade Unions Act, which declared the purposes of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade. The Act also permitted the registration of unions in the office of the Secretary of State, such unions thereby securing legal status in certain respects. The Criminal Law Amendment Act enacted during the same session contained provisions as to picketing, intimidation, etc. An amendment to section 501 of the Criminal Code, passed at the fifth session of the seventeenth Parliament added a clause with reference to picketing as follows:—

Attending at or near or approaching to such house or other place as aforesaid, in order merely to obtain or communicate information, shall not be deemed a watching or besetting within the meaning of this Section.

The law as to picketing, etc., is found in the Criminal Code, Sections 496-502, Chapter 36. The provisions in the Trade Unions Act as to criminal conspiracy are also now included in the Criminal Code.

Legislation regarding trade unions is also in effect in the provinces of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Quebec.—The Professional Syndicates Act which was passed by the Quebec Legislature in 1924, constitutes a union, after certain formalities are complied with, a corporation enjoying civil rights. It also provides for collective labour agreements between employees and employers. The unions registered under this Act are shown in a subsequent Chapter on Registration of Trade Unions and Union Labels.

Manitoba.—By an act of the Manitoba Legislature, passed in 1920, employers and employees have the right to organize and also the right to bargain with one another individually or collectively through their organizations or representatives. In the event of a dispute such dispute shall be submitted to a Joint Council of Industry composed of five members, two representing employers and two the employees, the fifth to be chairman, and this council shall make an investigation and report its findings.

British Columbia.—In 1911 the Legislature of British Columbia passed an act setting forth the liability of trade unions in respect to strikes, lockouts, or trade or labour disputes. The law further stipulated that trade unions were not liable for communicating certain information and employing fair arguments to induce workmen not to renew contracts, nor for the publishing of certain information respecting strikes.

LABOUR IN POLITICS

At the annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, held in the City of Hamilton in September, 1887, a resolution was unanimously adopted which declared "that in the opinion of this Congress the working classes of Canada will never be properly represented in parliament, or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class, and members of this Congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavours, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for the local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside." In the political activities which followed the adoption of the above resolution, the trades and labour councils usually took the lead and were responsible on a few occasions in having labour candidates nominated for office. Owing to the fact that this procedure caused some dissatisfaction among the members, the Trades and Labour Congress, at its annual convention at Ottawa in 1900, adopted a proposal for independent political action. A continuous agitation was kept up by those who wanted the Congress to become the head of a labour political party. As a concession to these agitators, the Congress, in 1906, approved a policy of provincial autonomy in the establishment of labour political parties, but even this was not sufficient to satisfy their demands or bring into being the desired political organization. In a further endeavour to meet the wishes of those who were urging political action, the 1917 convention of the Congress suggested that the organized workers in the Dominion should follow the British plan and organize a labour party on a basis which would permit united action on the part of trade unionists, socialists, fabians, co-operators and farmers. This suggestion was approved, and in 1921 the Canadian Labour Party was established. In the next few years some success was attained in bringing together the various labour political parties, but in 1927 the secretary, who had held office since the inception of the Party, resigned. No serious attempt was made to secure a successor, and as a consequence the main section of the party ceased to function. The Alberta and Quebec sections continued to operate and are active at the present time. Independent labour parties have been organized in a number of the provinces but have met with little success.

In the October, 1931, issue of the Canadian Unionist, official organ of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, an announcement was made of the formation of a National Labour Party. In a manifesto the aim of the Party was declared to be "to organize the workers politically for the purpose of establishing, by constitutional means, an equitable economic social order."

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was established on August 1, 1932, at a meeting held in Calgary, Alta., of delegates reported as representing labour, farmer and socialist groups in five provinces, viz., Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Among the purposes of the Federation is the establishment in Canada of a co-operative commonwealth in which production, distribution and exchange would be regulated to supply human needs and not for profit, and the taking over by the state of the public utilities and major industries including mining, pulp and paper, etc. A Dominion council was set up, as well as a council for each province. The member organizations in the various provinces were to select the provincial council and were also to be represented on the Dominion council by one delegate from each body. Each member organization was to be required to pay $25 as an affiliation fee, and financial support was to be sought through voluntary subscriptions. The chief officers of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation are:—President, J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., Winnipeg, Man.; Secretary, Norman F. Priestly, Edmonton, Alta.

In the last Federal Election and in some of the recent Provincial Elections, the following C.C.F. candidates were successful.

Federal Parliament: James S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg North Centre (Manitoba); Abraham A. Heaps, Winnipeg North (Manitoba); Angus MacInnis, Vancouver East (British Columbia); J. S. Taylor, Nanaimo (British Columbia); C. G. MacNeil, Vancouver North, (British Columbia); M. J. Coldwell, Rosetown-Biggan (Saskatchewan); Rev. T. C. Douglas, Weyburn (Saskatchewan).

Provincial Legislatures: British Columbia—E. D. Winch, Burnaby; R. B. Swailes, Delta; E. Bakewell, Mackenzie; Mrs. R. B. Steeves, North Vancouver; J. Price, Vancouver East; H. W. Winch, Vancouver East; R. Connell, Victoria. Ontario—Samuel Lawrence, Hamilton East.

OTHER LABOUR OR FARMER-LABOUR MEMBERS

Labour or Farmer-Labour candidates were elected as follows: British Columbia—Thomas A. Uphill, Fernie; Saskatchewan—A. J. Macauley, Cut Knife; H. H. Kemper, Gull Lake; L. H. Hantleman, Kindersley; Clarence Stork, Shaunavon; George H. Williams, Wadena.

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS ENDORSING LABOUR CANDIDATES

Besides the activities of the previously mentioned political parties, the election of labour candidates to municipal councils, school boards, etc., is promoted by these and other organizations, the candidature of such labour representatives being in many instances endorsed by trades and labour councils and similar non-political labour bodies.

In previous reports on Labour Organization in Canada, reference has been made to the Communist Party of Canada, the political organization of the Communist movement in the Dominion. Following court decisions in 1931, declaring the Communist Party of Canada an unlawful organization under Section 98 of the Criminal Code, candidates advocating similar radical, social and political policies have been nominated under the name "United Front."

CANADIAN LABOUR DEFENSE LEAGUE

The objects of the Canadian Labour Defense League, which was formed in 1925, are to provide legal defense for all workers arrested and prosecuted for any form of working class activity, to provide support for the families of prisoners, and to stand for freedom of speech, assembly and organization for the working class.

The third national convention of the Canadian Labour Defense League was held in Toronto, on October 19-20, 1935, with 47 accredited delegates and 26 fraternal delegates present. In speaking on the organizational status of the League, the secretary of the Publicity and Educational Department stated that "some improvement can be recorded since the last Plenum, the membership, on the basis of dues stamps sold, being somewhat in advance of what it was at the time of the last Plenum. Reports from the Districts indicate a membership of 14,000. However, the sale of dues stamps would indicate a much smaller number. Obviously this discrepancy between reported membership and dues stamps sold is a very serious matter." Another delegate reporting on the situation in Montreal stated that "at the present time there are 454 members in the French-Canadian branch of the Canadian Labour Defense League, 397 who have paid their dues to date."

The National Executive Committee, which consisted of twenty-four elected representatives, met the day following the convention, and re-elected A. E. Smith as general secretary for another term. The headquarters of the League are located at Room 102, 331 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ont.

THE WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

The Workers' Educational Association of Ontario, which has branches in the larger cities of the province and is composed of working men and others, was established to provide higher non-technical education, such as that available to students at the various universities. Its officers include working men and university professors, and it receives financial support from labour organizations and universities.

The movement originated in the Workers' Educational Association of Great Britain, established in 1903, and extended its activities to various other countries throughout the world. The first branch to be formed in Canada was at Toronto, in 1918. In the centres where branches are established classes are formed and lectures given on social and economic problems, literature, etc. Similar branches to the one in Toronto have since been established in Ontario and other provinces.

An organization known as the Labour Educational Association of Ontario is referred to in Chapter VIII, Federations of Trade Unions.

I. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA

American Federation of Labor Issues Charters to Central organizations and to Certain Local Unions—Plan of Organization—Demand for Establishment of Industrial Form—Aims and Objects—Revenue—Departments of the Federation—International Craft Organizations—Eighty International Organizations Extend Jurisdiction into Canada.

With a large part of the trade union membership of Canada, the majority of those belonging to international organizations, recognizing the American Federation of Labor as the head of the trade union movement on the North American continent, it is as in the past considered fitting in a report dealing with labour organizations in the Dominion to make reference to the central body with which Canadian trade unionists are thus associated. Besides issuing charters of affiliation to central organizing bodies, the Federation also grants charters to local unions of certain classes of wage-earners over whom no other organization claims jurisdiction. A number of these directly chartered local unions are operating in Canada. When the membership of such bodies becomes sufficiently numerous a central organization may be established, the members of the craft concerned being directly transferred, and the new main body so formed becomes an affiliate of the Federation. The staff of organizers of the Federation are constantly assisting in instituting new unions either as branches of affiliated central bodies or as units under its own control. The plan of organization of the American Federation of Labor, which is a voluntary grouping of self-governing bodies, all having complete autonomy over the craftsmen covered by their respective charters, is established on a scale which its affiliates consider to be adequate to meet the present requirements of the organized workers. During the past few years there have been presented at the annual conventions, proposals that the Federation give countenance to a system of industrial unionism whereby the workers in a particular industry would be grouped in one organization, but these proposals have been defeated. A more persistent demand for the industrial form of organization was made at the fifty-fifth annual convention of the Federation held in Atlantic City, October 7-19, 1935, when thirteen resolutions were submitted calling for the setting up of industrial unions to replace existing national and international unions. Nine other resolutions dealt with the issuing of a charter establishing an industrial union for a specific industry. A majority and minority reports were submitted by members of the Committee on Resolutions, and after a discussion which lasted two sessions, the minority report was defeated on a roll call vote, 10,933 for and 18,024 against. Although the American Federation is an exponent of organization on craft lines, it does not object to the amalgamation of those unions composed of closely allied trades, such action being given approval when the organizations involved voluntarily desire to amalgamate. The constitution of the Federation provides for the establishment of departments through which organizations of kindred trades are brought together to deal with matters pertaining to their respective industries, charters being issued also to state federations and local trades and labour councils. The Federation and its various departments endeavour to adjust differences which arise between affiliated organizations on questions of jurisdiction, and in most instances the decisions arrived at are respected.

The American Federation of Labor has been most active in promoting legislation intended for the betterment of the working conditions of that part of its membership located in the United States, and has on many occasions rendered both moral and financial assistance to affiliated organizations in their effort to secure improved trade conditions.

For many years past it has been the practice of the American Federation of Labor to exchange fraternal delegates with the British Trades Union Congress and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in a subsequent chapter). The Federation acknowledges the last named as the head of international trade unionism in the Dominion, so far as legislative matters are concerned, and pays a per capita tax to the Congress on the membership of its chartered federal labour unions (those bodies over which no international craft organization claims jurisdiction) located in Canada. The authority of the American Federation of Labor to deal with trade matters as they affect international organizations on the North American continent is fully conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which accepts without question the decisions rendered by the Federation. The Congress has assisted in such judgments being respected by refusing to accept per capita or to seat at annual conventions delegates from organizations which had refused to obey the instructions of the Federation. On occasion, however, the Congress has permitted the affiliation of the Canadian membership of international organizations, notwithstanding that they had been suspended by the A.F. of L.

The more important international labour organizations, including the railroad brotherhoods whose members are employed in engine and train service, have local branches in Canada. While most of the international labour organizations operating in the Dominion are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, the railroad brotherhoods mentioned above are not so identified. Most of the central bodies affiliated with the A.F. of L. are known as craft unions, although some of them, such as the miners, brewery workers and the street railway employees are of an industrial character, embracing in their membership nearly if not all of the workmen employed in the respective industries. Most of the international organizations maintain in the Dominion resident vice-presidents or other officials for the purpose of looking after the interests of their Canadian membership and of reporting to their respective headquarters on trade conditions and the operations of their local branch unions in Canada, while some maintain accounts with Canadian banks through which their financial transactions in the Dominion are conducted. These officials keep in close touch with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body renders assistance when required in promoting the cause of the various international labour bodies operating in the Dominion.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The American Federation of Labor or Organized Trades and Labour Unions of the United States and Canada, as originally named, was founded in Pittsburg, Pa., in September, 1881. Its present name was chosen in 1886.

As its name implies, the organization is a federated body, and includes in its membership most of the important international unions. In addition to issuing charters to national and international organizations and trade departments, charters are also issued to state federations, city central councils, and such other local trade and federal unions as do not fall within the jurisdiction of any existing international bodies.

The aims and objects of the American Federation, as set forth in the constitution, are as follows:—

1. The object of this federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local trade and labour unions, and closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labour unions in every city, and the further combinations of such bodies into state, territorial or provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.
2. The establishment of national and international trade unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.
3. The establishment of departments composed of national or international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry, and which departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.
4. An American federation of all national and international trade unions to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour.
5. To aid and encourage the labour press of America.

PRINCIPLES OF THE FEDERATION

The Platform of principles of the federation contains the following declarations:—

1. The abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime.
2. Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.
3. Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of injunction process in labour disputes.
4. A work day of not more than eight hours in the twenty-four hour day.
5. A strict recognition of not over eight hours per day on all federal, state or municipal work, and not less than the prevailing per diem wage rate of the class of employment in the vicinity where the work is performed.
6. Release from employment one day in seven.
7. The abolition of the contract system of public work.
8. The municipal ownership of public utilities.
9. The abolition of the sweat-shop system.
10. Sanitary inspection of factory, workshop, mine and home.
11. Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.
12. The nationalization of telegraph and telephone.
13. The passage of anti-child labour laws in states where they do not exist and rigid defence of them where they have been enacted into law.
14. Woman suffrage co-equal with man suffrage.
15. Suitable and plentiful playgrounds, for children in all cities.

16. The initiative and referendum and the imperative mandate and right of recall.
17. Continued agitation for the public bath system in all cities.
18. Qualification in permits to build of all cities and towns that there shall be bathrooms and bathroom attachments in all houses or compartments used for habitation.
19. We favour a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the Government, with such regulations and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

The American Federation of Labor maintains a staff of regular organizers, one of whom is resident in Canada. There are also many volunteer organizers, a number of whom are located in the Dominion.

The constitution permits the granting of a charter of affiliation to only one central organization of a particular trade or calling, no recognition being given to dual national or international unions, i.e., bodies covering the same calling, unless the written consent is given of the existing affiliated unions whose jurisdiction is involved.

The revenue of the Federation is derived from a per capita tax upon the fully paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, and on a varying scale, as follows: (a) from international or national trade unions, one cent per month; (b) from local trade unions and federal labour unions chartered direct by the Federation, 35 cents per month (12½ cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout involving such local or federal union); (c) from city central and state bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly. Levies of one cent per member per week may be made on all affiliated unions for a period not exceeding ten weeks in any one year to assist in the support of an affiliated national or international union engaged in a protracted strike or lockout. Local trade unions and federal labour unions, chartered direct, are also required to forward to the Federation 25 per cent of the total initiation fee received by the local union, which in no case shall be less than $1.

In the development of its organization the American Federation of Labor has established departments covering four leading groups of industries, viz., building trades, metal trades, railroad employees, and union label trades. Each department, which comprises organizations affiliated with the Federation, has power to manage and finance its own business. These departments are charged with watching the interest of the workers in the industries represented and may initiate or assist movements, the aim of which is to promote the welfare of such workers.

Local councils of the departments are in operation in various cities, and the union branches of these respective trades are thus brought together for joint action, their conduct of course must be in conformity with the general policy of the American Federation of Labor. Each department is entitled to send a delegate to the annual conventions of the Federation. The mining trades department, which came into existence on July 8, 1912, was dissolved on July 1, 1922.

A proposal submitted to the 1935 convention of the American Federation for the establishment of a department of food industry employees was referred to the executive council.

There are nineteen organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor who are eligible to participate in the business of the Building Trades Department, and according to the latest report received, the combined membership of these bodies is 866,185. The Building Trades Department also has in affiliation a number of state and local building trades councils, 12 of which are located in Canadian cities.

The Metal Trades Department has in affiliation sixteen international organizations, the approximate affiliated membership of these being 553,000. There are 47 local and 2 district councils in connection with this Department, but none are located in the Dominion.

The Railway Employees Department has nine international organizations in affiliation, with an approximate membership of 462,600. According to the latest report, there were 135 railroad system federations under charter, four of which cover employees on the following Canadian railways: Canadian National Railways; Canadian Pacific; Northern Alberta; Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. Division No. 4, embracing the shop mechanics employed on all Canadian lines, also operates under charter from the Railway Employees Department.

According to the latest report received in the Department, the Union Label Trades Department had 38 international organizations in affiliation with an approximate membership of 230,000. There were also a number of local label leagues under charter, of which six are located in the following Canadian cities: Cap de la Madeleine, Que.; Montreal, Que.; Hamilton, Ont.; Kitchener, Ont.; Toronto, Ont.; Vancouver, B.C.

At each convention in addition to others, a committee on adjustment is appointed for the purpose of investigating and endeavouring to bring about settlements of jurisdictional disputes between unions which have not been adjusted through other agencies, and in the majority of cases amicable adjustments are reached.

Particulars as to membership together with the names of the chief officers of the American Federation of Labor are recorded in Chapter XV.—Organizations of Workers Throughout the World.

INTERNATIONAL CRAFT ORGANIZATIONS

With but few exceptions the organizations operating in Canada and the United States are what are commonly known as craft unions, 109 of which are in direct affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. In addition to these there are a number of other labour organizations operating on the North American continent which are not affiliated with the A. F. of L. Chief of these are the railroad brotherhoods, which include employees engaged in engine and train service, and which comprise one of the most important labour groups. The list which appears in Chapter XVIII, Table 3, contains the names of those bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, as well as those of other organizations of which information has been received in the department, the total number being 127.

Besides the organizations referred to in this chapter there are a number of labour bodies operating on this continent, but as they did not make returns to the Department, and because they are not considered important factors in the labour movement owing to the fact that their activity is confined to a very small area, their names are not included in this report.

During the past year, the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America, the International Pocketbook Workers' Union of the United States of America and Canada, and the United Slate, Tile and Composition Roofers, Damp and Waterproof Workers' Association have re-established one or more local unions in Canada and are therefore included in the list appearing in Chapter XVIII, table 1. The one local of the Coopers' International Union of North America located in the Dominion has passed out of existence, and as a result this organization is dropped from the list. The One Big Union, for many years shown in the international group, has been transferred to the Canadian section for the reason that the only local in the United States in affiliation has ceased to function.

Of the 127 organizations whose names appear in Chapter XVIII, table 3, 80 have extended their jurisdiction into Canada by establishing one or more branches or having members resident in the Dominion. The American Federation of Labor has also granted charters to 5 local unions in Canada, there being no central organization covering the work people so organized, makes 81 international craft unions with Canadian affiliations one more than was recorded in 1934. Of the international craft organizations operating in Canada 6 are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The Industrial Workers of the World an international industrial union, but having no connection with the labour movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor, is discussed in a subsequent chapter.

Fifty-eight of the affiliates of the American Federation of Labor as well as the Federation itself have given recognition to the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada as the head of the internationally organized labour movement of the Dominion by affiliating the whole of their Canadian membership with that body. The Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen which, though having been suspended from the American Federation of Labor in 1928 over a question of jurisdiction, maintains its affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada for its Canadian members, making sixty international organizations identified with the Canadian body.

II. TRADES AND LABOUR CONGRESS OF CANADA

Organization Dates Its Origin from 1873—Has Met Regularly Every Year Since 1886—Chief Function—Constitution Changed in 1934—Objects of the Congress—Representation and Membership—Representatives at the International Labour Conference—Attendance at 1935 Convention—Membership, Receipts and Expenditures for Past Twenty Years—Officers—Provincial Executive Committees—Fraternal Delegates.

As stated in the preceding chapter the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is the recognized head of the international labour movement of the Dominion, the greater part of whose membership is derived from organizations operating in Canada and the United States. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada dates its origin from 1873, when a convention of trade union representatives was held at Toronto. The Canadian Labour Union, as it was then called, held its second convention in Ottawa in 1874, and through the courtesy of the then Premier, the Right Honourable Sir John A. MacDonald, the sessions were held in what was known as Room 16 of the House of Commons. At this meeting the name was changed to the Canadian Congress. In 1875 the Congress met in the City of St. Catharines. Although Toronto was chosen as the meeting place for 1876, there was no session held that year, and not for seven years afterwards, when a convention was held in Toronto on December 26, 1883, with 47 delegates present, 33 of whom represented trade unions, 12 represented Knights of Labour Assemblies and two represented the Toronto Trades and Labour Council, under whose auspices the conference was called. The next meeting which was attended by 109 delegates, was also held in Toronto, the opening session taking place on September 14, 1886, and from which time the Congress has met regularly each year, the last convention held in Halifax, September 16-20, 1935, being recorded as the fifty-first. The present title of the organization was selected at the convention held in London, Ont., in 1895. Knights of Labour Assemblies were excluded from affiliation by the amending of the constitution in 1902. National unions were also excluded where there were internationals of the same craft in existence.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada unconditionally accepts the prerogative of the American Federation of Labor in adjudicating upon trade union and jurisdictional controversies, and concedes, also, to the Federation the authority to charter federal labour unions in Canada other than those composed of public service employees, and for which there is no international craft organization. While the chief function of the Congress is to speak for organized labour in legislative matters, financial and other assistance has been rendered on occasions to organized workers identified with the international trade union movement.

Previous to 1934 the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada issued charters only to trades and labour councils, provincial federations and to unions which were not eligible for membership in any of the existing recognized international or national organizations, including those composed of public service employees. At the convention held at Toronto in 1934 the constitution was amended so as to permit the issuing of two classes of charters for local unions, viz., (a) Those issued as federal units covering employees engaged in industrial activities, and such charters will only be issued when application for same has been approved by the local trades and labour council, if one is in existence; (b) Civic employees units.

OBJECTS OF THE CONGRESS

The objects of the Trades Congress as adopted by the 1921 convention are as follows:—

- (a) To encourage and form such organizations of workers as conform to its rules and regulations;
- (b) To establish city or district central councils based upon the strict recognition of the autonomy of each affiliated organization and the promotion and advancement of such bodies;
- (c) To establish and maintain a congress with suitable headquarters at Ottawa and subsidiary Executive Committees or Federations of Labour in each of the provinces of Canada for the purpose of assisting each other;
- (d) To aid and encourage the sale of union labelled goods;
- (e) To influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour and to secure legislation in the interests of the working people;
- (f) To further the spirit of international trade unionism;
- (g) Generally for such purposes as may best advance the interests of working people.

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES

The platform of principles, as revised by the executive council following the 1931 convention, is as follows:—

1. Free education and compulsory school attendance.
2. Maximum legal working day of eight hours and establishment of five-day week.
3. Holidays with pay.

REPRESENTATION AND MEMBERSHIP

The basis of representation of affiliated bodies at annual or other conventions is: From local branch unions in Canada of international and national organizations and trade unions directly chartered by the Congress: One delegate for the first 100 members or less, and one for each additional 100 members or the majority fraction thereof; international and national organizations which have affiliated their entire membership in the Dominion are entitled to one additional delegate, who must be elected from their Canadian membership. Trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour are entitled to three delegates each. Article III of the constitution of the Trades and Labour Congress governing membership and charters is as follows:—

Sec. 1.—The membership of the Trades and Labour Congress shall consist of such trades and labour bodies as are hereinafter defined and conform to its rules and regulations.

Sec. 2.—Any international union holding a charter from the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to affiliate its entire Canadian membership; and any local unit in Canada of an international union, chartered by the American Federation of Labor, which is not so affiliated, shall be entitled to direct membership in this Congress.

Sec. 3.—Charters or certificates of affiliation, bearing the signature of the president and secretary-treasurer of the Congress and its seal, may be granted by the executive council of the Congress to any body of workers in Canada who are not eligible for membership in a recognized international or national union.

Sec. 4.—The Congress shall form and charter Trades and Labour Councils and Provincial Federations of Labour, composed of such organizations as are entitled to membership in the Congress.

Sec. 5.—No international or national union other than those already enumerated in sections 2, 3, and 4 shall be admitted to membership except by two-thirds vote of the annual convention of this Congress, but in no case shall any organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with that of an international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.

Sec. 6.—The fee for a charter and supplies for Provincial Federations of Labour, Trades and Labour Councils and such labour unions as may be formed and chartered direct by this Congress shall be $10, and each organization so chartered shall be supplied with an official seal.

Sec. 7.—The executive council shall have power, apart from any other power enumerated in this constitution, by a majority vote of its members, given either at a meeting of the council, or otherwise, to suspend from membership any affiliated or chartered body which in the opinion of the executive has violated either the letter or spirit of the constitution, or which has, or the officers of which have (a) encouraged or advocated secession from international unions or assisted in forming independent or dual organizations; (b) refused to join or affiliate with an international union of its trade or calling when so ordered by the executive. Such suspension shall debar any organization from all rights and benefits of membership in this Congress until the next annual convention, when the suspension may be made permanent and the charter revoked or affiliation cancelled by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote. Any organization may also be suspended from membership or its charter revoked or its membership cancelled upon a motion introduced at any regular convention and adopted by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote.

The revenue of the Congress, besides the fee charged for charters supplied to such bodies as are entitled to them, is derived from a tax of 18 cents per member per year from international and national organizations and from unions chartered direct by the Congress, 36 cents per member from trades and labour councils, and a lump payment of $10 per annum from provincial federations of labour. The Congress owns the building in Ottawa in which the head office is located, and which is valued at $40,000, the management being vested in a board of trustees composed of the executive council.

REPRESENTATIVES AT THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

On the nomination of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, Mr. P. M. Draper, secretary-treasurer, and Mr. R. J. Tallon, vice-president, attended the nineteenth session of the International Labour Conference held at Geneva, Switzerland, June 4-25, 1935, as delegate and technical adviser respectively representing the workpeople of Canada.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1935 CONVENTION

At the fifty-first annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada held at Halifax, N.S., September 16-20, 1935, credentials were received for 215 delegates. Of these 43 represented international organizations which have affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership with the Congress, 2 represented provincial federations, 27 represented trades and labour councils, 141 represented 96 local branch unions, and 2 were fraternal delegates, representing the British Trades Union Congress and the American Federation of Labor.

The report of the secretary-treasurer, which named the international and national organizations, as well as the federations, trades and labour councils and local unions which had paid per capita, showed that the total membership of the Congress at the close of the fiscal year (August 31, 1935) was 105,998, comprised in 1,534 local unions, indicating an increase in members of 2,574, and also an increase of 11 in the number of unions. The secretary, however, pointed out that "in normal times approximately 25 per cent should be added to the reported membership to include those who, while still actual members of affiliated organizations, are relieved because of unemployment and other causes from paying their regular contributions and as a result of this no per capita tax is remitted to the Congress on these members." The international and national organizations in affiliation with the Congress are indicated thus () in the tables in a subsequent chapter giving the membership of the respective unions.

The total receipts for the fiscal year, including balance on hand, amounted to $26,040.35; expenditures totalled $21,531.35, leaving a balance of $4,509. The secretary-treasurer also submitted a report of the trustees of the Congress headquarters, the figures for which were included in the above totals, which showed receipts of $2,880, and expenditures for maintenance of $1,580.35, a surplus of $1,299.65.

The following table shows the total paid up membership and receipts and expenditures of the Congress for the past twenty years:—

The figures for the membership of the Congress as compiled from the returns received from the affiliated bodies are 19,781 greater than that reported to the convention, the explanation being that not all the organizations supplied the paid-up membership but included all members carried on their books, for some of whom no per capita was paid. In addition to the affiliated membership of central organizations the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada had 81 directly chartered local unions with a membership of 7,515, which number is included in the total membership of 125,779.

III. ALL-CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

Inception of Organization—Constitution—Purposes of the Congress—Membership and Representation—Accepts Industrial Unionism—Attendance at the 1935 Convention—Membership—Officers of the Congress.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927 replaced the Canadian Federation of Labour, a body formed in 1902 by representatives of national and independent unions and Knights of Labour Assemblies. As a result of an increasing agitation for a larger and more embracing organization, representatives of the Canadian Federation of Labour and other national and independent bodies held a preliminary meeting in Toronto, Ont., on November 22-23, 1926. At this conference it was decided to hold a convention in Montreal on March 16, 1927, and committees were appointed to send out the call and to draft a constitution. On February 4, 1927, an invitation over the signatures of C. J. Whitley, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, and M. M. MacLean, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, was extended to all national and independent unions in Canada to send representatives to the proposed meeting.

The convention, which opened in Montreal on March 16, 1927, was attended by 107 delegates representing the following eight organizations: Canadian Federation of Labour; Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; One Big Union; Mine Workers' Union of Canada; Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; Canadian Electrical Trades Union; Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, and the Canadian Federation of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers. The meeting was presided over by two chairmen—D. Giroux (of the Canadian Federation of Labour) and A. R. Mosher (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees).

CONSTITUTION

The conference adopted a resolution establishing the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which is embodied in the preamble to the constitution, as follows:—

Whereas, we the representatives of national and independent unions in Canada, meeting in convention in the City of Montreal, Quebec, on the 16th to the 19th of March, 1927, are convinced that—

(a) the Canadian labour movement must be freed from the reactionary influence of United States-controlled unions;

(b) Canadian workers require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard;

(c) while the workers, under the present system cannot obtain the full value of their labour, it is nevertheless necessary to strive at all times to procure higher real wages and better conditions of labour;

(d) it is necessary to promote among the workers a thorough understanding of working-class economics;

Therefore, be it resolved, that a central body composed of the national and independent unions of Canada be here established to give expression to these aims and objects.

PURPOSES OF THE CONGRESS

The purposes of the All-Canadian Congress, as set forth in Article II of the constitution, are as follows:—

Article II.—PURPOSES.—The Congress shall promote the interests of its affiliated organizations and strive to improve the economic and social conditions of the workers by:

(a) That organization of the workers in autonomous bodies for economic action, i.e., organization in the industrial field.

(b) Assisting the workers, through education, to realize the necessity of working-class political action.

(c) Furthering such legislation as shall be of immediate benefit to the workers, and which tends to increase their social and political power.

The Canadian Federation of Labour, having decided to merge its identity with the new congress, a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs, and in due course passed out of existence.

The head office of the Congress is in Ottawa, where in 1930 the organization opened new offices in the building of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

The All-Canadian Congress has its official monthly paper published under the title of Canadian Unionist.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

MEMBERSHIP AND REPRESENTATION

The membership is derived from (a) affiliated national unions, and (b) chartered independent local unions. Charters are also issued to central councils composed of delegates from national or independent unions identified with the Congress, but such bodies have no representation at conventions of the Congress, neither are they required to pay per capita tax. The representation at annual or special conventions is as follows: (a) affiliated national unions, two delegates representing the general executive board and one delegate from each local unit, (b) independent local unions, one delegate each.

ACCEPTS INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1935 CONVENTION

The fifth convention of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was convened at Montreal, Que., May 7, 1935. According to the reports submitted by the affiliated organizations and that obtained from departmental records, the total membership of the Congress was 54,025. In addition to the affiliated membership of Canadian central bodies, the All-Canadian Congress of Labour had 53 directly chartered local unions with a membership of 4,852, which number is included in the above total.

IV. ONE BIG UNION

Established in 1919—Conference of Delegates of the Western Membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada Called to Formulate a Progressive Policy—Recommendations—Preamble to the Constitution—Membership—Organization Ceases to be International in Character—Chief Officers.

The One Big Union, whose abbreviated name is the O.B.U., was established in March, 1919, at a meeting held in Calgary, Alta. A number of delegates from trade unions in Western Canada, whose proposals submitted to the 1918 convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada failed to receive the endorsement of that body, decided that they would recommend to the labour bodies of the four western provinces the desirability of holding a delegate conference previous to the next convention of the Congress. The purpose of this conference was to give the western membership an opportunity to formulate a progressive policy and by such united action on their part would secure support from the eastern delegates. The British Columbia Federation of Labour, a body then under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada but which has since passed out of existence, sponsored the conference proposal. In March, 1919, the conference met and was attended by 237 delegates from the four western provinces and two from Ontario. Although it had been previously stated that the action of the western members was not intended as a secessionist movement, the second resolution adopted favoured the immediate re-organization of the workers along industrial lines, a policy contrary to that set forth in the constitution of the T. & L. C. Further action decided upon was (1) recommending that the existing branches of international organizations should sever their connection with such bodies, (2) that a referendum on the question be submitted to the entire Canadian trade union membership, (3) the submission to the membership of the proposed plan of the new organization for ratification. Coupled with the ballot on these questions was one calling for a vote on a general strike to take place on June 1, 1919, to establish the six-hour working day. On the report of the policy committee the new organization became known as the One Big Union. A second meeting of those responsible for the establishing of the O.B.U. was held in Calgary on June 11, 1919, when the constitution, as tentatively agreed upon at the March meeting, with certain amendments, was ratified. The preamble to the constitution, setting forth the desire "to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs," is as follows:—

Modern industrial society is divided into two classes, those who possess and not produce, and those who produce and not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity, there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible, and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labour power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labour power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.

As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands; as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labour power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self-defence, they are further compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether they seek it or not.

The One Big Union, therefore, seeks to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs and calls upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex, or craft into a workers' organization, so that they may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours of work, etc., and prepare ourselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by production for use.

Fuller details of the inception of the One Big Union were published in this report for the years 1919 and 1920.

During the year a number of disputes involving members of the One Big Union occurred in the City of Winnipeg, but with the assistance of conciliation officers of the Department of Labour a satisfactory settlement was reached in most if not all of these disputes and without serious loss of time resulting.

MEMBERSHIP

At the close of 1919, the year the organization was established, the membership was reported at 41,150 comprised in 101 local units. In the intervening years the O.B.U. has lost a considerable number of members as well as locals, the membership, at the close of 1935, as reported by the general secretary, being 24,055, comprised in 53 local units. This is a gain of 5 locals and 475 members as compared with the figures for 1934. During the past year the only local unit of the One Big Union in the United States, located at San Francisco, Cal., ceased to function, and as a result the name of the organization has been transferred to the Canadian group.

The two central councils of the One Big Union are listed in Chapter XI (Trades and Labour Councils).

OFFICERS OF THE ONE BIG UNION

The chief officers of the general executive board of the One Big Union are: Chairman, J. H. Duff, 154 Aberdeen Ave., Winnipeg, Man.; General Secretary, R. B. Russell, 54 Adelaide St., Winnipeg, Man.

V. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

An Advocate of the Abolition of the Wage System—Principles of the I. W. W. as Set Forth in the Preamble to the Constitution—I. W. W. in Canada—First Canadian I. W. W. Conference—Powers of Canadian Administration—Membership—Canadian Officers—General Secretary-Treasurer.

Standing in a position directly opposite to the trade union movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor is an organization under the title of the Industrial Workers of the World; commonly referred to as the I.W.W. The organization which was formed in 1905, claims to be the advocate of what it terms revolutionary industrial unionism and has as an objective the abolition of the wage system.

Among the founders of the I.W.W. were Eugene V. Debs, William D. Haywood and Daniel DeLeon, all of whom are now deceased.

The membership besides metal miners who were chiefly members of the Western Federation of Miners (the mining department of the I.W.W.) consisted mainly of unskilled and migratory workers. Originally the I.W.W. was designed to be a political as well as an industrial organization, but owing to the action taken in a Colorado election in 1906 by a section of the membership, a split in the organization occurred. At the fourth convention in 1908 the political plank in the I.W.W. platform was discarded and those who opposed this action were expelled. The expelled members subsequently formed what for some years was known as the Detroit faction of the I.W.W., the original platform of the parent body being adhered to. In 1915 the Detroit faction became known as the Workers' International Industrial Union, but in 1924, by a vote of the members the organization was dissolved.

PRINCIPLES OF THE I.W.W.

The principles of the I.W.W., as set forth in the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1908, are as follows:—

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among the millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interest of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto: "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system."

It is the historic mission of the working class to do away with capitalism. The army of production must be organized, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

The early history of the organization was recorded in previous issues of this report.

I.W.W. IN CANADA

As previously stated, one of the early affiliates of the Industrial Workers of the World was the Western Federation of Miners, which had a number of branches in Canada. Local branches of the I.W.W. comprising workers other than miners were also established in certain localities in Western Canada. In 1910 the miners organization withdrew its affiliation but the other local branches continued to operate. These locals gradually passed out of existence, the last Canadian branch disappearing in 1915, although adherents of the I.W.W. were known to be located in various parts of the Dominion. No move appears to have been made to re-establish branches of the organization in Canada until 1922, when the Vancouver branch of Lumber Workers' Industrial Union, No. 120, was formed. The establishment of this branch resulted from the affiliation of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an independent body, with the Red International of Labour Unions, the headquarters of which was at Moscow, U.S.S.R. A certain number of members of the Lumber Workers' union objected to this affiliation and some of these became identified with the I.W.W. and later formed the Vancouver branch. Since then other branches of the organization have been established in the western provinces and Ontario.

FIRST CANADIAN I.W.W. CONFERENCE

With the increase in the number of branches of the I.W.W. in the Dominion an agitation was started, the purpose of which was the setting up of a Canadian administration. Early in 1932 a referendum vote of the membership was taken on the question, and as a result the Canadian administration was established, the powers conferred being as follows:—

(a) The officials of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W., shall be a secretary-treasurer, who shall be officially designated "Canadian secretary-treasurer," and an executive board which shall be officially designated "Canadian Executive Board." The duties and powers of the above-named officials shall bear the same relation to the Canadian membership as the present general officials of the I.W.W. under the present constitution, with such exceptions as may be hereafter designated or adopted by general conventions of the I.W.W., or emergency rulings of the general administration of the I.W.W.

(b) The Canadian administration shall have the power to determine all initiation fees, dues and assessments under its jurisdiction.

(c) The Canadian administration shall be empowered to publish literature and establish a press. All literature and press policies shall be sanctioned by the general administration of the I.W.W.

The Canadian administration is under the supervision of the general administration, whose head office is in Chicago, and from whom the Canadian administration shall purchase all supplies, due books and due stamps and shall pay 2 cents per due stamp and 15 cents for cash due book, plus duty and shipping charges, but the general administration may at its discretion authorize the Canadian section to manufacture such supplies as are needed.

With the object of bringing back into the organization unemployed members and of retaining the present out-of-work members, it was decided to reduce the initiation fee to twenty cents and the monthly dues to five cents, and those who are employed to pay the initiation fee of $1 and monthly dues of twenty-five cents. For the purpose of raising funds to conduct organization work, a twenty-five cent stamp was decided upon which may be sold to all persons whether or not they are members of the I.W.W.

MEMBERSHIP OF I.W.W.

The membership claimed by the I.W.W. at the close of 1905, the year of its inception, was 400,000. No return for 1935 having been received from the central organization, the membership as reported in 1934 is repeated. The report of the Canadian administration shows a membership of 4,200 comprised in 12 local branches, a gain of 45 members and 1 local.

CANADIAN OFFICERS

The chief officers of the executive board of the Canadian administration are:—Chairman, Elmer Brundige, 355 Wiley St., Port Arthur, Ont.; Secretary, William McPhee, 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont.

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

The general secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Workers of the World is Joseph Wagner, 2422 North Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

VI. NATIONAL CATHOLIC UNIONS

Beginning of Sectarian Labour Bodies in Quebec—Formation of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada—Aims and Principles—A Chaplain for Each Catholic Body—Federations and Secretariats—Attendance at the 1935 Convention—Canada only British Country Having Catholic Unions—International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Numerical Strength of Catholic Unions in Canada—Chief Officers—List of Unions, with Names and Addresses of Chief Officers.

There was one Catholic union in existence prior to 1902, the year in which the Canadian Federation of Labour was established following the action of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in denying recognition to Knights of Labour Assemblies and national unions where international organizations of the same craft existed. This Catholic union which was composed of shoe workers, in Quebec City, had accepted the social doctrine of the Roman Catholic Church and admitted a chaplain (a member of the clergy), this course being adopted in 1901 following the adjustment of a dispute in the shoe industry by the Archbishop of the diocese. Some years later many other national unions were formed in the province of Quebec, all of which accepted for their guidance the declaration of Pope Leo XIII, who on May 15, 1891, issued an encyclical on "The Conditions of the Working Classes," the provisions of which were subsequently proclaimed by Pope Pius X as fundamental rules for workmen's associations. With the increased number of national unions agitation arose for the formation of a central organization for the purpose of co-ordinating the activities of the various units. Accordingly a meeting of delegates from 27 of these unions was held in Quebec City in September, 1918. A report presented to the meeting showed that there were in existence 41 National and Catholic unions (bodies to which none but adherents of the Roman Catholic faith are admitted) and 17 other national unions, which were termed neutral, membership being open to workers of all denominations. These latter unions, it is understood, are not now in existence, their disappearance possibly being accounted for in part by the fact that, though National Catholic Unions are designed ostensibly for adherents of the Roman Catholic faith, provision is made for the admittance of non-Catholics as associate members, who may vote, but are not eligible for office. When non-Catholic membership of a union reaches fifty they may form a non-Catholic section of the National Catholic body and elect their own officers.

FORMATION OF THE FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

Other conventions of the National Catholic Unions were held regularly each year, and in 1921, at the meeting held in Hull, with 220 delegates in attendance, a central organization was established under the name Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, and a set of rules adopted. The preparation of the principles of the Federation was referred to the religious authorities, for incorporation in the constitution.

AIM OF THE FEDERATION

The aim of the Federation and the means to secure its fulfilment are set forth in the following sections of the constitution.

Article 3.—The Federation has for its aim to promote and safeguard the general interests of Catholic syndicalism in Canada.

In order to reach this end, the F.C.W.C. proposes:—

1. To definitely establish a general plan according to which Catholic syndicalism in Canada shall be developed, and to pursue the methodical application of the same;
2. To create and maintain in this country a concerted movement of Catholic syndicalism which, while allowing the various groups their autonomy, would bind them by federative bonds, permitting to defend and develop in common the professional, economic, patriotic and religious interests of Catholic workers in Canada;
3. To organize a general propaganda in favour of Catholic syndicalism. This propaganda will be made especially through labour newspapers, salaried organizers and workmen's research clubs;
4. To work out the legislation asked for by the mass of Catholic workers in Canada;
5. To be used as an intermediate agent between the federated groups, whether it is a question of mutual aid or of dispute to be terminated.
6. To represent the federated organizations whenever and in whatever manner the general interest may demand it;

- (a) before the public powers;
- (b) before such institutions or organizations, whether Canadian or foreign, with which it may seem proper to maintain relations;
- 7. To create as they are needed all services recognized to be necessary to the federated organizations;
- 8. To organize or favour all institutions of general interest likely to defend the Catholic workers or to help them;
- 9. The F.C.W.C. can affiliate with no political party whatever.

A CHAPLAIN FOR EACH CATHOLIC BODY

The constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers provides for the appointment of a general chaplain, selected by the religious authorities. The section governing the powers of the chaplain reads as follows:—

The general chaplain is by right a member of all congresses of the federation and of the federal bureau. He may attend the meeting of all committees formed by the federation or send a representative. He exercises, in deliberations, the same rights as those exercised by delegates or members belonging to the congress whereat such discussions take place, and is subject, like them, to the usual rules of procedure.

The chaplain does not vote. The general chaplain may attend the meetings and take part in the proceedings of any organization affiliated with the federation.

The chaplain depends solely, in the exercise of his functions, on the religious authorities by which he was appointed.

The general chaplain has the right to give his personal opinion on any question, like all delegates; but his proper function is to represent the church among the Catholic syndicated workmen. It is for him to state and recall, whenever it is needed, the Catholic principles and doctrines, and he only fills his mission when he asks the congress and the committee to make their resolutions and conduct conform to the Catholic principles and doctrine.

The general chaplain may demand that a resolution which, in his judgment, would affect Catholic morals or the teachings of the church, be submitted to the religious authorities and approved by them before being put in force.

The general chaplain of the federation has charge of the superior interests of the souls, of society and of religion. He is entitled, on the part of the delegates, to all the consideration and respect which are due to the religious authorities which he represents.

Each delegate body and local national Catholic syndicate also has a chaplain, appointed by the religious authorities, whose powers are similar to those of the general chaplain for the Federation of Catholic Workers.

FEDERATIONS AND SECRETARIATS

Like the non-sectarian trade unions the National Catholic Unions of closely allied and particular trades have established federations (delegate bodies referred to in a subsequent chapter of this report). The first secretariat of Catholic syndicates was established in the City of Quebec in 1920, and is designed to have charge of the various matters affecting the activities and development of the local organizations. There are also secretariats in Montreal, Three Rivers, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke, St. Hyacinthe, and the District of Ottawa. The Montreal secretariat publishes an official organ for the National Catholic Unions in its jurisdiction, the title of the publication being La Vie Syndicale. The National Catholic Union movement has city central councils, bodies similar to trades and labour councils, and these are shown in Chapter XI of this report.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1935 CONVENTION

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada has met annually since its formation in 1921. The convention for 1935 was held in the City of Hull (where also was held the inaugural meeting), September 15-17, 1935. According to the report of the secretary the membership was approximately 38,000 and the affiliated organizations numbered 134, comprising 4 federations, 1 general council, 7 central councils, 6 trade councils, 10 study clubs, and 106 individual syndicates. The report also showed that there were 34 new organizations affiliated with the Federation, while two former affiliated bodies were reinstated. The formation of one new federation, the Federation of Barbers and Hairdressers of the Province of Quebec was reported to the convention.

One hundred and fifty delegates representing 135 organizations attended the Hull Convention.

TECHNICAL ADVISOR TO THE GOVERNMENT DELEGATES AT INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

Mr. H. Quevillon, vice-president of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, attended the nineteenth session of the International Labour Conference (League of Nations) held at Geneva, Switzerland, June 4-25, 1935, as technical advisor to the Government delegates.

CANADA ONLY BRITISH COUNTRY HAVING CATHOLIC UNIONS

According to departmental records Canada is the only British country in which trade unions designed to be exclusively for Roman Catholics are in existence, and with only two exceptions all such syndicates are located in the Province of Quebec. Some years ago there were in Great Britain two organizations, the Catholic Federation and the National Conference of Catholic Trade Unionists, whose memberships were composed of Roman Catholics, but in both cases these trade unionists were supposed to confine their activities to defending Roman Catholic interests inside the existing non-sectarian trade unions. It is reported that these organizations made several attempts to function but owing to the fact that the members would not sever their connection with the regular trade unions, no religious difficulty was experienced. Later reports indicate that the two English organizations gradually died out.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

About sixty-five years ago the original Catholic Trade Unions (or Christian Unions as they are called in Europe) were established in Germany. The movement has grown and extended their operation into other countries until now we find central federated bodies in Austria, Belgium, Spain, France, Hungary, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and Jugo-Slavia, as well as in Germany. The various federated bodies and other Christian trade unions, which have a reported membership of approximately 1,500,000, are brought together in the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, an organization which came into being as a result of a meeting of the various interested parties held at The Hague, Holland, in June, 1920. There are also a number of Christian trade internationals operating in Europe, embracing the following classes of workers: Mining and quarrying; railways; transport (other than railways); shipbuilding; engineering, founding and vehicle building; iron and steel and minor metal trades; building, woodworking and furnishing; printing and paper; cotton; textiles (other than cotton); clothing; leather and boot and shoe workers; glass, pottery, chemicals, food, drink, tobacco, brushmaking and distribution; agriculture; public employees; non-manual workers and general workers.

The objects of the confederation are set forth in the by-laws as follows:—

- (a) Defend the workers' interests on the basis of the principles set forth in Article II, in the economic field, and specially in the field of international organizations of labour, wages, working conditions and labour legislation;
- (b) Favour the interests of the organizations of affiliated confederations;
- (c) Carry on propaganda in favour of the Christian syndicalist movement in the various countries where it does not yet exist, and promote the affiliation of organizations on a Christian basis which are not yet affiliated;
- (d) Encourage mutual financial support between the affiliated confederations.

FEDERATION ADOPTS CHRISTIAN PRINCIPLES AS BASIS

Article II of the statutes of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions sets forth that—"The confederation adopts as a basis Christian principles. It therefore affirms that economic and social life implies the collaboration of all children of the same people. It therefore repudiates violence and class strife on the part of the employers as well as on that of the workers. The confederation reckons the present economical and social order is on essential points in contradiction with the Christian spirit. It endeavours to thoroughly modify society in accordance with these principles by following a process of evolution organic and legal. The confederation has above all for its objects the defence of the interests of the workers and employees from a viewpoint of the economic, social and public order conditions through general collaboration."

In addition to the syndicates of Catholic workpeople identified with the Christian Federation of Trade Unions there are also in affiliation unions composed of Protestants. In Switzerland the Christian Syndicates are in great part composed of Protestant workers jointly with Catholic workers. In the Netherlands there are two federations, one composed of Catholic syndicates and the other Protestant unions, and both are in affiliation with the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions.

OFFICERS OF THE FEDERATION

The president of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions is Jules Zirnheld, 2 rue Poussin, Paris, France, and the secretary, P. J. S. Serrarens, Drift 12, Utrecht, Holland.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

In 1921, the year the Federation was established, the membership was approximately 10,000. The reported membership at the close of 1934 was 30,346 comprised in 114 syndicates and 8 study circles. According to the report received from the general secretary the membership at the close of 1935 was 38,000 comprised in 133 syndicates and 7 study circles.

VII. CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

A Slight Decrease in the Number of Organizations Which Confine Their Operations Exclusively to the Dominion—Five Associations of Government Employees in This Group—Outline of the Inception and Objects of the Canadian Organizations.

In this chapter is discussed another important group of Canadian labour bodies whose jurisdiction is confined to the Dominion of Canada. There are 23 organizations included in the group, one less than the number recorded in 1934. Of this number four are composed of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, and one comprises provincial government employees. The latter and one of the first named as well as the National Association of Marine Engineers are affiliates of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in an earlier chapter). Of the remaining bodies in this group 8 are affiliates of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, while 10 are not identified with any organization.

Two central Canadian labour bodies are recorded in this chapter for the first time. They are the Brotherhood of Grain Elevator Employees and the One Big Union, the latter being transferred from the international group. The names of three organizations have been removed from the list, having failed to make any returns, and are therefore presumed non-existent. These are the Canadian Bushmen's Union, Saskatchewan Brotherhood of Steam and Operating Engineers, and the Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association.

The statement following gives certain particulars in regard to the formation and the objects of each of the Canadian central bodies which have not been referred to in earlier chapters:—

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada was established in Montreal on March 17, 1929, by representatives of national and local unions of building construction workers affiliated with or chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. The conference declared that (a) the Canadian workers in the building construction industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry. The Amalgamated Building Workers is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association came into existence in November, 1919, as a result of the Brussels carpet weavers in Guelph, Peterborough and Toronto desiring to have a uniform scale of wages for the trade in Canada. The Guelph weavers were the only ones organized, being local No. 277 of the United Textile Workers of America. As it was claimed that there was no other method by which the trade in Canada could be organized, the Guelph weavers severed their connection with the United Textile Workers and joined with the weavers in Peterborough and Toronto and formed the Canadian association.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants developed from the Amalgamated Postal Workers, which came into existence in September, 1918, as a result of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the strike of the postal employees was conducted in the east and the settlement accepted by the general officers. The original jurisdiction of the Postal Workers, membership in which was open to all post office employees under the rating of a first-class clerk, was from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to Victoria, B.C., and the intention of the promoters was to amalgamate the association of postal clerks, railway mail clerks and letter carriers in the territory named. An application for a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress was not entertained by the last-named body on account of the organization admitting to membership certain local branches of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, an organization already affiliated with the Congress. At the annual convention of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, held in August, 1921, the name was changed to Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership being extended to all employees of the Dominion Government.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta, which is composed of employees of the Provincial Government, was formed on March 19, 1919, with a view, among other things, "to bring about united action and to act on any matter or issue of common interest to the members of the association." In 1923 a vote was taken on the question of the association affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but the proposal was defeated by a vote of 316 in favour to 426 against. In 1925 another vote was taken on the same proposition, with the result that 227 were in favour and 214 against—not a sufficient majority, however, to permit affiliation. In October, 1927, the question of affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress was again submitted to the membership with the following result: for affiliation, 396; against, 142; spoiled ballots, 2, giving a majority of 36 in excess of the required two-thirds. The convention of the Civil Service Association held subsequently ratified the decision and a charter was duly issued by the Trades Congress. The association also decided to affiliate with the Alberta Federation of Labour.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada was organized in Toronto on January 4, 1936. The organization, which declared its jurisdiction to cover all land telegraph, radiotelegraph, telephone and allied workers in Canada and Newfoundland, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. On February 1, 1928, at a meeting in Toronto, the commercial telegraphers of the Canadian National Telegraphs decided to go over in a body to the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees. Later the same class of telegraphers in the employ of the Canadian Pacific did similarly. Subsequently a reorganization of the Electrical Communication Workers took place, the former Broker and Leased Wire Divisions forming an independent association, which, as above mentioned, in 1931 ceased to function. The preamble to the constitution of the Electrical Communication Workers sets forth (a) the Canadian workers in the electrical communication industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standards; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry. The main organization consists of an Eastern, and British Columbia District, the latter as well as the first-named district each having two radio units. The Electrical Communication Workers is also affiliated with the International Federation of Radiotelegraphists (London, England).

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union developed from a branch of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers located in Toronto, which in 1920 seceded because it was alleged (a) that the per capita tax was excessive in comparison with benefits received; (b) that a closer form of organization in the electrical industry was necessary, and (c) that the international Brotherhood had been lax in its efforts to organize the trade in the Dominion. Included in the objects of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union are: (1) to organize all workers in the electrical industry; (2) by mutual effort to place the members on a foundation sufficiently strong to prevent any encroachment on trade rights and privileges; (3) to establish an apprentice system and a higher standard of skill; (4) to encourage the formation of schools of instruction for teaching the practical application of electricity and trade education generally; (5) to cultivate feelings of friendship among the men of the craft; (6) to settle all disputes and grievances between employers and employees by arbitration or otherwise; (7) to assist each other in sickness and distress and to secure employment and adequate pay; (8) to regulate the relations between employers and employed; (9) to promote friendly relations with all electrical workers of the world, and by legal and proper means to elevate the moral, intellectual and social conditions of all members. The union is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers is a craft organization, the object of which is mainly educational. The name of the association appeared in earlier issues of this report, but in 1926 it was changed to Mutual Engineers' Beneficial Fund, the new body retaining in the constitution some of the features of the former organization. In 1927 the name was omitted, it being stated that the association was then a purely mutual benefit organization. Some of the former branches of the original association which did not become a part of the beneficial scheme at a conference in London, Ont., on June 28-29, 1929, revived the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers and adopted an amended constitution.

The objects of the association, which was incorporated in May, 1887, are "the elevation and maintenance of the rights of stationary engineers and the recognition of all other business matters in which the engineers in its jurisdiction may be interested or involved." In 1931 the association affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees was formed in Toronto under the title "Brotherhood of Canadian Pacific Express Employees," on March 25, 1918, by a number of the employees of the Dominion Express Company. The Brotherhood was registered on May 23, 1918, by the Department of the Secretary of State, under the provisions of the Trade Unions Act. The object of the Brotherhood is contained in the following section of the rules:—

The object of the Brotherhood shall be to unite in one body, for their mutual protection and benefit, all employees of the Canadian Pacific Express Company, and the membership shall include no one but males of good moral character, 18 years of age and over, exclusively employed by the Canadian Pacific Express Company, except officials. Provided, that no general foreman or chief clerk, although eligible for membership, shall hold office. An agent or master of transportation shall be classed as an official.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters was organized on August 26, 1920, at a conference held in Toronto. The objects of the federation are (1) to organize all fire fighters in the province; (2) to place its members on a higher plane of skill and efficiency; (3) to encourage the formation of local federations; (4) to secure legislation beneficial to firemen; (5) to establish sick and death benefit funds; and (6) to encourage the establishment of schools of instruction for fire fighting. Among other things which the federation favours are (a) voluntary arbitration of all labour disputes; (b) all civic employees to come under the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, and (c) the granting of charters to firemen's unions by the Trades and Labour Congress instead of international charters. The revenue of the federation is derived from a monthly per capita tax. In addition to the twenty-two directly chartered local branches of the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters its affiliates include eight local branches of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

The Brotherhood of Grain Elevator Employees of Canada whose head office is located at Port Arthur, Ont., was established on March 12, 1935. "The objects of this Brotherhood shall be to secure a better measure of co-operation between employers and employees, to improve working conditions and obtain and maintain a good standard of living for its members. To help in times of sickness and alleviate distress whenever possible." Membership in the Brotherhood is restricted to a person actively employed in or about a grain elevator and must be below the rank of a general foreman.

The organization is registered under the Trade Unions Act.

The Federated Association of Letter Carriers, which was formed on September 15, 1891, is an organization of public servants of the class indicated formed for the purpose of protecting their interests in regard to salaries and working conditions, etc. Until the summer of 1918 the jurisdiction of the association over letter carriers had not been interfered with, but certain members of the association in the West, who were not in accord with the settlement of the strike of the letter carriers which took place in July, 1918, launched a new body of postal employees, reference to which has already been made. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers is registered under the Friendly Societies' Act of Ontario for the transaction of life insurance in the province, and is also affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which is composed of Indian fishermen, came into existence at a conference held in Port Simpson, B.C., on December 15-18, 1931. The organization was formed for the betterment of the conditions of the Indians socially, mentally and physically, and is designed to be legislative, executive and judicial, and may establish branches in all native villages. Conventions are to be held annually and delegates shall be appointed from each branch. The officers of the brotherhood consist of president, vice-president, general secretary, general treasurer, general recording secretary and an executive committee consisting of two from each village branch of the brotherhood. The membership fee for 1932 was 50 cents.

The National Association of Marine Engineers of Canada is composed of marine engineers holding certificates granted by either the Dominion Government or the British Board of Trade and was established in 1893 to promote the interests of those employed as marine engineers in the Dominion. The association claims authority to establish subordinate councils and to make regulations for their governance. The preface to the constitution sets forth that it is essential for the progress of marine engineers that they should combine for the purpose of raising their status and to guard their certificates of qualification. In 1922 the association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and on August 27, 1926, was incorporated under The Companies Act of the Dominion.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia was established provisionally on June 19, 1932, by coal miners who seceded from the United Mine Workers of America in District 26. The name adopted was that of an earlier union formed in 1917 for the purpose of uniting rival organizations of coal miners. The objects of the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia as set forth in the constitution were as follows:

(1) To organize all workers regardless of occupation according to class needs, to work ceaselessly in the interest of their class.

(2) Non-contributory unemployment insurance, full maintenance during periods of enforced idleness, sickness or accidents. Improvement of living standards, wages, working hours, and enact legislation for the benefit and protection of all workers generally.

(3) To educate the workers as to their class position in society and show them the way out from capitalistic exploitation to their economic emancipation.

(4) To assist all workers during labour disputes or lockouts by financial contributions and our economic strength when necessary.

(5) To insist upon all workers having committees of themselves to inspect mines and workshops.

The One Big Union (discussed in chapter IV).

The United Postal Employees of Canada was formerly known as the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association, and came into existence in 1913 at a convention of representatives of a number of scattered independent lodges and postal workers. The unauthorized strike in the postal service west of the Great Lakes in 1913 resulted in the secession of a number of clerks in the western offices who, with dissatisfied letter carriers, subsequently became members of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, now known as the Amalgamated Civil Servants. In May, 1920, the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress, but for some reason the affiliation has not been maintained. The aim of the association is to secure by co-operation with the Post Office Department the classification of post office clerks with a view to getting more equitable salary rates, regulation of hours of labour, the improvement of the public service and such other objects as may arise. The new name was chosen at the convention held in September, 1928, when a reorganization of the society was effected, the Dominion Mail Porters and Chauffeurs' Association being merged with the postal clerks under the name of United Postal Employees of Canada. At the last convention held in Toronto in September, 1934, the name of the organization was changed to the "Canadian Postal Employees."

The Canadian Printers' Union came into existence during 1930, and according to the secretary of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, who is also the secretary of the Canadian Printers' Union, "was formed in response to a demand from a number of individual printers at several points in the Dominion for a union of their crafts not under alien control."

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which under its charter of incorporation is an international organization, at one time had branches in Newfoundland and the United States, as well as in Canada, but in 1926 it was reported that the last remaining local division outside of the Dominion had passed out of existence. In 1920 the name of the brotherhood, with the consent of the chief officers, appeared in the international group of labour organizations, but at their request the name was in 1927 reinserted in the list of Canadian unions. The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees was formed in October, 1908, was registered under the Trade Unions Act in July, 1909, and in 1923 affiliation was effected with the International Transport Workers' Federation, an organization with headquarters in Holland, and which embraces many European bodies of transport workers. The Canadian Brotherhood was originally designed to include such railway employees as clerks of all departments, freight handlers, foremen, checkers and porters, car checkers, baggage masters, parlour, sleeping and dining car service employees, locomotive wipers, ash pitmen, cranimen, labourers and express company employees, but in December, 1925, it was announced that the brotherhood was definitely in the field to accept into membership all railway shopmen, both skilled and unskilled. In November, 1917, the brotherhood became affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but was expelled from membership by the 1921 convention over a question of jurisdiction between the Canadian Brotherhood and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, an organization with headquarters in the United States, and which claims jurisdiction over certain of the classes of workers comprising the membership of the Canadian body of railroad employees. Previous to the expulsion of the Canadian Brotherhood the Trades Congress had endeavoured to bring about an amalgamation of the two organizations involved, but the efforts proved futile. The executive of the Congress, whose action was upheld by the 1921 convention, took the attitude that a continuance of the dual operation of the two bodies claiming jurisdiction over the same class of workers, and being in affiliation with the Congress, was not in the best interests of the men directly involved, nor of the international trade union movement as represented by the Congress. The Brotherhood is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Association of Railwaymen (formerly the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Operators and Dispatchers) was formed during the summer of 1921 in opposition to the old-established Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, an international organization with headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio, with which the organized locomotive engineers in Canada have for many years been identified. During 1920 a number of the Canadian lodges of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers were suspended for violation by their members of what was termed the Chicago joint agreement, a pact entered into on May 17, 1913, with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for the purpose of jointly regulating the mileage of locomotive engineers and firemen in order to benefit the spare men. (In 1927 the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers by an almost unanimous vote decided to abrogate the agreement.) At the 1921 convention of the brotherhood the charters of three lodges, viz., No. 516 at Humboldt, No. 825 at Kamsack, and No. 837 at Trenton, which persisted in ignoring the joint agreement, were cancelled. Subsequently the new Canadian organization of enginemen came into existence. Another reason advanced for the organization of a purely Canadian body was the small return received by the members in proportion to the money sent as dues and assessments to the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in the United States. The Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen established branches in the localities where the charters were cancelled by the international, as well as at some other points. On March 1, 1923, the Canadian Association was registered under the Trade Unions Act of Canada, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and in 1931, when the association absorbed the Canadian Association of Operators and Dispatchers, extended its jurisdiction to conductors, trainmen, yardmen, telegraphers and dispatchers and changed its name accordingly. In 1934 the name was again changed to "Canadian Association of Railwaymen."

The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is a body composed of employees of a branch of the postal service which its promoters claim to be in all intents and purposes a labour organization. Among the objects of the Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is the advancement of the service and the interests of its members.

The Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen was formed at Vancouver on April 24, 1931, by seamen employed in the deck, catering and engine room departments of ships under Canadian registry. The objects of the Association are: (1) To promote generally the interests of seamen employed on ships of Canadian registry; (2) to promote and maintain amicable relations between members and their employers and to assist in arranging and maintaining mutually advantageous terms and conditions of employment; (3) To provide sick and other benefits for its members and their families; (4) To promote educational and recreational advantages and facilities for members, and (5) To co-operate with other societies having objects of a similar nature. No applicant for membership will be considered unless he can show proof of Canadian citizenship, or proof of legality in Canada, and proof of previous sea service. It is the expressed intention of the Association to extend their jurisdiction by opening a branch in Eastern Canada, where already there are members in affiliation.

In 1934 an organization called the Longshoremen and Water Transport Workers of Canada was formed in Vancouver, but did not show much activity until the early part of 1935, when its members and those of affiliated organizations became involved in an industrial dispute with the Shipping Federation of British Columbia, reference to which is made in Chapter XVI of this report. One of the first bodies to affiliate with the new organization was the Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association (referred to earlier in this chapter) with a membership of approximately 900, then an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour but which affiliation was broken almost immediately.

Other organizations to affiliate with the Longshoremen and Water Transport Workers of Canada, with their reported memberships, were:—

New Westminster and District Waterfront Workers' Association, 350 members.

Coastwise Longshoremen and Freight Handlers' Association, Vancouver, 200 members.

Longshoremen and Waterfront Workers of Canada, Nanaimo, 30 members.

Seafarers Industrial Union, Vancouver, 600 members.

Ship Lining and Fitting Workers' Association, Vancouver, 60 members.
Progressive Waterfront Workers' Association, Chemainus, 164 members.
Vancouver Export Log Workers' Association, Vancouver, 120 members.
Powell River and District Waterfront Workers' Association, 75 members.
Victoria Waterfront Workers' Association, 103 members.
Victoria Seafarers' Industrial Union, 250 members.
Marine Transport Workers' Industrial Union, Nanaimo.

The majority of the organizations listed above were organized and passed out of existence during the year following unsuccessful strikes terminated in December, 1935, and therefore are not shown in the report. Those that were in existence prior to 1935 and ceased to function during the year are listed in Chapter XX, New and Dissolved Organizations.

The complete list of the Canadian central organizing bodies with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries will be found in Table 3, Chapter XVIII.

VIII. FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

Provincial Federations of Labour—Building and Printing Trades Councils—Federation of Railway Shop Mechanics, and Municipal Employees—Composition, Jurisdiction and Functions—Division by Groups—List of Federations, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

The plan of labour organizations as developed on the North American continent provides for the establishment of federated bodies, the objects of which are to consolidate the efforts of local unions of kindred trades in matters which come within the purview of such organizations. Many of these federations have been formed in Canada, the greater number embracing railway shop employees. The affiliated branch unions, which are represented at the meetings of the respective federations by elected delegates, are required to pay a per capita tax for the upkeep of the federated organizations with which they are identified. While the jurisdiction of most of these delegate bodies is confined to a particular locality, some of them include the shop mechanics on a railway system, others cover all organized workers of kindred trades in a whole province, and in three instances they are formed on a Dominion-wide basis, these being Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, A.F. of L., Canadian National System Federation No. 11, and C.P.R. System Federation, all of which embrace railway shop mechanics. Some of the larger federations meet annually but those of a local character meet more frequently.

Working under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, are two provincial federations of labour, with jurisdiction covering their respective provinces. Membership in provincial federations include (1) trades and labour councils; (2) international and national local branch unions and (3) federal labour unions, bodies usually representing trades over which no existing central organizing union claims jurisdiction. Annual meetings are held at which legislative and other matters of concern to wage earners are considered. The legislative demands which have been adopted at the conventions are presented to the respective Provincial Governments by the executive officers who may be accompanied by representatives of affiliated local unions.

The New Brunswick Council of Labour, a body somewhat similar in character to the two federations referred to above, has been chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. This council was formed during the year, and its jurisdiction covers the Province of New Brunswick.

All of the building trades councils, except that in Niagara Falls are affiliates of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and as such have full autonomy over all matters affecting all organized workmen in their respective localities engaged in the building industry, when in conformity with the laws and decisions of the Building Trades Department. No local council is permitted to enter into any agreement with an association of employers unless such agreement has been submitted to and approved by the majority of the membership in a referendum vote.

Local allied printing trades councils are provided for in the agreement made between the five printing trade organizations (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Printing Pressmen's Union, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Typographical Union) under date of March 7, 1911, and under which there was established the International Allied Printing Trades Association. In some of the Federations, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America is also included. Local councils may adopt rules for their governance provided they are in accord with the general laws of the Printing Trades Association, and are designed in part to be the agents through which the allied printing trades union label may be issued to printing firms conforming to the necessary conditions.

The most important delegate body in the railway employees' group is Division No. 4, which came into existence on February 27, 1918, and which is working under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor. The purposes of the division are (1) to Promote harmony and enhance the welfare of all railroad employees; (2) to aid in organizing all such workers and to consider and decide jurisdictional disputes; (3) to discourage piece work and to confer jointly in regard to schedules and to approve same before presentation to the railway officials; (4) to encourage railroad organizations to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor; (5) to further the interests of employees by means of legislation and to take such action as may be agreed upon to protect the interests of all concerned. The division also seeks (a) to bring all railway employees within the organization, (b) to shorten the hours of labour to eight per day; (c) to establish a minimum wage scale for all employees in all branches of railway service; (d) to bring about a national agreement on all railroads in Canada which may if necessary be divided into sections, and (e) to prevent strikes and lockouts. Division No. 4 is the largest of the federations, having jurisdiction over the organized shop workers on all Canadian railway lines, including machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electrical workers, sheet metal workers, etc. These workers are in the first place members of their respective local unions, and are brought together in a system federation covering the particular railway line on which they are employed. Delegates from the system federations and crafts make up the representation at the convention of the division which meets biennially although special sessions may be called. Included in the system federations affiliated with the department are those composed of the organized mechanics employed on the following railway lines: Canadian Pacific; Canadian National (including the Atlantic, Central and Western regions); Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta; Temiskaming & Northern Ontario and the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. The employees of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo and the Kettle Valley Railways are under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Pacific System Federation. The functions of Division No. 4 include the making of wage schedules and the consideration of other matters pertaining to the working conditions of the various classes of employees represented. The executive board is composed of the general chairman, vice-chairman and the secretary-treasurer, with two representatives from each affiliated craft organization. It is the business of the system federations, of which there are six in Canada, to see that the wage schedules on their respective lines are properly administered and to handle all grievances, reporting to and receiving instructions from Division No. 4. Besides the system federations the department has received information concerning six local federated bodies of railway shop mechanics in the Dominion to which representatives are elected by the local branch unions affiliated, and their functions are somewhat similar to other delegate bodies of railway shop crafts.

The composition of the federations of employees of public authorities is in some instances more diversified than that of the others mentioned their memberships including not only ordinary civic employees, but street railway and telephone employees, where such services are publicly owned. Besides the three local organizations, meeting at frequent intervals to deal with local conditions concerning the various trades making up the respective federations, there is one provincial body of such workers, viz., the British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees, which is registered under the Societies' Act of the province, and is authorized to issue charters to local branch associations.

The Labour Educational Association of Western Ontario was formed in Woodstock in 1903 as a voluntary unaffiliated body. In 1907 the word "Western" was dropped from the name, the annual meetings of the organization having been attended by a number of delegates from eastern cities. The representatives at the annual conventions of the association include those from such recognized labour bodies in Ontario as contribute a prescribed annual fee, $1 being the minimum and $5 the maximum, according to membership. The functions of the Labour Educational Association having developed somewhat along lines similar to a provincial federation, the name of the organization is given a place in this section. Its object is to advance the principles of the labour movement and aid the work of organization through the dissemination of information, the holding of public meetings and lectures, the distribution of educational literature, etc. For some years it published the Industrial Banner.

At the close of 1935 there were in existence 49 non-sectarian trade union federations, the same number as shown for the previous year. (The names of the federations of the National Catholic Unions are given in Chapter VI).

In the appended list the federations are divided into the following groups: Provincial federations, 3; building trades councils, 11; printing trades councils, 14; railway employees federations, including three regions of C.N. Rys., 16; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1. The list of federations, with the names and addresses of Presidents and Secretaries, is as follows:—

IX. DISTRICT COUNCILS

Summary of the Objects, Jurisdiction and Functions of Delegate Bodies Representing Particular Trade Union Branches—Number of District Councils in the Dominion—Division by Trades—Names of Councils, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

For the purpose of bringing about the closer affiliation of local branch unions of a particular trade, and of co-ordinating their activities, many of the labour organizations make provision for the formation of what are termed "district councils" or "conference boards," a number of which are operating in Canada. The chief function of these delegate bodies is to consider trade and other matters considered to be of like interest to the affiliated membership, and which it is believed can be dealt with in a conference of representatives having the opinions of their respective constituents more satisfactorily than by individual branches. The jurisdiction of these councils varies, being in some instances confined to a locality where two or more local branches of the same craft exist; in other instances, including all branches of a given trade within a stated area, and occasionally extending to a whole province or even to cover the same class of workers throughout the Dominion. To meet the expenses of these district bodies a per capita tax is levied on the membership of the branches in affiliation, each unit being entitled to be represented by a certain number of delegates. In the case of provincial and Dominion-wide bodies the meetings are held annually but where the councils are purely local, meetings are held at frequent intervals.

Some of the more important functions of the district councils which are operating in the Dominion are herein briefly summarized.

There is only one Provincial Conference Board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union in Canada chartered by the central organization. This organization has power to make its own constitution and by-laws and to collect a per capita tax from the local branches which constitute it, to meet the necessary operating expenses. The objects of the board, among others, are to endeavour to establish and maintain a uniform work-day and rate of wages within its jurisdiction, this being the Province of Ontario; the procuring of favourable legislation for the craft, and the securing of information for its members regarding conditions of employment throughout the country.

Provision is made under the scheme of organization of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners for the establishment of district and provincial councils, the former being local in character; meeting at short intervals, and the provincial bodies annually. These delegate organizations have power to frame working and trade rules in their respective jurisdictions; they must also provide for and hold trial of all infractions of trade rules, and can enforce penalties subject, of course, to an appeal to the general president of the brotherhood.

The councils of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada have similar functions to those of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The aim of the Ontario Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is to improve the standard and efficiency of its members with the view to the consumer and public deriving the maximum benefit from the use of electrical energy. The Council is designed to bring together semi-annually the men engaged in the electrical trade in the various localities for the purpose of discussing ways and means of improving conditions in the province.

There is only one council in Canada of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers chartered by the central organization. This is Council No. 5, and is comprised of the local branches of the brotherhood operating in the City of Montreal. Among the objects of the council are the creation of harmony and unity between the local unions of the craft; the establishing of a minimum wage in the district; and the enforcement of a code of working rules governing hours, wages, etc. Council No. 5 has legislative and executive power on all matters relating to the common interest of the locals under its jurisdiction, including the ordering of strikes, subject to the sanction of the general executive board of the brotherhood. A per capita tax is levied on the local unions to defray the necessary expenses of the council.

The Ontario Provincial Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters was formerly known as the Ontario Pipe Trades Council, but in December, 1926, the present name was chosen and a charter for the organization was issued by the head office of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. This provincial association, whose membership is made up of plumbers employed in the building trade, seeks to improve organization among the craft and to secure better working conditions in the trade. In matters involving members or local branches in the province the association has power to make decisions. Special efforts are made to keep the members of the Ontario branches employed by prompt advice to each other of changes in local conditions and also by the transference of members from one city to the other for special large jobs.

Only one provincial conference of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association has been chartered in Canada by the central organization. It is designed to establish the minimum rate of pay and the maximum number of hours for all locals under its jurisdiction. The conference has full power to make laws to govern itself and to levy such assessments upon its members for financial support as it may deem necessary, so long as such laws do not conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the main association.

The jurisdiction of District Council No. 30 chartered by the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Welders and Helpers covers all Canadian lodges of the craft having members working on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada. This council is represented on the executive board of the Brotherhood by an international vice-president. It has power to form its own by-laws and to call strikes, provided the approval of the international executive board has been secured but may arbitrate and close strikes on its own volition.

The District Council of Montreal and Vicinity, of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, was organized in June, 1929. The council acts as administrative board for all locals under its jurisdiction. There is no local constitution, but the council is governed by the general constitution of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

District Lodge No. 2 of the International Association of Machinists has jurisdiction over all locals embracing members of the craft employed on Canadian railways, subject to the general laws of Grand Lodge. The members comprising the district determine the proportion and method of representation also the amount and method of collection of revenue. Assessments may be levied within its jurisdiction with the approval of the affiliated members. The district is divided into seven sections in accord with the territory of the respective general managers of the main trunk roads as follows: No. 1, comprising the western lines of the C.P.R.; No. 2, the eastern lines of the C.P.R.; No. 3, the western region of the C.N.R.; No. 4, the central region of the C.N.R.; No. 5, the Atlantic region of the C.N.R.; No. 6, the T. H. & B. Railroad; No. 7, the T. & N.O. Railroad. The district is officered by a president and a secretary-treasurer, who, with the seven section chairmen, comprise the district executive board. District Lodges Nos. 46 and 82 are local bodies, composed of the lodges in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, respectively, and the surrounding districts. These district lodges deal with matters affecting the interests of the members of the association in the localities mentioned.

The International Moulders' Union has chartered the Conference Board of Ontario with jurisdiction over all locals in the province. It makes its own laws, subject to the approval of the general president, and elects a business agent for the territory under its control. The necessary expenses of the conference board are covered by a per capita levy on each local union in affiliation, the money so raised being received through the international headquarters.

There are two district councils of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one in Montreal and the other in Toronto. These councils have power to transact business pertaining to the welfare of the members of the various local branches, such as preventing strikes, organizing label agitations, and the adjusting, where possible, of all local differences before they are referred to headquarters. Authority is given to these councils to investigate the financial standing of affiliated local branches, such report being forwarded to the general executive board. At each general convention the councils are entitled to one delegate each to represent them.

The Toronto Joint Board of the International Fur Workers' Union is the only one operating in Canada, and has power to adopt its own by-laws, provided, of course, there is no objection by its affiliates. The board may assess the members of such affiliated locals to meet the necessary expenses.

The main object of the joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of which there are two, located respectively at Montreal and Toronto, is to call, conduct, and settle strikes and lockouts affecting the local branches under their jurisdiction. The decision of such boards in all disputes is binding upon the local unions.

The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, which is made up of the Canadian branches of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union supervises all activities of such branches, appoints organizers, and is in general responsible to the chief organization for all matters concerning the branches in the Dominion.

Among the objects of the Ontario Provincial Council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union is that of promoting improvements in working conditions of its members. It also endeavours to extend the recognition and use of all union labels, particularly the boot and shoe workers' union stamp and in a general way co-operate with the executive in carrying out the contracts and policies of the organization.

The Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union has its own by-laws. Such matters as has to do with the sanitary conditions of printing offices, the securing of legislation in the interest of the printing industry and the obtaining of harmonious relations among the various branches on matters affecting the trade, engage the attention of the delegates at the annual meetings. A per capita tax is levied to defray the running expenses of the conference, which is paid direct to the board.

The district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which meet monthly are designed to promote the welfare of the brotherhood and to bring about a larger measure of co-operation between the local lodges in the respective districts, each lodge being entitled to representation.

Of the three district councils of the International Longshoremen's Association appearing in the accompanying table, only one council is composed entirely of Canadian locals, viz., that at Saint John, N.B. This council may make rulings and decisions affecting members of the local branches within its jurisdiction, but such rulings and decisions are subject to the approval of the district branch, the final decision resting with the executive council of the international association. The Atlantic Coast District Council has jurisdiction over the entire north Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports in the territory named and one of the clauses in its constitution stipulates that one of the vice-presidents must be located in Canada. There is also a similar district body on the Pacific Coast whose law requires that one of the vice-presidents must reside in British Columbia. A function of these district councils is to investigate the conduct of local branches and members under their jurisdiction, and they also have the power to inflict penalties and fines for violation of the rules of the association.

There are two district unions of the United Mine Workers in Canada, viz., District 26 with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and District 18 covering the coal mining areas in Alberta and Southeastern British Columbia, the affairs of the latter, however, being administered by provisional officers, the charter having been temporarily withdrawn. (Particulars of the suspension of the charter of District 18 were published in this report for 1925.) District unions of the United Mine Workers have power to adopt rules for their own governance, provided they do not conflict with the laws of the international union or joint agreements. The districts also have control over the locals affiliated, and have power to collect a per capita tax and to levy assessments on their own members, such assessments not to exceed $1 per month. The district unions are not permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of the members without the sanction of an international convention or the international executive board, but the unions may order local strikes within their own territory on their own responsibility; provided, however, that where such strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international executive board.

The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario is an organization composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union in the province. The objects of the association are: (1) the education of the barbers by means of an exchange of ideas at annual conventions; (2) the advocacy of higher wages and shorter hours; (3) the universal closing of all barber shops on the Lord's Day; (4) provincial licence and examination as to qualifications of all barbers; also more adequate sanitary regulations for barber shops, and rigid enforcement of the law pertaining thereto.

There are three districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators; No. 1 comprises the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, and the province of British Columbia, No. 11 with jurisdiction over the Maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario, and No. 12 for the provinces of Manitoba.

Saskatchewan and Alberta. These districts have power to enact laws for their own governance, so long as they do not conflict with the international constitution, after they have been approved by the affiliated units. Among the purposes of these district bodies is a standardization of working conditions and rates of pay and the securing of legislation for the better protection of those engaged in the theatrical trades.

The International Association of Fire Fighters has two district councils, one with jurisdiction over the locals in the Province of Alberta, and the other for British Columbia. The objects of these bodies are: (1) to organize all permanent fire fighters in the provinces mentioned; (2) to foster the encouragement of a higher degree of skill and efficiency on the part of fire fighters; (3) the cultivation of friendship among the members; (4) proper remuneration for duty performed; (5) a pension law that will provide ample funds for those dependent upon pension; (6) to have legislation enacted where necessary to make the fire fighters' position more efficient and humane, and (7) the establishment of sick and death benefit funds.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers, which was organized in Hamilton, Ont., in 1924, is a legislative and advisory body whose actions are subject to the constitution of the central organization. Annual meetings of the board are held on the second Monday in January, but special sessions may be convened at any time.

There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers; No. 7 having jurisdiction over all lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway east of Port Arthur while No. 8 covers the same lines west from Fort William. The objects of these district councils are to centralize the work in the respective localities. The chairman of the district bodies handles any grievances which cannot be settled at the local point by meeting with the higher officials at the main centre and endeavouring to effect an adjustment.

District Council No. 1 International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators has been added to the list during the year. In the same period two councils have passed out of existence, viz., Ontario Provincial Council of the International Association of Machinists and the Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Canada.

The following list contains the names of 45 district councils, one less than the number reported in 1934, divided by trades as follows: clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, hatters and fur workers, 6; carpenters and railway employees, 5 each; machinists, longshoremen and stage employees, 3 each; building workers, mine workers, fire fighters and firemen and oilers, 2 each; bricklayers, electrical workers, painters, plumbers, stone-cutters, boilermakers, bridge and iron workers, moulders, boot and shoe workers, printers, barbers, and engineers, 1 each. The accompanying list of district councils is arranged in trade groups, and gives the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, where supplied:—

X. BROTHERHOOD COMMITTEES

Delegate Bodies of Railway Employees' Organizations Whose Functions Include the Adjustment of Grievances of Members—List of the Railways on Which They Have Been Established—Chief Officers of the Various Committees and Legislative Boards.

Another important group of delegate bodies are those provided for in the structure of the several railroad employees' organizations, the memberships of which comprise a considerable portion of the combined organized workers of Canada. Among these are the railroad brotherhoods whose members are employed in engine and train service, their lodges being located at the various terminal points of the different railway lines. The delegate bodies of the railroad workers include committees known under the name of "adjustment," "grievance," "protective," "legislative," etc., the objects of which were discussed in some detail in a previous issue of this report. The functions of the first three named committees, which are composed of representatives from the local lodges comprising the employees of a particular railroad, include the consideration of matters affecting the conditions of employment of their members. Through the effort of these bodies many adjustments of local complaints have been effected, and on occasion they have made satisfactory settlements of disputes involving the whole membership on a given railway system. Four of the railroad brotherhoods have established bodies known as legislative boards, and maintain representatives at Ottawa. These bodies are designed to protect the interest of railwaymen in laws which may be proposed in connection with railroad operation and also in respect to decisions made by the Board of Railway Commissioners. The provincial legislative boards have similar duties as regards their respective provinces and may co-operate with other organizations in securing uniformity of laws concerning labour. Some other railroad employees organizations send representatives to Ottawa to look after the welfare of their members when such a proceeding is considered necessary.

The list of delegate bodies for each railway employees' organization is given separately, the names of the railroads over which the respective committees have jurisdiction being arranged in alphabetical order. In each case the name and address of the chairman and secretary (where obtainable) are given:—

XI. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

City Central Delegate Bodies Established to be the Spokesman of Organized Labour on Public Questions; How Constituted and Financed; Number Operating in Canada—Councils Under Dual Charters—Division by Provinces—Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

Apart from the delegate bodies discussed in the three preceding chapters of this report, there is another group of organizations known as trades and labour councils, which are designed to be the medium of expression of opinion of organized labour on public questions, and as such on occasion have been brought into considerable prominence. Trades councils are usually established in localities where a number of local branch unions are in existence, delegates from the local units in a given city or district making up the representation. These councils are voluntary bodies, it not being compulsory for all local unions to affiliate, and, therefore, it is very seldom that all the unions in the locality join the council. As a result of the efforts of certain trade councils many of the international organizations have urged the importance of their subordinate branches identifying themselves with the councils in their district. The railroad brotherhoods take very little interest in trades and labour councils affiliating in very few instances. These councils have no power to issue charters to local branch unions which affiliate, but each branch is required to pay a per capita tax for the purpose of meeting the general expense.

In certain localities in the past trades councils, representative of the international trade union movement, have endorsed the demands of certain affiliated bodies for improved working conditions, and not only have they given their moral support, but have been the agency through which appeals for funds to support strikes have been made, the amounts so collected being used mainly to augment the strike benefits allowed by the central organizations with which the local unions involved are connected. Some trades and labour councils, however, undertook to go further, usurping the functions of international organizations in issuing strike orders. To check this proceeding the American Federation of Labor, which has 730 councils under charter, some of which are located in Canada, in 1919 amended its constitution inhibiting trades councils which hold charters from the federation to order any local branch union affiliated to go on strike or to take a vote on the question of a strike until the proper authorities have agreed to such action. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at its 1920 convention took action to deal summarily with councils which violated the constitution of the Congress or encouraged secession movements in the ranks of organized labour.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour has chartered similar organizations, and these are termed "national labour councils." Those identified with the National Catholic Unions are called "central councils," (included in Chapter VI), while those connected with the One Big Union are known as "central labour councils."

There are twelve councils connected with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour operating respectively in Halifax, Moncton, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, and Vancouver. Two councils, located in Fort William, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man., are under charter from the One Big Union. The remaining 37 councils are chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, sixteen of these also hold a charter from the American Federation of Labor. Those under dual charters are located as follows: Edmonton, Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, St. Thomas, Sudbury, Toronto, Vancouver, Windsor and Winnipeg.

During the year the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada chartered two trades and labour councils, viz., Three Rivers Trades and Labour Council and Kenora Trades and Labour Council, while the councils in the following localities have ceased to function: Belleville, North Bay and Prince Rupert. The councils in the first two cities were chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, while the council in the last named city was chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

Twenty-four of the councils are located in Ontario cities, the remaining twenty-seven being divided between the other provinces as follows: Quebec, Saskatchewan and Alberta, 5 each; British Columbia 4; New Brunswick and Manitoba, 3 each, and Nova Scotia, 2.

The councils chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are designated by the letters "A. C. C. L.," while those identified with the One Big Union are designated with the letters "O. B. U."

The accompanying list gives the location of the trades and labour councils in the Dominion arranged in provincial groups (those operating under dual charters being marked with an asterisk), with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries.

XII. TRADE UNION LOCAL UNITS

Sources From Which Main Revenue Derived—Number of Branches in Each Group Operating in Canada—Numerical Standing of the Nine Provinces—Cities Having Not Less Than Twenty Local Branch Unions—List of Union Branches with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

The local branch unions are the foundation of the trade union movement, providing in the form of per capita tax the main revenue necessary to carry on the functions of the central organizations and delegate bodies which have been discussed in the preceding chapters of this report. Published in this chapter are the names and locations of all local branches of international and Canadian organizations, as well as of all independent units in the Dominion exclusive of the local branches of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, which have already appeared in Chapter VI. While in some instances local branch unions have been formed through the efforts of some trade unionists who have located in districts where no union of their specific crafts are operating, the majority of the trade unions in Canada have been established through the agency of representatives of labour organizations operating on the North American Continent, and which include the Dominion in their respective jurisdiction. The amount of per capita tax to be paid to maintain their connection with the central organization and to ensure eligibility for such benefits as are provided by the respective bodies is determined from time to time by the membership, either by referendum vote or by the action of a regular convention, to which all good standing branches are entitled to send delegates. Local branch unions consist, as their names usually imply, of followers of a particular trade or calling, and their operation is mainly confined to a limited area, although in a few instances a much wider territory is allotted. Where two or more local branch unions of a particular craft hold charters from the same central body in the same locality, district councils are sometimes formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of general concern to the members of the organization. Federations are developed by local branches of certain kindred trades, and trades and labour councils are established in localities where the local branches are sufficiently numerous to maintain them. As intimated above, the finances necessary to support these several adjuncts in the scheme of organization are also contributed by the affiliated local units enumerated in this chapter, some of which are identified with each of the three classes of delegate bodies above mentioned.

The branches of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America are known as "system" divisions, which include the membership employed on a certain class of work over a whole telegraph system. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers, besides having local lodges also have "system" divisions, which cover the operations on a whole railroad system. In the present publication, the names of the "system" divisions are printed under the heading of the locality in which the respective secretaries reside.

As in former years, application was made to the secretaries of all central organizing bodies for lists of their local branches in Canada, as well as to the officers of local units of which the Department had a record. Of the 82 international organizations with branches in Canada only a few failed to furnish a list of their local unions in the Dominion, though in a number of cases it was necessary to make more than one request, and of the Canadian group only three failed to supply the information requested. In all cases where the local officers failed to supply the information on the first application, a second request was made with the result that out of a total of 2,728 branches of all classes of unions in the Dominion direct replies were received from 2,289. Where particulars were not received from the local secretary, the names and addresses furnished by the general secretaries have been used.

At the close of 1935 there were, according to information received in the Department, 1,732 branch unions identified with 81 international craft organizations, a gain of 32 as compared with 1934; the Industrial Workers of the World, an international industrial union, make 82 international organizations operating in the Dominion.

With the 12 branches of the I.W.W. added, the total international affiliations in the Dominion numbered 1,794. The Canadian central organizations had 734 local branches, and the independent units numbered 49. In addition there were 140 National Catholic syndicates and 11 local unions connected with affiliates of the Workers' Unity League. These figures indicate, as previously mentioned, that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,728 local branch unions of all classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, a decrease of 12 as compared with the figures for 1934, the combined total membership being 280,704 a decrease of 1,070.

The province of Ontario, as usual, occupies first place as to the number of local branches of international organizations, having 741 of the total of 1,794. Quebec stands second with 276; while Alberta and British Columbia share third place, each having 175. The remaining five provinces rank as follows: Saskatchewan, 133; Manitoba, 109; Nova Scotia, 94; New Brunswick, 87; and Prince Edward Island, 4. Ontario also stands first in the number of local branches of Canadian organizations, there being 274 in the province out of a total of 734. Quebec occupies second place with 83, and Alberta third with 80. The remaining six provinces stand as follows: British Columbia, 74; Manitoba, 71; Saskatchewan, 62; Nova Scotia, 53; New Brunswick, 29, and Prince Edward Island, 8. The number of local branches in this group was considerably increased, owing to the One Big Union being transferred from the International to the Canadian section.

The six local units of civic employees in Winnipeg, which are united in the Civic Employees' Federation, have their own constitution and by-laws, the federation, to which each unit sends three delegates and pays a per capita tax, being the executive of the consenting units.

Independent units to be formed or seceded from other organizations during the year were: (1) Wood and Metal Lathers Association of Montreal and District, Montreal, Que.; (2) Co-operative Labour Association, Chicoutimi, Que.; (3) Workers' Group of Chicoutimi, Chicoutimi, Que.; (4) Canadian Shoe Workers and Allied Crafts, No. 3, Galt, Ont.; (5) Algoma Steel Workers' Union, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; (6) Canadian Shoe Workers and Allied Crafts, No. 1, Toronto, Ont.; (7) Toronto Jewellery Workers' Union, Toronto, Ont.; (8) Telegraph Messengers' Union, Toronto, Ont.; (9) Sewer Maintenance Workers (Unit of the Federation of Civic Employees and Affiliated Unions) Winnipeg, Man.; (10) Royal City Waterfront Workers' Association, New Westminster, B.C.; (11) Longshoremen's Association, North Vancouver, B.C.; (12) Canadian Waterfront Workers' Association, Vancouver, B.C.; (13) Longshoremen's Association, Vancouver, B.C.; (14) Longshoremen's Association, Victoria, B.C. The independent units now in existence number 49, seven more than recorded in 1934, and are divided by provinces as follows: Quebec, 17; British Columbia, 12; Ontario, 8; Manitoba, 6; Alberta, 4; New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, 1 each. The following seven independent units were either dissolved or became identified with some other organization: Association of Clothing Workers, Joliette, Que.; Knights of Labour, Papineau Assembly, Quebec, Que.; Newsboys' Union, Toronto, Ont.; Luscar Miners Union, Luscar, Alta.; New Westminster Waterfront Workers, New Westminster, B.C.; Waterfront Freight Handlers Union, Vancouver, B.C.; Riggers and Transport Workers Union, Victoria, B.C.

The numerical standing of the nine provinces of the Dominion as to local branches of all classes of Labour organizations, including the National Catholic Unions, was as follows: Ontario, 1,026, a loss of 28; Quebec, 514, a gain of 17; Alberta, 266, a loss of 4; British Columbia, 264, a loss of 14; Saskatchewan, 195, a gain of 1; Manitoba, 186, a gain of 3; Nova Scotia, 147, a gain of 10; New Brunswick, 117, a gain of 2; Prince Edward Island, 13, a gain of 1.

There were 28 cities in Canada having not less than 20 local branch unions of all classes, the same number as recorded in 1934. Montreal again stands first with 201 (34 of which were National Catholic syndicates); Toronto is second with 176; Winnipeg third with 118; and Vancouver fourth with 104; the same order in which these cities appeared the previous year. The other 24 cities rank as follows: Edmonton, 82; Quebec, 67 (25 National Catholic syndicates); Calgary, 64; London, 62; Ottawa, 61; Hamilton, 57; Regina, 42; Halifax, Saskatoon, Saint John and Victoria, 41 each; Windsor, 39; Fort William, 34; Sherbrooke, 32 (15 National Catholic syndicates); Moose Jaw, 31; Three Rivers, 30 (16 National Catholic syndicates); Moncton and Port Arthur, 27 each; North Bay, 26; St. Thomas, 25; Lethbridge, 24; Brandon and Brantford, 23 each; Stratford, 22.

During the interval between the dates at which reports were received from the central organizations and the preparation of this review a number of local branches have been established, their names being published under localities in which they were formed, and are marked with an asterisk (*).

The list here printed is arranged by provinces, proceeding from east to west, with cities and towns arranged in alphabetical order. Local unions under charters from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are designated by the letters T. and L.C. following the names: unions in Canada under charters direct from the American Federation of Labor have the letters A. F. of L. as an affix; branches of the all-Canadian Congress of Labour are denoted by the letters A.C.C.L., and the independent units are so described. When the information could be obtained, the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries are given, the post office address of the respective officers being the same as the heading under which their names appear, unless otherwise specified.

XIII. BUSINESS AGENTS

Synopsis of the Duties of Business Agents of Trade Unions—How Maintained—Number Reported at the Close of 1935—List of Localities and Trades Having Business Agents, With Their Names and Addresses.

In the early days of the organized labour movement on this continent, many trade union matters were referred for attention to a committee, the members of which often found it difficult, if not almost impossible to give sufficient time to the work. To overcome this difficulty some of the stronger organizations decided to create the office of business agent, a position which has steadily grown in importance. The present duties of this officer, who in the earlier years was frequently referred to as the "walking delegate" require him, where permissible, to visit the various jobs on which members of his organization are employed to ascertain if all are in good standing in the union, and to endeavour to secure applications for membership if there are non-members working. It is also the duty of the business agent to see that the fair wage clauses on government or municipal contracts (where there are such provisions) are observed, and where alleged violations are detected, he is empowered to take the necessary steps to bring them to the attention of the proper authorities. Likewise the business agent must investigate complaints concerning conditions of employment and if the union considers these complaints to be of sufficient importance, he must try and adjust the difficulties. An important feature of the business agent's duties is that of receiving application for labour from employers and furnish the men required so far as may be possible. Business Agents are usually elected annually by the local branches concerned, their salaries being paid from local funds, either from the regular dues, or by a weekly or monthly assessment, but in a few instances different methods of payment prevail. In some localities, where a single union is not strong enough to maintain a business agent, two or more local unions of the same craft or kindred trades sometimes combine to support such an official.

In the accompanying list are the names of 177 business agents, 24 more than the number reported in 1934.

Where the position of business agent is combined with the secretaryship, as it is in many instances, the name of the business agent is omitted from the following list, but is published in the directory of secretaries of local unions. The arrangement of the list printed below shows the localities, proceeding from east to west, in which business agents are maintained, together with the names of the trades, the business agents, and their addresses.

XIV. REVOLUTIONARY LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS

Third Communist International—Seventh Congress of Communist International Held in Moscow in July, 1935—Canadian Delegate Addresses Congress—Instructions for Executive Committee of the Communist International—Membership—Red International of Labour Unions—European Secretariat in Paris—Agitation for Independent Political Labour Party in the United States—Communist Party in Canada—Communist Organization Declared Illegal—Communist Candidates in Dominion Elections—Young Communist League—Workers' Unity League—Affiliations of the League.

On March 6, 1919, the Third (Communist) International was formed in Moscow, U.S.S.R., as a political revolutionary organization. In order to have a medium through which to propagate its doctrine in the trade unions the Communist International established in July, 1921, the Red International of Labour Unions. This organization proclaimed itself to be "an international which, together with the Communist International, will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the setting up of the dictatorship of the proletariat; an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth." The original affiliate in Canada of the Communist International was the Workers' Party, the name being subsequently changed to the Communist Party of Canada, with headquarters in Toronto, and which recognized the Moscow body as the only real centre of world revolutionary activities. As an aid to the propagation of the communist doctrine among the youth of Canada, there was set up by the Communist International the Young Communists' League, a body which is affiliated with the Young Communist International at Moscow. For the younger children an organization known as the "Young Pioneers" was established. The official representative on the North American continent of the Red International of Labour Unions is the Trade Union Educational League. One of the objects of the League is the changing of the old-established plan of craft labour organization to what is known as industrial unionism, similar to the system in operation in the U.S.S.R.—one union for each industry. Adherents of the League, who are also members of trade unions, have endeavoured by a system called "boring from within" to secure support for the proposed plan of labour reorganization, following the accomplishment of which the organized workers on this continent are to be affiliated with the Red International.

At the fifth world congress of the Communist International held in Moscow in July, 1924, in the discussion on the trade union question it was pointed out that the trade unions are the natural link between the Communist Party and the working class, and it is only through this medium that the party can permeate the labour movement. This is the reason, it was stated, why the Communist International has always paid so much attention to trade unions. The following resolution adopted by the enlarged executive committee of the Communist International in April, 1925, will indicate the importance placed by the Russian body on work among the organized workers:—

In America the regular work of party members in the trade unions must be considered now as the fundamental work on which depends the success of the party in most of the other fields, and especially the struggle for a Labour Party. Therefore, any tendency to neglect or minimize the importance of this work must be energetically combated. In every single trade union, organization party members must be organized into a communist fraction and must act unitedly on every question. These fractions get their instructions from the party and work under its control. Communist factions must take an active and energetic part in all mass economic struggles.

The party must give energetic support to the Trade Union Educational League and do its utmost to develop and extend it. Efforts must be made to convert the T.U.E.L. into a great opposition movement of the left bloc. All attempts of the reactionary trade union bureaucracy to isolate the T.U.E.L., to undermine its influence in the trade unions and to limit the membership to communists and their closest sympathizers must be energetically resisted.

The seventh world congress of the Communist International was convened at Moscow, U.S.S.R., July 25, 1935, the opening address being delivered by Wilhelm Pieck, Communist leader from Germany. The Canadian representative at the Congress meeting was delegate George. A local news dispatch stated that "leading Canadian Communists declined to identify George or say where he came from. Since the party is outlawed, it was feared authorities might arrest him on his return to the Dominion." According to the issue of August 1, 1935, of the Worker, organ of the Communist party published at Toronto, delegate George in addressing the morning session of July 29, said in part:—

"From a narrow sect the Party in Canada has developed since 1930 into the leader of 90 per cent of all strikes. The strike movement last year by government figures involved 585,000 workers, five times the number in 1930.

"The Canadian party has led and stimulated great hunger marches and local actions of the unemployed, including the seizure of trains. The Party and the Y.C.L. are engaged in a struggle for the united front, for the rights of youth, for action against the militarized relief camps, the latter having had great political repercussions.

"All this work is being carried out under the most difficult conditions, in spite of a campaign of terror and a condition of party illegality. The Party, however, has managed to burst through the restrictions of illegality and functions as a virtually legal party to-day. He hailed as a victory the winning of the release of leaders from prison.

"Since the cleaning out of the MacDonald right, and the Spector Trotsky deviations, the party has grown, in spite of illegality and has more than doubled its membership, now nearing the 10,000 mark.

"From 800 at the time of the Sixth Congress, the Y.C.L. has grown to 2,500. There are 32 periodicals printed by the revolutionary movement."

Based on the discussion following the report of Wilhelm Pieck at the opening session of the conference, a resolution was unanimously adopted instructing the executive committee of the Communist International as follows:—

"(a) While shifting the main stress of its activity to the elaboration of fundamental political and tactical lines of the world labour movement, to proceed in deciding any question from the concrete situation and specific conditions obtaining in each particular country and, as a rule, to avoid direct intervention in internal organizational matters of the Communist Parties.

"(b) To systematically assist in the formation and training of cadres and genuine Bolshevik leaders in the Communist Parties so that the parties will be able at the sharpest turn of events to independently and quickly find on the basis of the decisions of the Congress of the Comintern and Plenums of the E.C.C.I. the correct solutions for political and tactical problems of the Communist movement.

"(c) To render effective aid to the Communist Parties in their ideological struggle against political opponents.

"(d) To assist the Communist Parties in making use of their own experience as well as the experience of the world Communist movement, avoiding, however, mechanical application of the experience of one country to another country and the substitution of stereotyped methods and general formulations for concrete Marxian analysis.

"(e) To ensure closer contact between leading bodies of the C.I. and the various sections of the C.I. by still more active participation on the part of the authoritative representatives of the most important sections of the C.I. in the day to day work of the E.C.C.I."

According to news dispatches, a report submitted at the closing session of the seventh world Congress of the Comintern, the number of Communist parties in the world had increased since 1928 from 65 to 76, while the membership, including the total membership of the Young Communist International, had increased during the same period from 3,835,000 to 6,800,000. Excluding the Young Communist International, the Communist parties themselves had a membership of 3,148,000.

RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOUR UNIONS

This organization was formed as a result of a conference of Russian trade union officers and members of the Third (Communist) International held July 15, 1920. At this conference, a provisional committee known as the International Council of Trade and Industrial Unions was appointed for the purpose of calling a world congress of trade unions in the following year. In accordance with these instructions a meeting of trade union representatives was held in Moscow in July, 1921, and among the delegates present two were from Canada. At this conference a permanent international organization under the name of Red International of Labour Unions was formed. A constitution was adopted, the preamble to which was as follows:

The class struggle has now reached such a degree of development and acuteness that the working class, in order to successfully conduct and complete its struggle for emancipation, must fight as a solid, revolutionary class power, not only on a national but also on an international scale, against the bourgeoisie who despite the severe competition on the world market, is closely united in its hatred of the proletarian revolution and solidly welded against the slightest attempt of the proletariat to free itself from exploitation. Since the exploitation is international the fight against it must have an international character. All internationals of labour unions, which existed up to the present moment, at best were but international statistical bureaus for mutual information. The International Secretariat of Labour Unions before the war was merely an information agency; it did not pursue any militant class aims. The Amsterdam International of Labour Unions is even less fit to deal with the issues at hand than its predecessor. The first was but an information office, the latter occupies itself with politics of the worst kind, with anti-proletarian, bourgeois politics. It sets forth the idea of class co-operation, social peace and peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism. In its essence it is an international of counteraction to the struggle for emancipation of the working class. Against this international of impotence, confusion, subservience to the bourgeoisie.

such as the Amsterdam International is, we must oppose—an international of revolutionary vigour, of class activity—an international which together with the Communist International will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat; an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth.

Such a militant labour union international can be built up only by revolutionary class unions, conscious of the purpose and methods of the defensive and offensive struggle against the class enemy. The problem history has put before the revolutionary unions requires the utmost concentration of power, unexampled intensity and the greatest self-sacrifice of the conscious vanguard elements of the working class.

The following are the aims and purpose of the Red International of Labour Unions:—

- (1) To organize the large working mass in the whole world for the overthrow of capitalism, the emancipation of the toilers from oppression and exploitation and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth.
- (2) To carry on a wide agitation and propaganda of the principles of revolutionary class struggle, social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat and revolutionary mass action for the purpose of overthrowing the capitalist system and the bourgeois state.
- (3) To fight against the corruptive ulcer, gnawing at the vitals of the world labour union movement, of compromising with the bourgeoisie against the ideals of class co-operation and social peace and the absurd hopes for a peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism.
- (4) To unite the revolutionary class elements of the world labour union movement and carry on decisive battle against the International Bureau of Labour attached to the League of Nations and against the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, which by their program and tactics are but the bulwark of the world bourgeoisie.
- (5) To co-ordinate and regulate the struggle of the working class in all countries and organize international demonstrations each time, when the situation demands them.
- (6) To take the initiative of international campaigns about prominent events of class struggle, to open subscription lists for the benefit of strikers in great social conflicts, etc.

Membership in the Red International is open to any revolutionary economic class organization if it accepts the following conditions:—

- (1) Endorsement of the principles of revolutionary class struggle.
- (2) Application of these principles in its daily struggle with capitalism and the bourgeois state.
- (3) Recognition of the necessity of the overthrow of capitalism through the social revolution and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat for the transition period.
- (4) Recognition and submission to the international proletarian discipline.
- (5) Recognition and application of the decisions of the constituent congress of the Red International of Labour Unions.
- (6) The rupture with the Amsterdam yellow international.
- (7) United action with all the revolutionary organizations and the Communist Party of the country in all defensive and offensive activities against the bourgeoisie.

EUROPEAN SECRETARIAT IN PARIS

The proposal to establish a European secretariat in Paris by the Red International of Labour Unions was approved by the council of the Communist Federation of France. In addition to the secretary there is a French representative in the new department.

AGITATION FOR INDEPENDENT POLITICAL LABOUR PARTY IN THE UNITED STATES

In discussing the demand by certain delegates to the fifty-fifth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor for an independent political labour party, President Green stated "It (the A. F. of L.) will not take action because some order comes from some gathering in a foreign country directing the workers of the nation to form an independent labour party. . . . No government in a foreign land, no camouflaged organization meeting on foreign soil can tell the American Federation of Labor what it should or should not do."

COMMUNIST PARTY OF CANADA

The Communist Party of Canada was formally organized at the first national convention held in Toronto on February 17, 1922, under the name of the Workers' Party of Canada. The organization operated under the latter name until the third convention held in April, 1924, when the change in title was decided upon.

The platform of the Communist Party as approved by the first convention is as follows:—

1. To consolidate the existing labour organizations and develop them into organizations of militant struggle against capitalism, to permeate the labour unions and strive to replace the present reactionary leadership by revolutionary leadership.

2. To participate in the elections and the general political life of the country. Its representatives in the various legislative and administrative institutions will expose the sham democracy of capitalism and help to mobilize the workers for the final struggle against the capitalist state. They will give conscious and public expression to the every day grievances of the working class in concrete demands upon the capitalist governments and their institutions.

3. To lead in the fight for the immediate needs of the workers, broaden and deepen their demands, organize and develop out of their every day struggles a force for the abolition of capitalism.

4. To work for the overthrow of capitalism and capitalist dictatorship by the conquest of political power, the establishment of the working class dictatorship and of the workers' republic.

COMMUNIST ORGANIZATION DECLARED ILLEGAL

Eight members of the Communist Party of Canada were sent to penitentiary in 1931 when the organization was declared an unlawful association by an Ontario Court.

COMMUNIST CANDIDATES IN DOMINION ELECTION

In the Dominion election held October 14, 1935, thirteen Communist candidates contested as many constituencies. By provinces these were—Nova Scotia, 1; Quebec, 1; Ontario, 6; Manitoba, 2; Alberta, 2; and British Columbia, 1. None of the Communist candidates was elected, and although their total votes were 31,151, most of them lost their deposit.

Six Communist candidates in the 1930 general election polled 5,685 votes but none was elected.

YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE

As has been previously stated the Young Communist League, which was organized July 22, 1922, was established for the purpose of inculcating communist doctrine in the minds of the youth of the country. This organization subsequently became an affiliated section of the Young Communist International, with headquarters in Moscow. The platform of the League is as follows:

1. To penetrate the mass of the working class youth with communist agitation and education and to draw them away from the youth organizations established by the capitalists such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Church Clubs, Y.M.C.A., etc.

2. To conduct a militant campaign against capitalist militarism among the youth who form the bulk of the capitalist armies.

3. To link up with the militant section of the working class in the unions and work for the conversion of the weak craft unions into strong industrial unions capable of defending the workers against the offensive of the capitalists on their standard of living and for the overthrow of capitalism. To pay attention to the economic needs of the working class youth by demanding: (a) prohibition of all children from engaging in any kind of labour until they have reached the age of sixteen; (b) young workers to receive the same wages as adult workers for the same work.

BETTER YOUTH WORK

As reported in the Worker of August 6, 1935, the seventh congress of the Communist International in calling for greater initiative among the various affiliated organizations, had the following to say in regard to the Young Communist Leagues: "Pointing out the underestimation by Young Communist Leagues, as well as Communist Parties, of the importance of mass work among the youth and the weakness of the work in a number of countries, the seventh Congress of the C.I. instructs the E.C.C.I., and the executive committee of the Young Communist International to take effective measures to overcome the sectarian secluedness of a number of Y.C.L. organizations, to make it the duty of Y.C.L. members to join all mass organizations of toiling youth (trade unions, cultural and sports organizations) formed by bourgeois democratic, reformist and Fascist parties as well as religious organizations and to wage systematic struggle in these organizations to gain influence over broad masses of youth, mobilizing it for struggle against militarization, forced labour camps and for the improvement of material conditions—for these purposes forming broad united fronts of all non-fascist youth mass organizations."

The chief officer of the League is the national secretary, Bill Kashtan, 274 College St., Toronto, Ont.

The Young Worker, published weekly in Toronto, Ont., is the official organ of the Young Communist League of Canada.

YOUNG PIONEERS

This organization was formed for the purpose of teaching communism to the younger children of the Dominion. The Young Pioneers, being under the jurisdiction of the Young Communist League, has no national officers.

WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE

When the Workers' Unity League was established in 1932, it was organized as the Canadian section of the Red International of Labour Unions, Moscow. Its purpose was to organize the Canadian workers into revolutionary industrial unions. The amended constitution of the League, adopted at the second convention, held in Toronto, September 9-12, 1933, and becoming effective October 1, 1933, while not disclosing the aims and objects of the organization, mentions in Section 13 (fraternal relations) those organizations with which it will strive to strengthen fraternal relations, and reads as follows: "The Workers' Unity League of Canada shall strive to strengthen and improve its existing fraternal relationships with the Red International of Labour Unions, the Minority Movement of Great Britain and the Trade Union Unity League of the U.S.A. (without entering into any organic relations or connections with any of these organizations) and will seek to achieve fraternal co-operation with these organizations in the various trade union campaigns in the course of the struggles."

Unity, published monthly in Toronto, is designated organ of the Workers' Unity League.

AFFILIATES OF THE W.U.L.

At the close of 1934 the Workers' Unity League had in affiliation 11 central organizations, 12 district councils, and 30 directly chartered local unions. When application was made to the League for particulars concerning the various affiliated bodies and directly chartered locals, the Department was advised that negotiations had been going on for some time between representatives of the Workers' Unity League and representatives of the International Unions, for the purpose of transferring the membership of the former into the latter unions. As a result of these negotiations all but two of the unions affiliated with the League have ceased to exist, their membership having been absorbed by locals of the international unions. Negotiations are now proceeding whereby the membership of the remaining two organizations will be taken into the international unions.

Ten local unions of the Mine Workers' Union of Canada and one local of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada made direct returns to the Department and show a combined total membership of 2,197.

The list following shows the location together with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries of the eleven local unions. In view of the reported amalgamation of the various local branch unions of the League with international unions, all those not reporting have been dropped from the list.

XV ORGANIZED WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Trade Union Membership in Seventy Countries—International Federation of Trade Unions—General Council Meeting—Executive Meeting in Paris—Conference of International Federation of Trade Unions and Labour and Socialist International—International Trade Federations—Membership of the I.F.T.U.—Chief Officers of the Federation—Other International Organizations—Membership of British Trades Union Congress—Chief Officers—American Federation of Labor—Membership—Organizations in Affiliation with the Federation—Officers of the A.F. of L.

In addition to showing the trade union membership of the various organizations in Canada, the Department, in this chapter, desires to present such reliable information as was possible to secure concerning organized wage-earners throughout the world. With the exception of the trade union membership for Canada and the United States which are taken from departmental records, the figures in the accompanying table were supplied by the general secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions and represent the number of organized workers at the latest date for which particulars were available. For the seventy countries appearing in the appended table the total for all classes of workers was 40,875,357, the number for seventy countries in 1934 being 41,206,689. As has been mentioned in earlier issues of this report, in Great Britain, Canada and other British countries, as well as in the United States, there is a more clearly defined limitation to the scope of trade union organization than prevails in some of the European countries, where there are organized bodies which operate along political rather than industrial lines, and the membership of which is not confined strictly to wage-earners. With this exception, the figures for the various countries are given as follows:—

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

In earlier issues of this report reference has been made to the International Secretariat, formed in 1901, which in 1913, on the proposal of the fraternal delegate from the American Federation of Labor, changed its name to the International Federation of Trade Unions. The headquarters of the Federation was located originally at Amsterdam, Holland, but later transferred to Berlin, Germany. In the interval from the start of the World War to the entry of the United States, the American Federation of Labor being desirous of maintaining absolute neutrality refrained from sending the per capita tax to headquarters of the I.F.T.U., which was then in Berlin, Germany, and it was reported, that this was the means of causing disintegration of the International Federation. In 1919 a meeting was held in Amsterdam, Holland, when the affairs of the old federation were closed out and a new organization formed, details of which were contained in the 1919 report. Although the representatives of the American Federation of Labor were present at the reorganization of the I.F.T.U., the affiliation was not continued, the American Federation claiming that the rate of per capita was too high, and at the same time objecting to the issuance by the executive officers of the I.F.T.U., of a declaration of policy with which they were at variance. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada became an affiliate in June, 1920, since which time Mr. Tom Moore, and Mr. P. M. Draper, former president and secretary-treasurer respectively have been on the general council of the Federation, the former as representative and the last named as substitute.

An executive meeting of the I.F.T.U. was held in Paris, France, on March 13-14, 1935, at which preparations were made for the general council meeting in Copenhagen, Denmark, which was fixed for May 21-23. At this meeting it was decided in principle to send a delegation to South America to raise fresh funds for relief work in Spain.

To a communication from the Red International of Labour Unions on the question of "unity of action" the executive agreed that a reply should be sent confirming the attitude of the I.F.T.U.

GENERAL COUNCIL MEETING

At the general council meeting of the I.F.T.U. representatives of affiliated national centres from the following countries were present: Belgium; Czechoslovakia; Denmark; Estonia; Finland; France; Great Britain; Holland; Luxemburg; Sweden, and Switzerland. Delegates from the Norwegian National Centre also attended. The representatives of Greece, India, Ireland, Mexico, Spain, and the United States sent apologies for non-attendance. The following International Trade Secretariats were represented: Bookbinders; Building and Woodworkers; Civil Servants; Clothing Workers; Diamond Workers' Employees; Enginemen and Stokers; Factory Workers; Food and Drink Workers; Hairdressers; Hatters; Leather Workers; Miners; Painters; Pottery Workers; Public Services; Teachers; Textile Workers; Tobacco Workers; Transport Workers, and Typographers. Mr. Butler, Director, and A. Staal represented the International Labour Office, Geneva, Switzerland, while Adler and Anderson were in attendance as fraternal delegates from the Labour and Socialist International. The Prime Minister of Denmark as well as the executive of the Danish National Centre also took part in the meeting.

The general secretary pointed out in particular that although trade union membership had fallen in a number of countries as a result of the widespread unemployment, certain countries had been able in spite of the crisis, to register a considerable increase in membership. Mention was made of the reaffiliation of the Dantzig Trade Union Centre. The proposal for setting up an international centre within the I.F.T.U. Secretariat in order to intensify and co-ordinate educational work was unanimously adopted.

Following a lengthy discussion on the subject of "the boycott against Nazi Germany," a resolution was adopted protesting against the murder of Huseman (the trade union leader) and demanding, inter alia, the setting up of an international commission of enquiry into alleged Nazi atrocities. The executive of the I.F.T.U. was instructed to get into contact and to collaborate with all other institutions and bodies, in addition to the L.S.I. (Labour and Socialist International) if by this means the boycott against Nazi Germany could be intensified. Mr. H. Butler, Director of the I.L.O., spoke on the general policy of that body and particularly on the problem of the forty-hour week.

A comprehensive report on the "Fight Against War and Disarmament" presented by Mr. Jouhaux (France) led to a long discussion in which Mr. Adler spoke on behalf of the Labour and Socialist International. It was unanimously decided to instruct the executive to take, in conjunction with the L.S.I., all the measures necessary to make the anti-war action of the international labour movement a guarantee for collective peace.

At the close of a debate on the question of "trade union unity" the general council unanimously adopted a resolution confirming the attitude taken by the I.F.T.U., approving the attitude and action of the executive and finally emphasizing once again that the I.F.T.U. had already clearly expressed its viewpoint at the 1934 general council meeting in Weymouth, England, particulars of which were given in this Report for 1934.

The next general council of the I.F.T.U. will be held in London, England, in connection with the British Trades Union Congress.

EXECUTIVE MEETS IN PARIS

At the executive meeting of the I.F.T.U. held in Paris, France, July 2-3, 1935, it was decided to nominate W. M. Citrine (Great Britain), L. Jouhaux (France), and W. Schevenels, general secretary, as the Federation members on the joint committee to be formed with the Labour and Socialist International for carrying on the anti-war work.

It was further agreed that when the International Trade Union Congress is being held in London in 1936, an international educational conference shall be held in order to extend present contacts and lay down an outline for workers' educational activities.

With the object of examining the question of the fusion of the Factory, Glass and Pottery Workers' Secretariats, the general secretary was instructed to convene a conference of representatives of these bodies.

The executive further empowered the general secretary to call a meeting of the International Committee of Trade Union Women to consider inter alia, the question of the international legal status of women, which was to come up at the September meeting of the League of Nations Assembly.

CONFERENCE OF INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND LABOUR AND SOCIALIST INTERNATIONAL

On September 6, 1935, a joint conference of the I.F.T.U. and L.S.I. met at Geneva, Switzerland, and attended by fifty-two delegates, representing the Socialist Parties and the National Trade Union centres of twelve countries. Representatives of eleven of the International Trade Secretariats also took part in the proceedings, the objects of which were to consider the problem presented by the Italo-Abyssinian dispute. After an exchange of views on the question, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

"This special conference of the International Federation of Trade Unions and the Labour and Socialist International, meeting at Geneva on the 6th September, 1935, confirms the unwavering allegiance of the two internationals to the cause of peace and condemns the aggressive attitude of Fascist Italy towards Abyssinia.

"In view of the present situation, the Conference, in the name of millions of workers, makes a supreme appeal to the League of Nations to fulfil its mission to preserve peace and ensure the supremacy of right over might.

"The imminent danger of war plainly indicates the urgent duty of the League and makes it imperative that the Covenant, the whole Covenant, be now applied, including the sanctions provided for in the Covenant.

"The two internationals, conscious of their duties towards peace, are ready to fulfil them in their entirety, and confidently assure the League of the whole-hearted support of the workers, both men and women, they represent, in any measures it may take for the effective application of whatever sanctions may be necessary against the aggressor.

"The Joint Committee and the secretaries of the two internationals were instructed to get into touch immediately with all affiliated political and Trade Union organizations with a view to making a concrete study of all steps to be taken for the purpose of (1) increasing the pressure brought to bear on the League of Nations and the various Governments in order to ensure that the obligations arising out of the Covenant shall be fully implemented; (2) arousing public opinion throughout the world and preparing it for action against the aggressor; and (3) preparing the decisions to be adopted at the above-mentioned special Conference, by both Trade Union and political organizations, in view of the various eventualities which may arise."

At a subsequent joint conference held at Brussels, Belgium, on October 12, 1935, of representatives of the I.F.T.U. and L.S.I. the following resolution was adopted after a short exchange of views:

"This joint meeting of the Labour and Socialist International and the International Federation of Trade Unions, in conference at Brussels on October 12, 1935, desires to place on record our satisfaction at the decision of the League of Nations in declaring that the aggressor in the Italo-Abyssinian dispute is Italy. In the name of humanity and civilization it requests that prompt and effective sanctions be taken to check and swiftly put an end to this monstrous outrage upon international law.

"It assures the League of Nations of the whole-hearted support of all the organizations it represents in the application of whatever sanctions may be necessary to stop this outrageous war and to restore peace.

"It urgently desires that no delay shall occur in specifying the sanctions to be applied and the extent to which it is proposed they should be employed.

"It hopes that the Italian Government will be firmly informed that in the ultimate terms of settlement it shall derive no benefit from its acts of aggression.

"The organizations represented at the Joint Conference reaffirm the decisions taken at Geneva on September 6 and at Paris on September 27, and declare that they have taken all practical steps to fulfil them, they placing at the disposal of the League of Nations the strength of the Workers' organizations and the power of Labour opinion for the defence of peace and right."

The conference also unanimously agreed on the following telegram being sent to Benes, president of the League Assembly, reaffirming the standpoint of the workers and their preparedness to support all sanctions:—

The Joint Conference of the International Federation of Trade Unions and the Labour and Socialist International, meeting in Brussels on October 12, feels that only rapid and firm sanctions applied against Italy, the violator of the peace, can put a rapid end to Italy's aggression against Abyssinia, and also reduce the serious dangers which threaten peace in the rest of the world. It therefore hopes that the League of Nations will apply without delay the sanctions necessary promptly and effectively to prevent Italy from continuing the war.

The two internationals, conscious of their duties towards peace, are ready to fulfil them in their entirety, and confidently assure the League of the whole-hearted support of the workers, both women and men, they represent, in any measures it may take for the effective application of whatever sanctions may be necessary against the aggressor.

It calls upon the League of Nations to declare immediately that it will restore peace on the basis of law, as defined by the Covenant, and will refuse to take account of the advantages which the aggressor hopes to derive from his violence.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE FEDERATIONS

For the purpose of maintaining relations between organizations of a particular craft in the various countries, and of co-ordinating their activities, international trade federations (or secretaries) have been established. Of the 29 known trade federations, 28 are identified with the International Federation of Trade Unions, the exception being the International Federation of Radiotelegraphers. All of these federations have their headquarters in Europe, and include in their affiliations the trade unions of many countries, the combined membership in some instances reaching considerably over the million mark. According to the latest information, nine of these international trade federations have in affiliation labour organizations which have local branches in Canada, their names and those of the affiliates with Canadian branches being: (1) International Federation of Radiotelegraphists, affiliate, Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; (2) International Clothing Workers' Federation, affiliates International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union, International Fur Workers' Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; (3) International Miners' Federation, affiliate United Mine Workers of America; (4) International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliate the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; (5) International Union of Federations of Workers in the Food and Drink Trades, affiliate Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union; (6) International Federation of Building and Woodworkers, affiliate the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; (7) International Secretariat of Painters and Kindred Trades, affiliate Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America; (8) International Metal Workers' Federation, affiliate International Association of Machinists; (9) Postal Employees' International, affiliates Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada and the National Federation of Post Office Clerks of the United States. There is one international federation which has in affiliation an organization operating in the United States, but which has no branches in Canada, viz., the Universal Alliance of Diamond Workers, affiliate Diamond Workers' Protective Union of America. All of the above-mentioned affiliates of the respective international trade federations, except the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, and the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, are identified with the American Federation of Labor. The names of the remaining eighteen international trade secretariats are as follows: International Federation of Bookbinders and Kindred Trades; International Typographical Secretariat; International Federation of General Factory Workers; International Union of Hairdressers; International Federation of Glassworkers; International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers; International Landworkers' Federation; International Federation of Lithographers and Kindred Trades; International Federation of Workers in Public Services; International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees; International Secretariat of Stone Workers; International Secretariat of Tobacco Workers; International Federation of Textile Workers' Association; International Federation of Pottery Workers; International Federation of Teachers; International Federation of Boot and Shoe Operatives and Leather Workers; International Federation of Hatters; International Federation of Civil Servants, and the International Federation of Enginemen and Firemen.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE I.F.T.U.

In 1904, the earliest year for which figures are available, the International Federation of Trade Unions comprised the national centres (chief labour organizations) of fourteen countries with a combined membership of 2,372,975. In 1912 the affiliations had risen to nineteen and the membership was 7,394,461. No further information as to numerical standing was published until the Amsterdam Congress in July, 1919, when the affiliates numbered fourteen and the membership given at 17,633,000. There were in 1934 twenty-eight national centres in affiliation with a total reported membership of 8,671,917.

OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

There are certain organizations of socialist and labour parties in various countries throughout the world having for their objects the improvement of social and labour conditions through political action. The original organization of this kind and from which present organizations have developed was the International Workingmen's Association, known as the First International, founded in 1864 and dissolved in 1876. There are seven main international organizations as follows: International Federation of Trade Unions, Paris, France (referred to previously); Christian (Roman Catholic) concentrated in the Christian International of Utrecht (referred to in Chapter VI, National Catholic Unions); Labour and Socialist International, which works in close co-operation with the I.F.T.U., there being joint committees on various subjects, as previously shown in this chapter; Communist, concentrated in the Red International of Labour Unions of Moscow; Anarchist, concentrated in the International Working Men's Association, Madrid (formerly Berlin); Independent, concentrated in the International Federation of Neutral Trade Unions, Utrecht, and the trade unions of the two Americas, concentrated in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, Washington, D.C.

CONNECTION OF CANADIAN BRANCHES OF ORGANIZATIONS AFFILIATED WITH B.T.U.C. SEVERED

For many years there were in Canada branches of organizations with headquarters in the United Kingdom affiliated with the British Trades Union Congress. The connection of the last of these was severed in 1925 when the Canadian locals of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners were granted complete self-government, becoming the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, which organization is now merged with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The American Federation of Labor held its fifty-fifth annual convention at Atlantic City, New Jersey, October 7-19, 1935. There were 510 accredited delegates present, the representation being divided as follows: 361 delegates representing 93 international and national unions, while 3 departments, 33 state federations, 87 city central bodies (trades and labour councils), 22 local trade and federal labour unions were represented by one delegate each. Of the three fraternal delegates present, one represented the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and two from the British Trades Union Congress.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

In 1881, the year the American Federation was formed, the membership was less than 5,000. According to the report presented by the secretary-treasurer the average paid-up membership at the end of the fiscal year (August 31, 1935) was 3,045,347, an increase over that for 1934 of 437,336. The average paid-up membership for the past thirty-nine years is as follows:—

In reporting on the membership of the Federation, the secretary-treasurer pointed out that the international and national unions were required to pay per capita tax upon their fully paid-up memberships only and that therefore the membership reported did not include the members who were unemployed during the fiscal year.

ORGANIZATIONS IN AFFILIATION WITH THE FEDERATION

The total affiliations at the close of the fiscal year (August 31, 1935) included 109 national and international unions representing 31,291 local branches and 1,364 local trade and federal labour unions, making in all 32,655 branches. Under charter also from the Federation are 4 departments, 49 state federations and 730 city central bodies. The local branches, which constitute the national and international organizations, are the source from which nearly all the funds are secured to carry on the activities in the labour movement; the local branches also constitute the state federations, city central bodies and local department councils. There were 522 of the last named, the charters for which were issued from the federation departments.

In preceding chapters reference has been made to the various classes of labour organizations operating in the Dominion. In this chapter is collected a number of interesting items dealing with varying phases of labour activity which have come to the notice of the Department.

WATERFRONT WORKERS' DISPUTE IN BRITISH COLUMBIA SUBJECT OF JUDICIAL INQUIRY

An outstanding event of the year was a strike of Longshoremen in Vancouver, and a sympathetic strike of members of other organizations of water transport workers in Vancouver and neighbouring British Columbia ports, which began in June and ended in December.

On September 10, 1935, the Honourable Mr. Justice H. H. Davis of the Supreme Court of Canada, was, in accordance with Section 65 of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, appointed a commissioner under the provisions of Part 1 of the Inquiries Act to inquire into an industrial dispute involving the Shipping Federation of British Columbia and some 2,500 members of the Longshoremen and Water-Transport Workers of Canada, and affiliated organizations. One of these was the Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association, a Canadian central body formed in 1924, and which, in 1934, reported one affiliate and 900 members. The text of the Commissioner's report is given in the November, 1935, issue of the Labour Gazette, pages 982-995. Further particulars concerning the organizations involved in this dispute are given in Chapter VII, Canadian Central Organizations. The circumstances are also outlined in the Annual Report of the Department for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1936. On May 22 the Shipping Federation signed an agreement with two independent organizations of longshoremen organized in 1935, the Canadian Waterfront Workers' Association and the Vancouver Longshoremen's Association which included in their membership former members of the Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association. The terms of this agreement superseded the arrangements with these two organizations prior to the signing of the agreement and which had been in effect from June 15, 1935. The agreement also provided for an increase in wages of 5c. and up per hour.

AGREEMENT REACHED IN BUILDING TRADES DISPUTE

A dispute arose in the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor when the delegates in attendance at the Department's convention held at San Francisco, California, September, 1934, refused to seat the delegates representing three building trades organizations, viz, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. These organizations immediately appealed the decision of the convention to the executive council of the American Federation of Labor. The decision of the council was to the effect that the three organizations (referred to above) were affiliated with the Building Trades Department when that body convened its convention, and could not be legally denied the right of representation in said convention. The Building Trades Department, through its president and secretary, appealed from the decision of the executive council to the American Federation of Labor Convention. The whole question was referred to the committee on adjustment, which recommended that the executive council continue its efforts to effect a settlement, failing which, the president of the American Federation of Labor was instructed to call a new convention of the Building Trades Department within forty-five days from the adjournment of the convention for the purpose of electing officers and transacting such other business as came before it. Failing to reach a settlement in the dispute, President Green sent out a convention call to nineteen building trades organizations, said meeting to be held at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor on November 26, 1934. Only seven of the nineteen organizations were represented at the convention. At this meeting officers were elected, a constitution adopted, and the business of the Department transacted. Following the convention legal proceedings were instituted by the newly elected officers to secure possession of books, papers, and records of the Department. By the decision of a Supreme Court Justice, the calling of a convention of the Building Trades Department by President Green was not valid, in as much as only the President of the Department was authorized to call a convention and his term of office did not expire until January 1, 1935. The court also ruled that the business transacted at the San Francisco convention of the Department in 1934 was illegal. In June, 1935, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor directed that the president call another convention of the Building Trades Department, but in the interval a mediation committee composed of three members of the executive be appointed to endeavour to bring about a settlement. The chairman of the committee, after holding a number of conferences, reported that they had found it impossible to compose the differences between the two groups, whereupon the president called another convention of all building trades unions to meet in the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor on August 1, 1935. Again seven of the nineteen organizations eligible to attend were present and the same officers elected, as at the previous convention, for the period ending January 1, 1936. The executive committee, realizing the fact that continued division among the building trades organizations would operate to the great disadvantage of those directly involved and cause grave concern among the whole membership of the American Federation of Labor, made further efforts to bring about a settlement. Through the mediation of George M. Harrison, president of the Railway and Steamship Clerks, the following memorandum of understanding in the settlement of the dispute was presented to the 1935 convention of the American Federation of Labor meeting at Atlantic City, N.J., and unanimously adopted:—

SETTLEMENT OF BUILDING TRADES DEPARTMENT CONTROVERSY

(1) The selection of a committee of six, three from each side to the dispute, with a disinterested person being added in case of a disagreement.

(2) This committee to meet within twenty-four hours after acceptance of the memorandum of agreement, for the purpose of adjusting all pending difficulties.

(3) When the committee has concluded its work a convention of the Department will be called and officers elected. Pending this neither group will be recognized by the American Federation of Labor and all other matters shall remain in status quo ante as of September 1, 1934.

(4) When questions in controversy have been disposed of all actions pending in the court shall be withdrawn.

(5) Named the nineteen organizations entitled to participate in convention of the Department.

(6) The appointing of Vice-President George M. Harrison to render a decision on any dispute over the interpretation or application of the terms of the agreement.

(7) The matter to be submitted to the present convention of the American Federation of Labor as a disposition of the Building Trades Department controversy.

The report of the special mediation committee as made public by President Green was in part as follows:—

"Representatives of nineteen craft unions comprising the powerful Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor met in Washington on December 4, and composed all differences.

"At the same time it was announced that a building trades convention will be held in Washington on February 6.

"The understanding calls for a comprehensive plan for the settlement of jurisdictional disputes by referee within the organizations themselves. This plan by referee will be announced in full at the February convention.

"The announcement closes a controversy of eighteen months' duration. Beginning at San Francisco convention in September, 1934, the dispute grew in dimensions, found its way into the courts, and did not end until a special mediator appointed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor effected a preliminary settlement at the 1935 Atlantic City convention in October."

JOHN L. LEWIS HEADS COMMITTEE FOR INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION

On November 9, 1935, a statement was issued at Washington, D.C., announcing the formation of a "Committee on Industrial Organization." This committee, which is headed by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, with Chas. P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union, as secretary, is composed of representatives of the following organizations:—

United Mine Workers of America; International Typographical Union; Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; International Ladies' Garment Workers Union; United Textile Workers of America; Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America; United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

"Because of the urgency of organizing the unorganized in the basic industries of America, the Committee for Industrial Organization has been formed. Its purpose is that outlined in the Minority Report of the Resolutions Committee submitted to the convention of the American Federation of Labor in Atlantic City. That is, it has been formed for the purpose of encouraging and promoting the organization of the unorganized workers in mass production and other industries upon an industrial basis. Its aim is to foster recognition and acceptance of collective bargaining in such basic industries; to counsel and advise unorganized and newly organized groups of workers; to bring them under the banner and in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor as industrial organizations."

JOHN L. LEWIS RESIGNS FROM VICE-PRESIDENCY OF THE AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

On November 23, John L. Lewis resigned as eleventh vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, his resignation being conveyed to president Green in the following message: "Effective this date, I resign as vice-president of the American Federation of Labor."

President Green, in a letter under date of November 23, forwarded to the officials of the eight organizations represented on the new committee, advised against such action and emphasized the danger of division and discord which might follow. The president stated in part; "I deem it my official duty, as president of the American Federation of Labor, to express my feelings of apprehension over the grave consequences which might follow from the formation of an organization within the American Federation of Labor, even though it might be claimed that said organization is formed for the achievement of a laudable purpose."

THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR ISSUES STATEMENT

The Committee for Industrial Organization pledges help to independent bodies according to the following statement issued by John Brophy, executive director: "We are willing to co-operate with non-American Federation of Labor unions for the organization of the workers, having in mind our purpose of bringing them into the American Federation of Labor." He emphasized "that unity and not division in labour ranks was the committee's aim and called attention to the declared purpose of the committee, which is to organize and promote organization of the workers in the mass production and unorganized industries of the nation and affiliation with the American Federation of Labor."

TOM MOORE APPOINTED A MEMBER OF THE EMPLOYMENT AND SOCIAL INSURANCE COMMISSION

The Federal Parliament, in order to provide for a national employment service and insurance against unemployment, and for other forms of social insurance and for the purpose of maintaining on equitable terms, interprovincial and international trade, passed the Employment and Social Insurance Act, to which Royal assent was given on June 28, 1935. The Act also authorized the creation of a National fund out of which benefits to unemployed persons throughout Canada will be payable and provided for the levying of contributions from employers and workers for the maintaining of the said fund and for contributions thereto by the Dominion. Provision was made for the administration of the Act by a commission, which was to consist of a Chief Commissioner and two other commissioners appointed by the Governor in Council. Of the two commissioners, one was to be appointed after consultation with organizations representative of workers, and the other after consultation with organizations representative of Employers. The Government selected Mr. Tom Moore, at that time president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, as the commissioner representing the workers of Canada. Upon his appointment to the commission, Mr. Moore forwarded to the executive and council, his resignation from the office of President of the Congress, a position to which he was elected annually since 1918. Other organizations on which Mr. Moore served on the executive were:

Canadian Council on Child and Family Welfare; National Safety League; Dominion Fire Prevention Association; League of Nations Society in Canada; Frontier College; Canadian Council on Immigration of Women; American Association for Labor Legislation, etc. From 1922 to 1933, Mr. Moore was a member of the Board of Directors of the Canadian National Railways. For thirteen years he was one of the six workers' members of the governing body (Executive Council) of the International Labour Organization, as well as serving on a Royal Commission and attending Labour Conferences in various parts of the world.

ELECTRICAL UNION SUED AS A TRUST

According to information received in the Department, the National Electrical Manufacturers Association and fourteen of its members filed a joint complaint in the United States District Court against Local No. 3 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, charging conspiracy to ruin the business of the Association's members in Greater New York. Damages approximating $1,000,000 are sought in the action, which is brought under the Sherman Anti-Trust Law regulating interstate commerce. The action brought against the union and its officers is stated to be a "test case" which would be "nation-wide in its implications" In addition to charging "conspiracy in restraint of trade" the action includes "coercion of New York City property-owners, builders, architects and contractors, through fear of strikes and boycotts, to refrain from buying electrical equipment manufactured by any of the plaintiffs." The report further states that "the court is asked to grant temporary and permanent injunction requiring the union and its officers to stop this alleged interference."

The National Electrical Manufacturers Association is composed of more than 400 manufacturers and these produce approximately 80 per cent of the total volume of electrical products in the area affected. The union involved is made up of several thousand journey-men electricians, and electrical workers.

CHANGES IN THE NAMES OF ORGANIZATIONS

During the year the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America dropped the last two words, the new title being Commercial Telegraphers' Union.

The name of the International Pocketbook Workers' Union has been changed to read—The International Pocketbook Workers' Union of the United States of America and Canada.

The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Motor Coach Employees of America changed its name to Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America.

DECEASED TRADE UNION OFFICIALS

During the year 1935 a number of trade union officials passed away. One of these was Martin F. Ryan who died January 17, in Kansas City, Mo. He was treasurer of the American Federation of Labor since 1925, having been elected a vice-president of that body two years previously. The late Mr. Ryan was also general president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, a position to which he was elected in 1909, and re-elected by acclamation each year with but one exception.

The second official of this organization to be called by death was Frank McKenna, general vice-president for Canada from September, 1913, to February 17, 1935. A short time after attending the funeral of general president Ryan, he suffered an acute attack of appendicitis which necessitated an immediate operation, from which he failed to recover, passing away February 17, at Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal. In 1909 he was elected general chairman, joint protective board, Canadian Pacific Railway; in 1918 elected vice-president of Division No. 4, Railway Employees Department, American Federation of Labor, and in 1926 represented the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada as delegate to the British Trades Union Congress. In 1932 he was appointed by the Federal Government a member of the Board of the Dominion National Health Council.

Another executive officer of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen to succumb was J. M. Ellis, general secretary-treasurer, whose death occurred at Kansas City, Mo., on September 18. He had been unanimously re-elected as general secretary-treasurer of the organization at the Montreal convention just thirteen days prior to his demise. The late Mr. Ellis was first elected to the position of general secretary-treasurer at the 1925 Kansas City Convention.

George T. Thornton, president of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America collapsed following a heart attack and died at his home in South Boston, Mass., on January 21. In 1904 he was elected as third vice-president of the organization and in 1928 at the eleventh biennial and fifty-second International union convention was elected president, having previously filled the office of second and first vice-president.

Joseph P. Hunter, sixth general vice-president of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, died suddenly at his home, Niagara Falls, Ont., Sunday, January 20, 1935. After returning from the January meeting of the executive board at Lafayette, Ind., where he had been ill several days, he suffered a relapse and died a few hours after being taken to the hospital. The first regular employment for the Brotherhood commenced in 1916 when he was appointed general organizer, and following the death of the sixth vice-president A. E. Scott, he was elected, in 1920, to fill the vacancy and had held the office since that time.

Other trade union officers who died during 1935, were: (1) Charles M. Moore, general vice-president, United Association of Plumbers and Steam Fitters of the United States and Canada, October 21; (2) Joseph F. Murphy, secretary, International Union of Elevator Constructors, May 21; (3) John M. MacCauley, president, Quarry Workers' International Union of North America, May 27; (4) William B. Fitzgerald, first vice-president, Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees of America, August 16; (5) J. P. O'Donnell, vice-president, International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, May 25; (6) Edward Dement, vice-president, Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers' International Association, January 5; (7) Frederick K. Harries, secretary-treasurer, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, August 11; (8) Fred C. Gassman, vice-president, Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees, July 18; (9) Ben. Pitts, vice-president, Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, October 2.

XVII. REGISTRATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND UNION LABELS

Trade Unions Act Passed in 1872 Providing for the Registering of Trade Unions—List of Unions Registered—Professional Syndicates Act Passed in 1924—Number of Organizations Registered Under This Act—Registration of Union Labels.

In 1872 the Dominion Parliament enacted the Trade Unions Act, under the provisions of which statute unions have the privilege of registering, and which proceeding exempts them from liability for prosecution for being in restraint of trade. REGISTRATION UNDER THE PROFESSIONAL SYNDICATES ACT

In 1924 the Quebec Legislature passed the Professional Syndicates Act, under which law, after the performance of certain formalities, a union is constituted a corporation enjoying civil rights, and which inter alia, authorizes the registered union to "enter into contracts or agreements with all other syndicates, societies, undertakings or persons respecting the attainment of their objects, and particularly such as relate to the collective conditions of labour." Up to the close of 1934, 8 delegate bodies and 68 syndicates had been registered under the Act. During 1935, one delegate body and 46 other labour organizations were registered, making a total of 123 registrations. The list following gives the names and location of the existing labour bodies which have registered under the Professional Syndicates Act, in order of registration:—

XVIII. STATISTICS OF TRADE UNIONISTS IN CANADA

Information Supplied by Union Officials—Membership and Branches of International Organizations—Canadian Group, With the Inclusion of the One Big Union Shows Large Gain—Independents Have an Increase in Membership—Grand Total of Trade Unionists in the Dominion—Reported Female Membership—International and Canadian Central Organizations Operating in Canada—Division of Branches by Provinces—Location by Cities—Affiliation of Local Units With Federations, District Councils and Trades and Labour Councils—Membership of All Classes of Organized Workers by Localities.

The figures published in this chapter, showing the numerical strength of International and Canadian labour organizations and their affiliations, have been prepared from information, which was, in the main, supplied early in 1936 by officials of the central bodies, the particulars furnished giving the standing at the close of 1935. Application for information was made by the Department to every known International and Canadian Central organization, and in the great majority of cases, the particulars solicited were promptly supplied, very few failing to comply with the Department's request. The figures recorded for the organizations which did not report, or only sent in partial returns, have been secured from departmental records or other reliable sources, but where it has been necessary to use the same information as appeared in the previous report, such figures are printed in italics.

In table 1, giving the number of local unions and membership of international organizations in Canada, the figures have been arranged to show, respectively, (1) the number of branches, and (2) the membership of each organization in Canada and elsewhere. Defining the term "elsewhere" it may be mentioned that several internationals have local branches in countries other than the United States and Canada. Among these are the following: (1) The American Federation of Labor and the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, with branches in the Philippine Islands and Panama; (2) the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, and the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters all have branches in the Panama Canal Zone; (3) the Cigarmakers' International Union and the Leather Workers' International Union, with branches in the Philippine Islands; (4) the Order of Railway Conductors, with a division in Mexico; (5) the International Seamen's Union, the Operative Plasterers' International Association, and the American Federation of Musicians, with branches in the Hawaiian Islands; (6) the International Typographical Union with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (7) the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and Panama; (8) the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with branches in Panama and Newfoundland; (9) the International Association of Machinists, with branches in Panama, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (10) the Journeymen Tailors' Union, the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with branches in Newfoundland.

One or more Canadian branches of the following organizations have been re-established during the past year: Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America; International Pocket Book Workers' Union of the United States of America and Canada, and the United Slate, Tile and Composition Roofers', Damp and Waterproof Workers' Association. The name of the Cooper's International Union of North America has been omitted by reason of having lost their Canadian affiliations. The affiliate in the United States of the One Big Union having ceased to function, the name of the central organization has been removed from the international group and placed with the Canadian organizations.

At the close of 1935 there were 80 of what are commonly termed international craft unions with one or more local branches in Canada, as well as one which had a number of members resident in Canada, which together with the one international industrial union known as the Industrial Workers of the World, make a total of 82 international organizations operating in the Dominion, one more than the number recorded in 1934.

The figures in the accompanying table indicate that there were in the Dominion at the close of the year 1,782 local branches of what are known as international craft organizations, an increase of 32. The Industrial Workers of the World reported 12 local unions, a gain of 1. The total branches in Canada of all classes of international bodies were 1,794, a loss of 15 as compared with the number of branches included in the international group in 1934, which is accounted for by the transference to the Canadian union group of the One Big Union, which in 1934 had 48 branches. The reported membership and that secured from other reliable sources gives the international craft organizations a total of 139,370, an increase of 5,701. The Industrial Workers of the World reported a Canadian membership of 4,200. These figures indicate that the aggregate of members in the Dominion at the close of 1935, belonging to the organizations whose names are printed in the accompanying table was 143,570, a decrease of 17,834. By adding the membership of the One Big Union, now transferred to the Canadian group, and which in 1934, reported a membership of 23,580, there would be actually a gain in total membership of international organizations of 5,746. In 1934 the number of branches reported for this group was 1,809, with a combined membership of 161,404. The highest Canadian membership of international organizations was reached in 1920, when it stood at 267,247, comprised in 2,445 local branches.

The 81 international craft organizations whose names appear in the table represent a total of 30,297 branches under their respective jurisdictions, with a combined membership of 3,705,571; the Industrial Workers of the World had 93 local branches, with a membership of 33,560 (figures for 1934 used as no report received for 1935), making the grand total of branches represented by the 82 international organizations 30,390, and the aggregate membership 3,739,131. Only seven of the 82 international organizations having branches or members in Canada are not in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and between them they had 3,637 subordinate branches, with a combined membership of 329,797, of which 375 branches and 25,787 members are located in the Dominion. Of the remaining 3,552,779 members, comprised in 28,548 branches, identified with the 75 international craft organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, including the federal and trade unions of the federation itself, 117,783 belong to 1,419 Canadian branches. The total average paid-up membership as at August 31, 1935 (end of fiscal year) of the American Federation of Labor with its 109 affiliated national and international organizations and directly chartered local unions was reported at 3,045,347, but this number, as explained by the general secretary, "does not include all the members who were unemployed during the fiscal year."

An analysis of the returns received from the 82 international organizations shows that 51 made gains, 25 had losses, and 6 had no change in their standing.

The Maintenance-of-Way Employees stands first as to number of members in Canada, reporting 12,165, comprised in 193 local branches, a loss of 3 in branches, but a gain of 605 members. The United Mine Workers of America, which was first in 1934, ranks second, with 11,192, a loss of 891 members, comprised in 44 local branches, a gain of 4. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen occupies third position with 91 locals, an increase of 1, with a gain in membership of 502, now having 10,330. In fourth place was the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen with 9,727 members, a gain of 360, comprised in 113 local branches, no change. The Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, with 23 locals, a loss of 1, and a membership of 6,807, a decrease of 752, stands in fifth position, followed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, which had 6,500, a loss of 7, and 15 locals, the same number as reported for 1934. Other international organizations which reported a membership of 5,000 or over were: International Association of Machinists, 5,954, an increase of 354; Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, 5,832, a gain of 423; Order of Railroad Telegraphers, 5,000, an increase of 400.

The number of local branches and membership of the Canadian organizations are recorded in table No. 1A. At the close of 1935, the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the greater part of whose membership is drawn from the international organizations which have local branches in the Dominion, had 81 local unions under direct charters, 16 more than recorded in 1934, with a combined membership of 7,515, an increase of 1,364. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, whose membership is comprised in Canadian organizations, had 53 local unions under direct charters, a gain of 5, with an increase in membership of 361, now having 4,852. The remaining organizations in this group had between them 600 branches, with a combined membership of 67,711. These figures indicate that there were 51 more branch unions and 22,867 members than were recorded in 1934. This large increase is due to the inclusion of the locals and membership of the One Big Union, having been transferred from the international group when its only local in the United States ceased to function.

Besides the local branches affiliated with either the international or Canadian organizations there were 49 independent trade units in the Dominion, an increase of 7, the membership reported by 43 being 16,859. In 1934, 32 independent units out of 42 such bodies reported a membership of 10,452.

The membership of the National Catholic Unions as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada was 38,000, an increase of 7,154, and a gain in locals of 18, now having 140, seven of which are designated as study circles.

The information furnished the Department by the officers of labour organizations and that secured from other reliable sources indicates that there were in Canada at the close of the year, 2,728 local branch unions of all classes, a decrease of 12, divided as follows: International, 1,794; Canadian, 734; National Catholic, 140; Independent units, 49; Workers' Unity League 11, with a combined membership of 280,704, apportioned among the various groups as follows: International, 143,570; Canadian, 80,078; National Catholic, 38,000; Independent units, 16,859; Workers' Unity League, 2,197. Subdividing the international group it will be found that the craft unions in Canada number 1,782, with a combined membership of 139,370, and that the Industrial Workers of the World had 12 branches with 4,200 members.

As in the past, the department has endeavoured to secure particulars as to what proportion of trade union membership is made up of female workers. These particulars are difficult to obtain, many of the organizations not keeping separate records of male and female members. Of the 82 organizations whose names appear in the appended table only 13 furnished the desired information, the total number of female members reported in their respective jurisdictions (outside Canada) in which they have a combined membership of 3,739,131, being 46,150. This female membership is known to be far short of the actual number of women workers identified with organized labour, there being many other unions besides those reporting which admit female members, but, as stated above, keep no separate records of male and female members, and consequently made no report. The Canadian female membership of trade unions at the close of 1935, as reported by 156 of the local branch unions of all classes in the Dominion, was 9,072, divided by provinces as follows: Quebec, 3,431; Ontario, 2,808; British Columbia, 945; Manitoba, 830; Alberta, 575; Saskatchewan, 77; New Brunswick, 66; Nova Scotia, 48; Prince Edward Island, 10; Localities not specified (system divisions of Telegraphers), 282.

The National Women's Trade Union League, which has the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is a body designed to assist in the organization of women workers. The league, which has head offices in Washington, D.C., does not issue charters to trade unions of women, its efforts being directed towards encouraging the female workers to enter the existing labour organizations. The platform of the league embraces: (1) organization of workers into trade unions, (2) equal pay for equal work, (3) eight-hour day and 44-hour week, (4) an American standard of living, (5) full citizenship for women, (6) the outlawry of war, and (7) closer affiliation of women workers of all countries. Miss Rose Schneiderman is the president and Miss Elizabeth Christman is secretary, their office being located at 306 Machinists' Building, Ninth St. and Mt. Vernon Place, N.W., Washington, D.C.

(b) Includes only the unions directly chartered, i.e., those unions not affiliated through any international organization. The American Federation of Labor at the close of the fiscal year August 31, 1935, had 109 national and international unions affiliated, representing 31,291 locals, as well as four departments, 49 state federations, 730 city central bodies and 1,354 local trade and federal labour unions, making a total of 2,246 charters, representing an average membership of 3,045,347. Because of unemployment there were thousands of members for whom no per capita tax was paid by the affiliated unions, and who, therefore, are not included in the number of members reported.

(c) Includes 2 sub-branches.

(d) Includes sub-branches of local unions.

(e) Indicates that although suspended from membership in the A. F. of L., the Canadian membership is still affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

*Indicates that union is affiliated with American Federation of Labor.

Indicates that union has also affiliated its Canadian membership with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

The appended table gives the reported membership of the 23 Canadian central bodies.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, besides the affiliated membership of 60 international and 3 Canadian organizations, had 81 directly chartered local unions, a gain of 16. At the close of 1935 the membership as reported by the various affiliated organizations stood at 125,779 comprised in 1,552 local unions. The paid-up membership as reported by the general-secretary of the Congress for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1935, was 105,998 comprised in 1,534 local branch unions. This was a gain over the previous year of 2,574 members and 11 local unions.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour reported 53 local branch unions in direct affiliation, a gain of 5, with a combined membership of 4,852, an increase of 361. The report of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada showed a gain of 4 local branches and 1,660 members, now having a membership of 8,760 comprised in 33 local branches.

The Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association reported 150 members, a gain of 11, comprised in the same number of local branches, viz., 5.

The strongest numerically of the four organizations embracing employees of the Dominion Government whose names are recorded in the trade union group, is the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, which had 4,196 members, a loss of 59, comprised in 39 local branch unions, a decrease of 2. Ranking second in this particular group is the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, with 54 branches, same as in the previous year, and 1,610 members, a gain of 159. The Canadian Postal Employees occupies third place with 1,043 members, a loss of 113, comprised in 28 local branch unions, a decrease of 2. The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation reported the same number of branches as last year, viz., 18, with a membership of 924, a gain of 20.

The only organization of provincial government employees in the trade union group is the Civil Service Association of Alberta, which reported a gain of 2 locals, and 300 members, now having 12 locals and a membership of 1200.

The report received for the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada showed a membership of 362, a gain of 170, comprised in 6 branches, a loss of 1.

The reported membership of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union was 550, no change and 4 local branches, a loss of 1.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers had an increase in locals of 2, and in membership 89, now having 22 locals and 610 members.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees with 27 branches, no change, reported 1,327 members, an increase of 64.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters had 30 affiliated branches, with a membership of 1,692, but as 8 of the branches are affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, whose membership has been computed in table No. 1, only the membership of the 22 branches not under dual charters is recorded in the appended table, and numbers 519, a loss of 220.

The Brotherhood of Grain Elevator Employees of Canada, which appears in this group for the first time, reported 2 local branches, with a membership of 395.

The general-secretary of the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia failed to supply particulars concerning the main organization and as a result only the 3 locals which reported are shown, the membership as given being 56.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia reported a membership of 6,059, a gain of 797, comprised in 13 local branches, an increase of 2.

The One Big Union, as previously stated, has been transferred from the international group by reason of their having lost the only remaining local in the United States. The report received from the general-secretary showed a gain of 5 in locals, now having 53, with 24,055 members, an increase of 475.

The Printers' Union reported 3 local branch unions, an increase of 3, with a membership of 520, a gain of 270.

FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

The appended table contains the names of every known federation of trade union branches in the Dominion, together with the number of affiliations and combined membership. The figures indicated in this table do not in any way affect the number of branches or the total trade union membership in Canada, all of the branch unions having been included in the statements which appear in the preceding sections.

The Alberta Federation of Labour had 127 affiliations, a gain of 4, with a combined membership of 9,750, an increase of 1,850.

The New Brunswick Federation of Labour reported 43 unions in affiliation a gain of 4 over the number shown in 1934, with an increase in membership of 95, now having 3,059.

The New Brunswick Council of Labour, a new federation chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, reported 17 unions in affiliation, but failed to show the membership.

In the building trades group, Montreal stands first among the councils reporting membership, having 9,100, a gain of 345, comprised in 19 local unions the same number as reported in the previous year. Winnipeg Council ranks second with 10 affiliates, a loss of 3, and a membership of 2,290, a decrease of 2,710. Third place is taken by Vancouver, with a reported gain in membership of 150, now having 1,150, with the same number of affiliates as in 1934, 17. Hamilton follows with 12 affiliates, and 1,100 members, no change in affiliates or membership.

Of the fourteen printing trades councils, the Allied Printing Trades Council of Toronto and the Toronto Joint Board of Printing Trades Unions, share the lead in this group, both having 8 affiliates and a membership of 4,000. The number of affiliates in both cases are the same as reported last year, but the former shows a gain in membership of 1,300, while the latter shows no change. Montreal Federation of Printing and Kindred Trades comes next with 1,300 members comprised in 7 affiliated unions, showing no change from the previous year. This is followed by another Montreal body, the Allied Printing Trades Council, which reported 1,120 members, a gain of 61, the affiliates remaining the same, at 7. Vancouver ranks fifth, with 550 members comprised in 5 affiliates, a gain of 50 in membership but a loss of 1 affiliate.

The most important of the railway federations group is Division No. 4, which is under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor. It is composed of the internationally organized shop mechanics and car department employees of all Canadian railway lines. This body has in affiliation branch unions of 9 international organizations and several railway system federations, and comprises a total membership of 25,000, no change from 1934. C.P.R. System Federation No. 125 is the strongest body of those whose members are in the employ of a single railway company, being composed of the shop mechanics in affiliation with 9 international organizations. The total reported membership of No. 125 showed a gain of 100 now having 10,600. Occupying third position is C.N.R. This federation has in affiliation the local branch unions of 8 international organizations. The two strongest numerically of the local system federations of shop mechanics are those comprising employees of the Canadian Pacific Railway; the Montreal federation has 11 local unions in affiliation, 1 less than in 1934, with 3,050 members, an increase of 350; next is the Winnipeg federation with 8 local unions affiliated, an increase of 2, with 849 members, a loss of 394. Ranking third is the local federation in London, comprising shop mechanics employed in the C.N.R. shops, and which has 4 local affiliates, a gain of 1, with a membership of 650, an increase of 150. Heretofore this federation included the shop mechanics in both the C.P.R. and C.N.R. shops.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

The composition and functions of trades and labour councils have been discussed in an earlier chapter. The purpose of this statement is to show the extent to which these bodies represent the organized workers in the localities where they have been established. Generally trades and labour councils are confined to a particular city or town but in some instances they have jurisdiction over a number of adjacent localities. Twelve of the councils are operating under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and are designated by the word "national" and the affix "A.C.C.L.," two are chartered by the One Big Union, and are indicated by the letters "O.B.U.," while six are connected with the National Catholic Unions. The remaining 37 are operating under charters derived from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Sixteen of the latter councils are also chartered by the American Federation of Labor, a proceeding to which the Canadian body does not object. The number of unions given for each locality includes the branches of all classes of organizations named in the report.

There are two councils in the Province of Nova Scotia, both being located in Halifax, one of which is chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and reported 20 affiliates but failed to supply information concerning its membership. The other council is under charter from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and had 8 local branches in affiliation with a membership of 550.

Of the three councils in New Brunswick, two in Moncton and one in Saint John, the one in the last named city representing the international labour movement is the largest, having reported a membership of 2,700 comprised in 27 affiliated local unions. The Moncton council of the same class is second with 11 affiliates out of 27 in the city, and a membership of 1,177. The council in Moncton of the All-Canadian Congress reported 5 affiliates and 650 members.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP BY LOCALITIES

In this section is given the name of every locality in the Dominion in which exist one or more branches of the various classes of trade unions operating in Canada. Three tables are presented herewith, showing (1) the localities which have local branches of international (including the Industrial Workers' of the World), Canadian and independent units; (2) the localities which have National Catholic unions; (3) the localities which have local branches of affiliates of the Workers' Unity League of Canada. The names of the cities, towns, etc., are arranged alphabetically, and in order of provinces, proceeding from east to west. The number of branches reporting membership and the membership reported are also shown in this statement.

There were 2,728 trade union branches of all classes in Canada, 1,782 of which are affiliates of international craft organizations, 12 are branches of the Industrial Workers' of the World, 734 are branches of Canadian bodies, 140 are National Catholic Unions, 49 are independent units and 11 are branches of organizations affiliated with the Workers' Unity League. Reports as to membership, etc., were received from 2,289 local unions, which is 125 more than for the year 1934.

The membership reported from the head offices of all organizations with branches or members in Canada, or which has been secured from other reliable sources, totals 280,704, comprised as above stated in 2,728 branches. The membership given by the 2,289 reporting local branches was 206,036, or an average of 90 for each reporting branch. The remaining membership of 74,668 divided among the 439 non-reporting branches gives an average of 170 members. The membership of the system divisions of telegraphers cannot be recorded in any particular locality, and is therefore included under localities not specified. The 2,189 reporting branches of those classed as international, Canadian and independent units, show a membership of 192,114, an average of about 88; the total membership of 388 non-reporting branches is 48,393, an average of approximately 125. The 89 reporting National Catholic unions, out of a total of 140, give a membership of 11,725, an average of almost 84; the remaining membership of 26,275 divided among the 51 non-reporting unions indicates the high average of 515. The membership of the 11 reporting unions connected with the Workers' Unity League was 2,197 an average of almost 200.

Where a local union has a large membership, or where a skilled craft is highly organized, reports of numerical strength are invariably supplied. There are instances, however, where officers are not permitted to supply any information concerning the organization without first obtaining the sanction of the members, and this permission, it is known, has been refused at times, it being considered that the publication of such information might be injurious to their interests. The apathy of the local officers is very often responsible for the failure to furnish particulars, but for the present report the response to requests for membership was rather generous, the reporting unions, as above mentioned represent about 84 per cent of the total.

There were 17 branch unions in Canada which reported a membership of 1,000 or over, 7 more than the number in this class in 1934. Of these, thirteen are identified with the international craft organizations, and four are independent units.

The union with the largest membership is the independent unit—the Syndicated Longshoremen of Montreal—which reported 2,568 members. The international local branch union, whose jurisdiction is confined to a particular city, which has the largest following is Toronto branch No. 113 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees, the membership numbering 1,875; standing third is an independent unit, the Steel Workers' Union, Sault Ste Marie, with 1,727 members; the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees, No. 790, Montreal, occupies fourth place, with 1,527 members, followed by Toronto branch No. 149, American Federation of Musicians, with 1,454 members. Other branch unions with strong memberships are: Halifax branch No. 269, International Longshoremen's Association, 1,284 members; Vancouver branch No. 101, Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees, 1,244; Springhill branch No. 4514, United Mine Workers of America, 1,225; Montreal branch No. 49, United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, 1,200; Independent Longshoremen's Union, Montreal, 1,160; Toronto branch No. 91, International Typographical Union, 1,092; Saint John branch No. 273, International Longshoremen's Association, 1,060; Fishermen's Benevolent Society (Independent), Steveston, 1,050; Montreal branch No. 43, International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, 1,000.

Three of the system divisions of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, whose members are scattered over a wide area, report large followings, the strongest being System Division No. 1, covering Canadian National Railway lines east of Fort William which had 2,290; standing second is System Division No. 7, covering the Canadian Pacific Railway with 2,280 members, and System Division No. 43, with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Railways, western lines, is third with 1,369 members.

XIX. DISBURSEMENTS FOR TRADE UNION BENEFITS

Payments for Benefits Made by Five Canadian Central Labour Organizations and by Fifty-nine International Unions with Branches in Canada—Canadian Group Shows a Decrease, International Unions an Increase—Largest Disbursements are for Death Benefits—Large Expenditures by Four Railroad Brotherhoods—International Benefits in Detail—Amount Paid by Canadian Local Branch Unions to Their Own Members.

An important feature in the scheme of labour organization is the provision made by the majority of the trade unions for the payment of various classes of benefits, huge sums being expended annually, more especially by the railroad brotherhoods and some of the older international craft organizations. Of the 23 Canadian central labour bodies, 5 reported disbursements for benefits in 1935—5 paid death benefits, some of which is paid by insurance companies with which the organizations have group insurance policies, and other benefits were paid by 1. The total amount disbursed was reported at $27,371.24, a decrease of $56,722.76, as compared with the figures supplied by 11 organizations in 1934. The table following gives the names of the central bodies reporting payments for benefits, together with the amounts disbursed for the classes of benefits mentioned.

Of the 82 international organizations with branches or members in Canada, 54 reported from headquarters as to expenditures for benefits to members. These expenditures are for a one-year period, and while in some instances are for the fiscal year of the respective organizations, are in the main for the calendar year 1935. Of the 54 organizations, whose names appear in the accompanying table, death benefits were paid by 52, unemployed and travelling by 6, strike by 24, sick and accident by 15, and old age pensions by 7, viz., Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union; International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; Quarry Workers' International Union; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, and the International Typographical Union. The remaining amounts recorded in the column are for other purposes. Some of the remaining 23 organizations having Canadian affiliations have benefit features, the administration of which in some instances are under the control of the local branches. This is mainly accounted for by the fact that many local unions existed independently prior to their affiliation with the international "central," and some of these locals provided for death, sick and other benefits, for which a fund had been created. In this manner the benefit features have often become identified with the local branches, and their jurisdiction has been recognized. In other instances there is a division of control, sick benefits being administered by local branches, while the death, strike and pension funds are governed by the international body. The returns as to benefit payments furnished by the international organizations are for the whole membership. It is in very rare cases that separate reports are received as to disbursements made by international organizations to their Canadian members, the general officers stating that to prepare such a statement would entail considerable work, a task which they do not appear to be willing to undertake.

As for earlier reports, the Department has endeavoured to ascertain what benefits in addition to those disbursed by the central organizations were paid during 1935 to their own members from the funds under the immediate control of the various Canadian branches of international organizations. Application for this information was forwarded to every known local union, and of these 555 reported having made payments on account of benefits, the aggregate of such disbursements being given in a separate table.

One hundred and thirty-seven local branches of Canadian organizations, including 16 National Catholic unions, and 19 independent units reported disbursements for benefits to their own members.

The following statement shows the total reported expenditures made in Canada and the United States on account of benefits by the various international organizations operating in Canada as printed in a subsequent table.—

Unemployed and travelling benefits.. . . .	322,211
Strike benefits.. . . .	539,299
Sick and accident benefits.. . . .	3,622,073
Old age pensions and other benefits.. . . .	3,472,248
Total.. . . .	$18,131,478

These figures indicate that for 1935 the reported expenditure for benefits by the international organizations operating in Canada were $221,793 larger than the amount disbursed for the same classes of benefits in 1934. The expenditure for death benefits, though, as usual, responsible for more than half of the total disbursements, was larger by $936,149 than the amount reported for the previous year. The amount spent for unemployed and travelling benefits was $216,541 less than in 1934; for strike benefits there was an increase of $117,907. The expenditure for sick and accident benefits was $804,135 less than in 1934. Old age pensions amounted to $2,630,654, an increase of $231,979 over 1934, the remaining sum of $841,594 recorded in the column with old age pensions being disbursed for other benefits and donations to other organizations.

The heaviest expenditure for death benefits was made by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the sum of $1,791,398 being disbursed; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers spent $1,429,305, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen had an outlay of $1,037,038 for death benefits; the Order of Railway Conductors is fourth with payments totalling $928,871. The International Moulders' Union reported the highest outlay for unemployed and travelling benefits, $140,657; the Amalgamated Lithographers of America being second with $100,000. The largest disbursement for strike benefits was made by the International Typographical Union, which organization spent $179,940, the International Moulders' Union of North America being second with an appropriation of $99,100, followed by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers with payments totalling $64,640. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen with payments amounting to $1,959,594 had the heaviest expenditure for sick and accident benefits, but this total also included disability and tuberculosis benefits. Occupying second place is the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen with $940,753, but this amount includes disability claims and allowances. The Order of Railway Conductors is third with $183,896, which amount includes payments for disability benefits. The International Typographical Union with an expenditure of $1,939,304 reported the largest disbursement for old age pensions, the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America coming second with $450,948, followed by the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union with payments aggregating $120,072.

For another year the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen reported the largest combined expenditure for benefits, the total disbursed being $3,802,589; the International Typographical Union again takes second place with a total of $2,653,668. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen stands third with combined disbursements of $2,199,600, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers being fourth with $1,694,869. It is interesting to note that the combined expenditures of the four railroad organizations, whose members are employed in engine and train service, account for $8,852,533 of the total of $18,131,478 disbursed throughout the whole jurisdiction for benefits by the international unions operating in Canada.

BENEFITS PAID BY LOCAL BRANCHES

According to information received from 711 local branch unions in Canada it was computed that these bodies made payments aggregating $384,098 to their own members in various classes of benefits provided for by their respective constitutions. This expenditure is $96,977 less than that made in 1934 by 744 local branches reporting benefit payments.

As in the past few years, the highest expenditures were for unemployed benefits, which amounted to $133,625, a decrease of $56,018 as compared with disbursements for this purpose in 1934. Sick and accident benefits were responsible for the next highest expenditure, and totalled $114,321, an increase of $12,199. The expenditure for "other benefits" which represents disbursements for various purposes, including donations to other unions, amounted to $58,524, being $17,981 higher than the corresponding disbursements for 1934. Another increase of $12,616 was indicated in the expenditure for death benefits, which amounted to $46,857. There was a large falling off in the expenditures for strike benefits, which amounted to $30,771, a decrease of $83,755 as compared with the previous year. Of the total expenditure for benefits made by Canadian branch unions to their own members the 555 having international affiliation disbursed $313,050, a decrease of $105,279, the disbursements for each class of benefits being: Death, $22,185; unemployed, $131,642; strike, $26,058; sick and accident, $81,960; other benefits, $51,205. The 137 branches of Canadian organizations, including 16 National Catholic unions, distributed $41,383, an increase of $1,947, as compared with payments made in 1934, divided as follows: Death, $16,286; unemployed, $1,704; strike, $4,048; sick and accident, $16,213; other benefits, $3,132. Nineteen independent units made expenditures for benefits totalling $29,665, an increase of $6,355; apportioned as follows: Death, $8,386; unemployed, $279; strike, $665; sick and accident, $16,148; other benefits, $4,187.

Unemployed benefits.. . . .	133,625
Sick and accident benefits.. . . .	114,321
Other benefits.. . . .	58,524

As previously explained, the expenditure of the above amounts by the Canadian local branch unions among their own members is in addition to the expenditures made for benefits by the central organizations.

The arrangement of the accompanying table is similar to the preceding one giving the disbursements by the central international bodies, with the exception that the "other benefits" does not include old age pension payments, but does embrace all gratuities, etc., which are not classed in other columns:—

XX. NEW AND DISSOLVED LABOUR BODIES

New Unions Number 191—Dissolved Unions 203—Decrease of 12 Unions Due to the Disappearance of the Greater Number of Locals Formerly Connected With the Workers' Unity League—New and Dissolved Unions by Trade Groups—Names and Location of Labour Bodies Formed—Local Unions Dissolved.

The information received in the Department indicates that there were 191 new unions of all classes formed in Canada during the year 1935, while for the same period 203 were unreported and therefore shown as dissolved. The negotiations which were carried on during the latter part of 1935, between the Workers' Unity League and the various international organizations whereby the membership of the local branches of the former and its affiliates were transferred to similar locals of the latter, accounts for the decrease in local branch unions as shown above. The international group of unions had a loss of 15, which is due to the removal of the One Big Union from this section to the Canadian group, and partly as a result of this the latter shows an increase of 72. The National Catholic Unions show an increase of 18, while 7 more independent local units are recorded than in 1934, now numbering 49.

By trade groups the new and dissolved unions are as follows:—

	New	Dissolved
Mining.....	10	6

The delegate bodies organized during 1935, or which appear in this report for the first time, number 8—3 federations, 2 district councils and 3 trades and labour or central councils. There were also 6 delegate bodies dissolved—1 federation, 2 district councils and 3 trades and labour councils. As explained in a previous chapter, the formation or dissolution of these delegate bodies does not affect the trade union membership of the Dominion, their establishment being made possible only by the existence of local branch unions, which are the foundation of the whole plan of labour organizations.

LIST OF LABOUR BODIES FORMED IN 1935

The following statement contains the name of every federation, district council, trades and labour council and local branch union known to have been formed in Canada during the year 1935, as well as the names of some organizations of which particulars had not been received for the earlier reports. Where the locality is given for bodies covering a wide territory it designates the address of the secretary. The list of local branches is arranged in trade groups, the name of the organization from which charter was secured, the location of the branch and the total charters issued by the respective organizations being given.

XXI. LABOUR PRESS

Labour Journalism of North American Continent—Method of Circulating Official Trade Union Publications—List of Canadian Trade Union Journals and Labour Press.—Names of International Bodies Publishing Official Journals—Communist Publications.

The development of the trade union movement in North America has brought into existence a labour press of some significance, all of the more important labour organizations having official journals through which trade union activities and official business are reported to the membership. In some instances these publications, which are usually issued monthly, but sometimes semi-monthly or quarterly, devote space to craft problems and incidents of interest to the labour movement generally. The editorship of the union journals is in some cases an elective position, but usually the general secretary has charge of the editing and management. The head office of the international labour organizations being located in the United States, it is only natural that the office of the trade union periodical should be similarly located. All official journals have a regular subscription rate, but most of the labour bodies arrange to include the fee in the per capita tax so as to ensure the publication reaching each member, whether residing in Canada, United States or elsewhere.

There are 10 labour periodicals published in Canada, 9 of which are official journals of central organizing bodies, and 1 is published by a group of branch organizations identified with an international union. The list following also includes four journals of civil service employees' organizations, which are, or which claim to be, identical with trade unions. There is also the Civil Service Review, published by the Civil Service Federation of Canada, a body which is not affiliated with any trade union organization.

The Canadian Association of Railwaymen's Journal, official organ of the Canadian Association of Railwaymen started publication during 1935. Two journals of Canadian organizations have ceased publication—Carpenters' Monthly Bulletin published by the Ontario Provincial Council, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, and the Needle Worker issued as the official organ of the Industrial Union of Needle Trades' Workers of Canada.

The names of 10 Canadian publications which are issued as labour papers under the auspices of some labour organizations, as well as those which claim to be published in the interests of the trade union movement, are also given a place in this chapter.

The Alberta Labour News which was issued in the interests of the Alberta Federation of Labour, has been dropped from the list, as the Federation has severed its connection with the publication. There are upwards of 150 weekly papers published in the United States under the auspices or in the interests of the organized workers and recognized as a part of the labour press by the trade union movement.

The following six Canadian labour publications devote some of their space to matter printed in the French language: (1) Canadian Congress Journal; (2) Canadian Unionist; (3) Canadian Railroad Employees' Monthly; (4) The Federated Railwayman; (5) The Labour World, and (6) The Postal Courier (Le Courier de la Poste). The official journal of the United Mine Workers of America contains sections printed in several different languages.

For the purpose of stimulating the labour press of the continent, the International Labour Press was established some years ago, through the agency of which the editors of the various recognized labour publications are brought into conference annually at the same time and place that the American Federation of Labor is holding its convention, when matters relating to their work may be discussed and suggestions invited as to how the labour news service of North America may be improved. The president of the International Press is Matthew Woll, 105 A. F. of L. Bldg., Washington, D.C., and the secretary, R. E. Woodmansee, Box 15, Springfield, Ill.

COMMUNIST PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the recognized trade union periodicals the Communist Party published The Worker as its official organ until the party was declared illegal in December, 1931, following which the paper appeared under the auspices of the Worker Publishing Association. The name has been changed to the Daily Clarion, published daily, except Sunday, by the Clarion Publishing Association, Toronto, Ont. The Young Communist League publishes The Young Worker as its official monthly journal and the official paper of the Workers' Unity League is Workers' Unity, both of which are printed in Toronto. The Canadian Labour Defence League, issues the Labour Defender. The B.C. Workers' News, published in Vancouver, advocates similar action by the workers as do the Communist publications listed above.

The Workers' Party of America published in New York, N.Y., an official paper under the title of the Daily Worker, which is understood to be one of the two dailies published in the English language in the interests of communism; the other daily is published in London, England, under a similar name. The Labour Herald, which was the official journal of the Trade Union Educational League, was in 1924 consolidated with the Liberator and Soviet Russia Pictorial under the name of the Workers' Monthly, the name of which in 1927 was changed to The Communist, being published monthly by the Workers' (Communist) Party of America as a theoretical magazine for the discussion of revolutionary problems.

The Communist League of America, the opposition group to the workers (Communist) Party of America, published a weekly organ in New York under the title of The New Militant, and the National Youth Committee of the same group, in December, 1931, commenced the publication of a monthly paper under the name of the Young Spartican.

XXIII. NON-TRADE UNION ASSOCIATIONS

Important Associations of Wage-Earners in Canada Not Connected With Organized Labour—Chief Organizations of School Teachers—Associations of Government Employees and Commercial Travellers—Names and Objects of the Various Bodies in This Group With Chief Officers—Increase in Number and Membership—Affiliations and Memberships.

Besides the labour organizations which make up the trade union movement of the Dominion, and whose memberships have been computed in preceding chapters of this report, there are a number of associations of wage earners not connected with organized labour, the importance of which warrant reference being made to them in the present volume. This group of non-trade union bodies contains associations of school teachers, who, besides being organized locally, have their district and provincial federations, the most of these being brought together in a Dominion-wide organization known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. Some of the advantages of membership in the teachers' organizations are stated to be the efforts put forth to secure what are considered adequate salaries for the teaching profession, and below the schedules prepared by the associations members are not supposed to accept a position. With a view to maintaining this principle members are enjoined in some instances from seeking a position where a vacancy has occurred through a school board refusing to pay the scheduled salary, a policy which is in accord with one of the fundamental principles of organized labour.

The names of associations of Government employees which are, or which claim to be identical with trade unions, have appeared in a previous chapter of this report. The majority of organizations of civil servants, however, do not so identify themselves, and their names are accordingly included in the present group. These embrace organizations composed of various classes of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, as well as bodies comprising employees of provincial governments, the objects of all of which are to speak collectively for their respective memberships on matters which they desire to bring to the attention of the proper authorities.

Of the associations whose names appear in this group the stronger numerically are those embracing commercial travellers. Some of these organizations, which have been in existence for many years, have as a result of their efforts secured numerous privileges for their members, and in addition have disbursed large sums for benefit purposes. Included among the organizations of commercial travellers is the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, a grouping of French-Canadian Roman Catholic commercial travellers' societies, which accepts as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See," and is designed to direct its members towards the religious and social apostolate.

Though there are in the Dominion a number of ex-soldier associations, besides the one referred to under government employees, formed with a view of fostering the comradeship of the trenches, the only other veterans' associations which it is considered fitting to include in this report are (1) Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild, organized in 1925, composed of men who are employed in the Departments of the Canadian National Railways, (2) Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors, which was formed in Montreal in 1919 to protect their members against alleged discrimination by labour unions.

There are also a number of miscellaneous organizations given a place in this chapter.

ASSOCIATIONS OF SCHOOL TEACHERS

In each of the provinces of the Dominion there are associations of school teachers, the local bodies in most cases being connected with their provincial organizations, eleven of which, including the associations of the four western provinces, three Ontario bodies, one Quebec body and one each from the three maritime provinces, being identified with a Dominion wide association known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. The objects of this body, which was organized at Calgary in July, 1920, are as follows:—

(a) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest.

(b) To provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given.

(c) The Dominion organization shall in no way interfere with the full liberties of the provincial organizations in dealing with matters concerning their own provinces.

The chief officers of the Canadian Teachers' Federation are: Pres., Miss Jessie M. Norris, Montreal West, Que. Sec., C. N. Crutchfield, B.A., Shawinigan Falls, Que.

ASSOCIATIONS OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

In a previous chapter, reference has been made to those organizations of Government employees which are identified with the labour movement through their affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. These include the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the Civil Service Association of Alberta. The remaining Government employees' associations are not connected with organized labour, but function as separate central organizations and as such are recorded in this group. The associations of Dominion Government employees in some instances cover definite branches of the civil service, while it is understood the provincial bodies embrace all classes in one general organization. The objects of the civil service associations are in the main to speak collectively for their respective members on matters affecting conditions of employment. For the employees of the Dominion Government there is a Civil Service Federation, with which several group associations are affiliated, and which is designed to represent all branches of the service, and although itself not connected with organized labour, does not exclude membership to those bodies which are so affiliated. Among the names of associations of Dominion Government employees is included that of the Halcyon Club. This was originally intended as a social organization, but since the passing out of existence of the Women's Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, the Halcyon Club has also become the medium of expression of the women in the Government service at Ottawa in regard to conditions of employment or other matters. The list of associations of Government employees, together with the names and addresses of the chief officers, so far as furnished, are as follows:—

- Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada.—Pres., Harold Baker, 2526-6th Ave. W., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., Fred Knowles, Box 42, Ottawa, Ont.

The present issue of the annual report on Labour Organization in Canada is the twenty-sixth in a series which began with the report for the calendar year 1911. The aim in the publication of these reports has been to give statistical and other information concerning central labour organizations, delegate bodies and local unions operating in Canada, together with the names and addresses of officers and business agents. In addition to describing many phases of the trade union movement in the Dominion, the report contains information as to labour organizations throughout the world, revolutionary workers' organizations and Canadian associations of wage-earners other than trade unions. Where possible the particulars have been obtained from the various organizations concerned. For purposes of comparison the present report follows closely the form of previous issues in the series.

Information as to conventions of labour organizations and other trade union activities is contained in the monthly issues of the Labour Gazette, the official organ of the Department of Labour.

In the main, labour organizations in Canada fall into two classes: (1) local branches of international bodies having membership in the United States and Canada; and (2) unions whose membership is wholly in the Dominion. Most of the important international labour organizations operating in Canada are in affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, with which are also affiliated a number of purely Canadian central organizations and directly chartered local unions. The second group, made up of wholly Canadian bodies, may be classified according to affiliation under the following heads: Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; All-Canadian Congress of Labour; Canadian Federation of Labour; Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada; and various independent central bodies and local units.

There are two principal types of labour organization: (1) the craft union, which includes workmen in a single craft or a number of related crafts or trades, for instance, bricklayers and stone masons; and (2) the industrial union, having members in the various occupations in a particular industry, such as coal mining. Some organizations of the first class include several crafts, with helpers and labourers, and are therefore quasi-industrial unions. There is also a type of organization which organizes workers in all industries under one general union, centrally controlled, usually with subdivisions by industries and localities. In a subsequent section of this introductory chapter the development of the various types of labour organization in Canada is briefly outlined.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN CANADA IN 1936

The figures published in this report give the trade union membership in the Dominion as at the end of the calendar year 1936. They show a substantial increase in membership in 1936 as compared with 1935, whereas the membership reported for 1935 was slightly lower than that recorded for 1934.

The total membership of all classes of trade unions in Canada in 1936 was 322,473, an increase of 41,769 over the previous year, comprised in 2,886 locals, a gain of 158 as compared with 1935. The total membership had reached its highest point in 1919, when it stood at 378,047.

According to returns received in the department from trade unions or other reliable sources, the international union group, consisting of the Canadian members of 88 organizations, 6 more than recorded in 1935, had 1,896 branches in the Dominion, an increase of 102, with a combined membership of 174,769, a gain of 31,199. Included in the international group is the Industrial Workers of the World, with a reported membership in Canada of 4,200, no change from 1935, comprised in 11 local branch unions, a loss of 1 from the previous year. The group of Canadian central organizations, which numbered 28, a gain of 5, had 740 branches, an increase of 6, with a combined membership of 83,841, a gain of 3,763. The National Catholic group consisted of 190 syndicates and study circles, an increase of 50, the membership as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada being 45,000, a gain of 7,000 over 1935. The independent units numbered 60, an increase of 11, the membership reported by 54 units being 18,863, which exceeded by 2,004 that reported by 43 units in 1935.

A computation of the above figures shows that there were in Canada at the close of 1936 a total of 2,886 trade union branches, 158 more than in 1935, with a combined membership of 322,473, an increase of 41,769 over that of the previous year. According to the latest estimate of population, trade unionists in 1936 represented 2.9 per cent of the total population of Canada; adding 115,864, the number of members comprised in the non-trade union associations, organized wage-earners in the Dominion at the close of 1936 represented approximately 4 per cent of the entire population.

The number of branches and memberships, reported to the department by the unions themselves or obtained from other reliable sources, of the various classes of labour organizations operating in Canada at the close of 1936, together with the number of members of each affiliated group, are indicated in the following table:—

(a) As question has arisen regarding the affiliation of certain organizations during the calendar year 1936, the following note on each is appended to the above statement:—

(1) The Canadian Association of Railwaymen, as at December 31, 1936, had paid per capita tax on its membership for the full calendar year to the A.C.C.L. While now claimed by the C.F. of L., information from documents circulated over the signature of the President indicates that the Association at present is not associated with any national organization.

(2) The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada were still affiliated with the A.C.C.L. as at December 31, 1936, but notified the department on January 13, 1937, that the affiliation of this organization had been transferred to the C.F. of L. Our information is that this decision was reached on January 11th at an executive meeting.

(3) Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees, with three locals and a reported membership of 4,500, according to the information before the Department, was not affiliated with either the A.C.C.L. or the C.F. of L., although co-operating with the former, as at December 31, 1936. Consequently this organization is classified with "Other Canadian central bodies".

(b) Not affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP AND LOCAL BRANCHES

The accompanying table shows for each year since 1911 (the year for which the first report on Labour Organization in Canada was issued) the number of trade union branches in Canada, together with their combined memberships:—

The chart appearing on page 10, based on the above membership figures, indicates at a glance the fluctuations which have occurred in the numerical strength of organized labour in the Dominion for the past twenty-six years, the period covered by these annual reports.

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE GROUPS

The accompanying table and chart show the division of union membership among the various industries and trade groups. The membership of each central body is included in the trade group in which most of its members are employed. For instance the membership of the various carpenters' unions is classified under building trades. The membership of each central body is shown in Table 1 and 1A, Chapter XIX (Statistics).

As usual, the railroad employees' group contained the largest number of members, namely, 72,239, representing 22.40 per cent of the total.

Groups of Industries	Member- ship	Per- centage
Mining and Quarrying.....	21,987	6.82
Building.....	32,446	10.06
Metal.....	26,200	8.12
Printing and Paper Making.....	16,027	4.97
Clothing, Boot and Shoes.....	23,285	7.22

Public Employees, Personal Service and Amusement.....	30,810	9.56

Mining and Quarrying.—Organizations in these industries are chiefly among miners. The United Mine Workers of America, which has a large membership in Nova Scotia and in Alberta and British Columbia, Districts 26 and 18 respectively, and a few independent miners' locals include all classes of workers in coal mines, mechanics, engineers, etc., as well as miners. The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, with local unions in Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia, also had a considerable membership. A number of asbestos miners in Quebec are organized into a National Catholic Union and an independent unit.

Building Trades.—This group includes the various unions whose members are engaged chiefly in building and construction, with some exceptions, such as electrical workers on electrical railways, in railway shops and in electric light and power plants. In the larger cities those engaged in the building trades have building trade councils. Carpenters, bricklayers, masons, electrical workers and plumbers together made up over 71 per cent of the total membership of this group in 1936.

Metal Trades.—The members of the unions in this group are employed chiefly in metal working establishments and in railway shops, but elevator constructors and bridge, structural and ornamental iron workers are included. The automobile workers and machinists had over half the membership in the group. The boilermakers and moulders each had considerably over one thousand members.

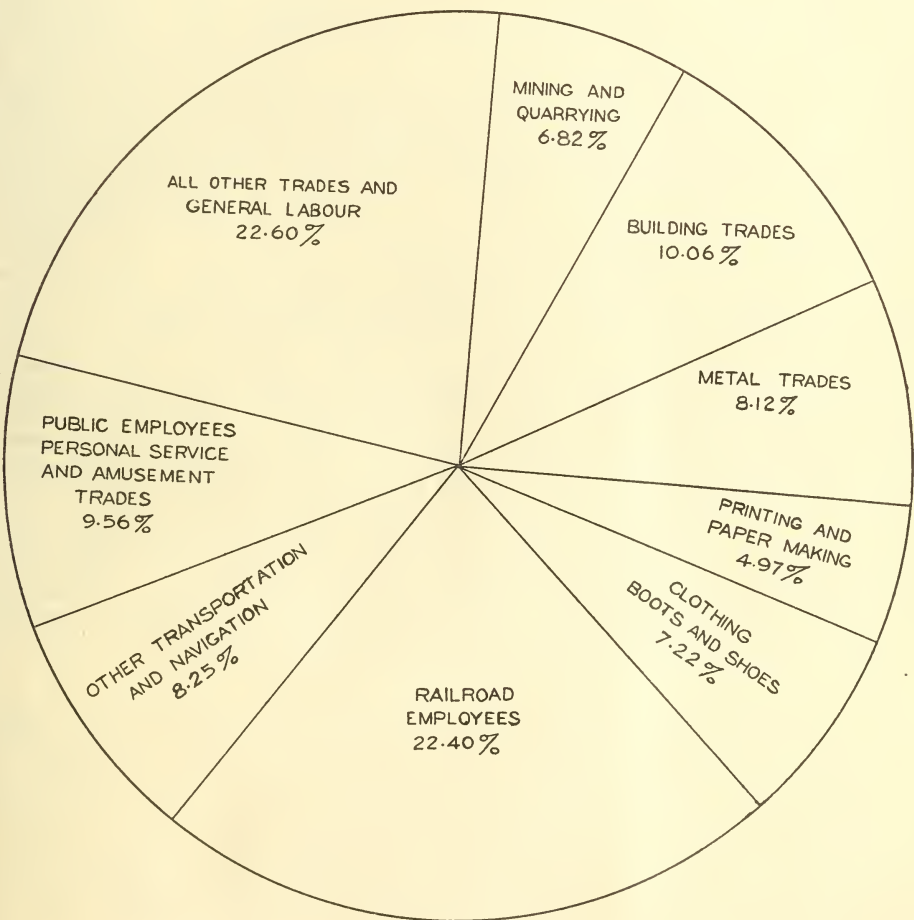

TWENTY-SIX YEARS OF TRADE UNIONISM IN CANADA

MEMBERS

Printing and Paper Making Trades.—This group includes workmen in printing and publishing establishments and in pulp and paper mills. The carpenters and electricians, as well as the engineers and firemen in pulp and paper mills, belong, however, to building, metal trades and engineering unions. The pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers and the typographical union, had over half the total membership, but the paper makers and the printing pressmen each had over fourteen hundred members.

TRADE UNIONISM IN CANADA
BY GROUPS OF INDUSTRIES

Clothing, Boot and Shoe Trades.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, an international union of employees in men's and boys' ready-made clothing factories, was the largest in the industry, but the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, composed of employees in cloak, suit and dressmaking establishments, also had a large membership. The United Garment Workers, with members in overall and work clothing factories the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and the International Fur Workers' Union had memberships ranging from five hundred to sixteen hundred.

Railroad Employees.—This group of organizations of steam railway employees includes four of the independent international unions, namely, the Locomotive Engineers, Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, Railroad Trainmen and Railway Conductors, their memberships ranging from over twenty-three hundred to nearly eleven thousand. A number of the other unions with large memberships are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees, consisting of section men and the mechanics in the bridge and building departments had the second largest union membership in Canada, over 12,000. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, which includes car repairers and car building trades, such as carpenters, upholsterers, etc., had a membership of nearly 11,000. This organization and certain locals of the machinists', blacksmiths', boilermakers', electrical workers', moulders' and sheet metal workers' unions which have members chiefly in railway shops, together constitute Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor (Federated Shop Crafts), which represents these classes of employees in negotiations with the railway companies. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks also had large memberships. The latter organization includes clerks, freight handlers and station employees not only on steam railways but also those employed by steamship companies; most of its members, however, are employed in the Canadian Pacific Railway. Among the wholly Canadian unions the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is outstanding, having, in fact, the third largest membership of any union in Canada. While membership in this organization is open to nearly all classes of railway employees, it consists chiefly of clerks, freight handlers, station employees, shop labourers, dining and sleeping car employees on the Canadian National Railways and a majority of the employees of the Canadian National Express Company. It also has some members in car shops and among steamship clerks and freight handlers. This union is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

Other Transportation and Navigation Trades.—The Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America has a large membership in Canada, made up of motormen and conductors and miscellaneous classes of electric railway employees, as well as bus drivers. Electrical workers, machinists, etc., usually belong to the unions of their respective crafts but in a few instances by arrangement with these unions belong to the street railway organization. The One Big Union has a considerable membership among the employees of the Winnipeg Street Railway and its suburban lines. For longshoremen there are several unions. The International Longshoremen's Association had in its organization employees of this class in Halifax, Saint John, Vancouver and Victoria, but in Montreal, as well as in Vancouver and Victoria, some belong to independent unions. The National Association of Marine Engineers, affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, had members throughout the Dominion. A seamen's union had members in Halifax and Montreal.

Public Employment, Personal Service and Amusement.—Those organizations of federal Government employees which are classed as trade unions include groups of postal clerks, letter carriers and railway mail clerks, as well as the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership in which is open to all classes of federal Government employees. The total membership of these organizations was approximately 7,400. The International Association of Fire Fighters had a membership of over 2,000. In the category of personal service, the hotel and restaurant employees had approximately three thousand members. The musicians' union had a membership of about five thousand, while the stage employees' organization, which includes moving picture machine operators, contained almost a thousand members.

All Other Trades and General Labour.—The largest organization in this group was the Industrial Workers of the World, with over 4,000 members, the majority being lumbermen in British Columbia. The Commercial Telegraphers, Operating Engineers, Firemen and Oilers and Brewery Workers had memberships ranging from about 670 to 790. Two unions of fishermen in British Columbia had a combined membership of nearly 1,500. The membership of the National Catholic unions in this group, including workers in various classes of employment, chiefly in factories, was 28,236.

UNIONS HAVING LARGE MEMBERSHIPS IN CANADA

Of the 88 international organizations with branches or members in Canada, there were 12 with 5,000 or more members, 5 of these being composed of employees who are identified with railway operations. In the Canadian group were two bodies with over 5,000 members, one being also a railway organization. The names of the 14 organizations appear in the following statement, being arranged according to numerical strength, and among them they represent a Canadian trade union membership of 119,476, comprised in 931 local branches; approximately 37 per cent of the total membership; and about 32 per cent of the total trade union branches.

DEVELOPMENT OF TRADE UNIONS IN CANADA

Until the middle of the nineteenth century only a small number of independent trade associations, usually consisting of workmen of a single craft in one locality, had been formed in Canada. Although it is known that there were unions in existence in this country, for example, in Nova Scotia, prior to 1827, the first of which the department has record was a boot and shoe workers' union in Montreal in 1827. There also appear to have been "circles" of French printers in Quebec at this time. Printers also composed the first known union in Ontario which was formed in York (now Toronto) in 1832. Several other unions are known to have been established before 1850, among cigar makers, stonecutters, masons and coopers, but up to that time the movement was not at all extensive.

From 1850 to 1870 unionism in Canada was still in the stage of unconcerted action, but during that period its sporadic growth was greatly stimulated by the marked progress of the trade union movement in Great Britain and in the United States. The Trade Unions Act of 1872, which removed from labour organizations the liability to criminal prosecution for conspiracy in restraint of trade, and the Criminal Law Amendment Act of the same year, which laid down the law on intimidation, picketing, etc., were patterned closely after the British statutes of the previous year. While the mother country was thus pointing the way in the field of labour legislation, it was the United States that in the main furnished the model for the actual machinery of labour organization in Canada. During the 'sixties Canadian local unions began to affiliate with American central organizations of their respective crafts. Printers and iron moulders appear to have taken the lead in the institution of the "international" trade union movement in Canada.

Organization developed rapidly, and the years immediately following 1870 were marked by unprecedented activity in the formation of unions. The first attempt to form a central labour body in Canada was made in 1873, when a convention called by the Toronto Trades Assembly was held in that city by delegates from twelve Toronto unions, three from St. Catharines, four from Hamilton, five from Ottawa, two from London, and one each from Seaforth, Bowmanville and Cobourg. The Canadian Labour Union was organized at this meeting. This body became dormant after a few years, mainly because of the severe depression of the late 'seventies, but during its brief existence it campaigned successfully for improved labour legislation, such as changes in the Dominion law on picketing and conspiracy as affecting trade unions and in the Ontario Masters and Servants Act, and established a tradition of unified effort on the part of the trade union movement in the Dominion.

Not for long, however, was Canada to be without a central labour organization. By 1880 the international crafts unions had become very active in the Dominion. In addition, in 1881 the first Canadian assembly of the Knights of Labour was formed. Founded in Philadelphia in 1869, the Knights of Labour was designed to amalgamate the forces of all classes of labour into a central general assembly, with local mixed and trade assemblies; the organization grew rapidly and reached the zenith of its power about 1885, when it had nearly a million members on the North American continent. In 1883 the Toronto Trades and Labour Council invited the trade unions and Knights of Labour assemblies of the Dominion to convene in Toronto, and at this convention the Canadian Trades and Labour Congress was set up. Three years later the Congress assembled again and was established on a permanent basis. From 1887 to 1892 it met under the name Dominion Trades and Labour Congress. The following year it assumed its present name Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

In 1881 the American Federation of Labor, a federation of autonomous national and international unions, organized chiefly by crafts, but in some cases by related crafts (thus constituting semi-industrial unions), came into being. A fundamental breach on the issue of organization by crafts as opposed to centralized general organization soon developed between the Federation and the Knights of Labour and continued until the beginning of the twentieth century. The issue immediately became a primary concern of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which had affiliated with it both Knights of Labour assemblies and unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. In the beginning the Congress maintained a policy of strict neutrality and even essayed the role of peace-maker. In later years, however, when it became evident that the proponents of craft autonomy were winning the struggle in the United States, the Canadian body accepted the Federation as its model. Finally, in 1902 the Congress amended its constitution so as to exclude from affiliation certain national or independent unions, including Knights of Labour assemblies, conflicting in jurisdiction with existing international craft organizations. Henceforth the membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada has been drawn largely from international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The organizations excluded from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in 1902 immediately formed an independent body, known as the National Trades and Labour Congress. This body changed its name to the Canadian Federation of Labour in 1908 and continued to function as such until 1927, when it merged with certain other independent unions to form the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. This arrangement lasted until 1936, when a disagreement among members of the executive caused some unions to withdraw from the All-Canadian Congress and to revive the Canadian Federation of Labour as an independent national body. In its early years the Canadian Federation of Labour included in its membership Knights of Labour assemblies, but most of these passed out of existence within a few years. Now both the Federation and the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are composed entirely of purely Canadian unions.

The Provincial Workmen's Association, established among Nova Scotia coal miners in 1879, for a time attempted to organize all classes of workmen in the province, but later became a purely coal miners' union. In 1917 it merged with the United Mine Workers of Nova Scotia to form the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, which in turn was absorbed two years later by the United Mine Workers of America, an international union with headquarters in the United States.

Since the latter years of the nineteenth century a prominent part in Canadian unionism has been taken by the four independent international railroad organizations, commonly known as the "Big Four" running trades, namely, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Fireman and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Beginning in 1901 a number of "national" unions, later known as National Catholic Unions, were organized in the province of Quebec, and in 1921 a central organization of these unions was established under the name Confederation of Catholic Workers of Canada.

The Industrial Workers of the World, an organization designed to promote revolutionary industrial unionism and the abolition of the wage system, was formed in the United States in 1905 and subsequently extended into Canada.

The One Big Union was established in 1919 in opposition to the principle of organization along craft lines and in support of the principle that workers in all crafts and industries should be in one union. It has since affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Workers' Unity League was formed in 1932 for the purpose of organizing Canadian workers into revolutionary industrial unions, but in 1935 it was arranged that its affiliated unions should transfer their members to the appropriate international unions.

TRADE UNION LEGISLATION IN CANADA

The Trade Unions Act, enacted by Parliament in 1872, provides for the registration of trade unions with the Secretary of State. Registered unions are given power to buy and sell property in their own names and to take action in the courts with respect to their property. The Act declared registered trade unions not to be liable for criminal prosecution nor their trusts void or voidable merely on the ground of conspiracy in restraint of trade. The section regarding criminal prosecution was included in the Criminal Code in 1892 and, therefore, applies to all trade unions.

Provision for the registration of trade unions is also made in Quebec and Nova Scotia. The Quebec Professional Syndicates Act of 1924 gives to trade unions which are organized in accordance with the Act and the constitution and by-laws of which are approved by the Government the civil rights of a corporation. Two-thirds of the members of a syndicate and all its officers must be British subjects.

The Nova Scotia Trade Union Act, 1937, requires every trade union to file its constitution and by-laws with the Provincial Secretary and to make an annual report of its receipts and expenditures under penalty of not more than $100.

Other provincial legislation concerning trade unions deals with freedom of association and collective bargaining. The Nova Scotia Trade Union Act and the Alberta Freedom of Trade Union Association Act, 1937, declare the right of employees to join a trade union which is free from the undue influence or interference of any employer. Collective bargaining through a union or its officers is also declared lawful and the employment of any person on condition of refraining from joining or continuing membership in a trade union is declared unlawful. Penalties are provided for employers who intimidate or dismiss employees or threaten them with dismissal in order to prevent their belonging to a trade union.

The Manitoba Strikes and Lockouts Prevention Act, 1937, repeals the Industrial Conditions Act of 1919 but reproduces certain provisions of the latter statute recognizing the right of employers and employees to organize for any lawful purpose and to bargain individually or collectively. A new section renders liable to a fine any person who seeks by intimidation to compel any employee to join or refrain from joining any union.

The Fair Wage Act, 1937, of Quebec declares liable to a penalty any person who prevents an employee or tries to prevent him from joining a trade union by threatening dismissal or by other threats.

The British Columbia Trade Unions Act of 1902 declares a trade union not liable for the wrongful acts of its members in connection with a labour dispute unless such acts have been duly authorized or concurred in by the members or the executive committee. A union or its members may not be enjoined from or made liable in damages for communicating facts respecting employment or for persuading without unlawful threats or intimidation any person not to renew or not to enter into a contract of employment. Similar immunity is conferred with respect to the publishing of information concerning a strike or lockout.

LABOUR IN POLITICS

A resolution unanimously adopted at the annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada held in Hamilton, September, 1887, declared that "in the opinion of this Congress the working classes of Canada will never be properly represented in Parliament, or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class, and members of this Congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavours, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for the local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside." Following the adoption of this resolution, the trades and labour councils, which usually took the lead in political activities, were responsible on a number of occasions for having labour candidates nominated for office. This procedure, in some cases, caused dissatisfaction among the members, and the Trades and Labour Congress, at its annual convention at Ottawa in 1900, adopted a proposal for independent political action. This, too, did not meet with the approval of some members, with the result that a continuous agitation was kept up with a view to having the Congress become the head of a labour political party. In 1906, the Congress approved of a policy of provincial autonomy in the establishment of labour political parties, but even this did not result in the desired political organization. At the convention of the Congress in 1917 it was suggested that the organized workers of Canada should follow the British plan and organize a labour party on a basis which would permit united action on the part of trade unionists, socialists, fabians, co-operators and farmers. It was not until 1921 that this suggestion was adopted and the Canadian Labour Party established. During the next few years some success was attained in co-ordinating the various labour political parties, but in 1927, the secretary of the party since its inception resigned, and since that time the main party has ceased to function. The only sections of the party which are still active are those of Quebec and Alberta.

The official organ of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, The Canadian Unionist, in its issue for October, 1931, announced the formation of a National Labour Party. In a manifesto the aim of the party was declared to be "to organize the workers politically for the purpose of establishing, by constitutional means, an equitable economic and social order."

On August 1, 1932, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was established at a meeting in Calgary, Alta., of delegates said to represent labour, farmer and socialist groups in five provinces—Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Among the purposes of this body is the establishment in the Dominion of a co-operative commonwealth in which production, distribution and exchange would be regulated to supply human needs and not for profit, and the taking over by the state of the public utilities and major industries, including mining, pulp and paper, etc. A Dominion council was set up, as well as a council for each province. The member organizations in the various provinces were to select the provincial councils, and were also to be represented on the Dominion council by one delegate from each body. An affiliation fee of $25 was required from each member organization and financial support was to be sought through voluntary subscription. The chief officers of the Federation are: President, J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., Winnipeg, Man.; Secretary, David Lewis, Ottawa, Ont.

In the last federal election and in some of the recent provincial elections, the following C.C.F. candidates have been elected:—

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS ENDORSING LABOUR CANDIDATES

In addition to the activities of the above-mentioned political parties, the election of labour candidates to municipal councils, school boards, etc., is promoted by these and other organizations, the candidature of such labour representatives being in many instances endorsed by trades and labour councils and similar non-political labour bodies.

In previous reports on Labour Organization in Canada reference has been made to the Communist Party of Canada, the political organization of the Communist movement. In the last provincial election in Manitoba James Litterick was elected to the Legislature as a representative of the Communist Party of Canada for the constituency of Winnipeg.

CANADIAN LABOUR DEFENCE LEAGUE

The Canadian Labour Defence League was formed in 1925, its objects, as stated, being to provide legal defence for all workers arrested and prosecuted for any form of working-class activity and to provide support for the families of prisoners, to stand for freedom of speech, assembly and organization for the working class, etc. The general secretary of the League is A. E. Smith, Room 102, 331 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ont.

THE WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

This organization, which has branches in various cities in the province, is an association of working men and others established to provide higher non-technical education for workers such as that available to students at the universities. Financial assistance and other support is obtained from labour organizations and from universities. The officers of the association include working men and university professors.

The movement originated in the Workers' Educational Association of Great Britain, established in 1903, and spread to various countries throughout the world. The first organization was established in Canada at Toronto in 1918. Classes are formed and lectures are given in the centres where branches are established on social and economic problems, literature, etc. Branches similar to the one in Toronto have been established in other cities of Ontario and also in other provinces.

An organization known as the Labour Educational Association of Ontario is referred to in Chapter IX, Federation of Trade Unions.

I. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA

The Majority of Canadian Trade Unions Affiliated with the American Federation of Labor—Federation Issues Charters to Central Organizing Bodies as well as to Certain Local Unions—Authority of the Federation in Matters Affecting International Organizations on the Continent Conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada—Federation Founded in Pittsburgh, Pa., September, 1881—Aims and Objects of the Federation—Revenue—Organizations Chartered—Departments of the Federation—International Craft Organizations.

The American Federation of Labor is the recognized head of the international labour movement of North America, and with it are connected most of the labour bodies operating on the continent, which include in their membership a large proportion of the organized workers in the Dominion of Canada. Thus the majority of the Canadian trade unions are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The trade unionists of Canada being so closely identified with the general labour movement of the continent, it is fitting that in a report dealing with labour organization some reference should be made to the body which is acknowledged to be the chief labour body in North America.

In addition to issuing charters of affiliation to central organizing bodies, the Federation issues certificates of membership to certain classes of wage-earners over whom no existing organization claims jurisdiction. As soon as the membership of such bodies has increased sufficiently to warrant such procedure, a central organization may be established, the members of the craft concerned being directly transferred, and the new main body so instituted becoming an affiliate of the Federation. Although an exponent of organization on trade lines, the Federation does not hinder the amalgamation of those unions composed of closely allied crafts, such action being given approval when the organizations involved voluntarily express a desire to amalgamate.

During the fifty-five years of its existence the American Federation of Labor has been active in promoting legislation for the improvement of working conditions of that part of its affiliated membership located in the United States, and has on many occasions rendered both moral and financial assistance to affiliated organizations in their efforts to secure improved trade conditions and to organize some particular craft. The Federation and its various departments endeavour to adjust differences which arise between affiliated organizations on the question of trade jurisdiction, and in most instances their decision in such matters is accepted.

The American Federation of Labor exchanges fraternal delegates with the British Trades Union Congress and with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The latter body is recognized by the Federation as the head of International trade unionists in the Dominion, so far as legislative matters are concerned, and the Federation pays a per capita tax to the Congress on its chartered federal and trade unions (those bodies over which no international craft organization claims jurisdiction) located in Canada. The authority of the American Federation of Labor to deal with trade matters as they affect international organizations on the North American continent is fully conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which accepts the decisions rendered by the Federation. The Congress has assisted in securing the acceptance of such judgments by refusing to seat at its annual conventions delegates from organizations which had refused to obey the instructions of the Federation. On the other hand, the Congress has on occasion continued to permit the affiliation of the Canadian membership of international organizations notwithstanding the fact that they have been suspended by the American Federation of Labor.

The larger of the international organizations maintain in the Dominion resident vice-presidents or other officials for the purpose of looking after the interests of their Canadian memberships and of reporting to their respective headquarters on trade conditions and the operations of their local branch unions in Canada. These officials are in close touch with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which renders assistance when required in promoting the cause of the various international labour bodies operating in the Dominion.

Some of the international bodies have accounts with Canadian banks through which their financial transactions in the Dominion are conducted.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburgh, Pa., in September, 1881, its original name being Organized Trades and Labor Unions of the United States and Canada. In 1886 the present name was chosen. The organization, as its name implies, is a federated body, and includes in its membership most of the important international unions. Charters are also issued to state federations, city central councils, and such local trade and federal unions as do not fall within the jurisdiction of any existing international bodies.

The aims and objects of the American Federation, as set forth in the constitution, are as follows:—

1. The object of this federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local trade and labour unions, and closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labour unions in every city, and the further combinations of such bodies into state, territorial or provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.
2. The establishment of national and international trade unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.
3. The establishment of departments composed of national or international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry, and which departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.
4. An American federation of all national and international trade unions to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour.
5. To aid and encourage the labour press of America.

PRINCIPLES OF THE FEDERATION

1. The abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime.
2. Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.
3. Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of injunction process in labour disputes.
4. A work day of not more than eight hours in the twenty-four-hour day.
5. A strict recognition of not over eight hours per day on all federal, state or municipal work, and not less than the prevailing per diem wage rate of the class of employment in the vicinity where the work is performed.
6. Release from employment one day in seven.
7. The abolition of the contract system of public work.
8. The municipal ownership of public utilities.
9. The abolition of the sweat-shop system.
10. Sanitary inspection of factory, workshop, mine and home.
11. Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.
12. The nationalization of telegraph and telephone.
13. The passage of anti-child labour laws in states where they do not exist and rigid defence of them where they have been enacted into law.
14. Woman suffrage co-equal with man suffrage.
15. Suitable and plentiful playgrounds, for children in all cities.
16. The initiative and referendum and the imperative mandate and right of recall.
17. Continued agitation for the public bath system in all cities.
18. Qualification in permits to build of all cities and towns that there shall be bathrooms and bathroom attachments in all houses or compartments used for habitation.
19. We favour a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the Government, with such regulations and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

The American Federation of Labor maintains a staff of regular organizers, three of whom are resident in Canada. It also has many volunteer organizers, a number of whom are located in the Dominion.

REVENUE OF THE FEDERATION

The revenue of the Federation is derived from a per capita tax upon the fully paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, as follows: from international or national trade unions, a per capita tax of one cent per member per month; from local trade unions and federal labour unions, thirty-five cents per member per month, twelve and one-half cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of a strike or lockout, unless otherwise ordered by the Executive Council; from all directly affiliated local unions, 25 per cent of the total initiation fee received by the local union from the individual (but in no case is the amount received by the American Federation of Labor to be less than $1); and from central and state bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly.

Delegates are not entitled to a seat in the annual convention unless the tax of their organization, as provided for in section 1, Article X, has been paid in full to the August 31 preceding the Convention.

Any organization affiliated with the Federation not paying its per capita tax on or before the 15th of each month is notified of the fact by the Secretary-treasurer of the Federation, and if at the end of three months it is still in arrears it shall become suspended from membership by the Federation, and can be reinstated only by a vote of the convention when such arrearages are paid in full, as provided in section 2 of Article X.

ORGANIZATIONS CHARTERED

Under the constitution of the American Federation of Labor only one central organization of a particular trade or calling is granted a charter of affiliation, no recognition being given to dual national or international unions, i.e., bodies covering the same calling, without the written consent of the existing affiliated unions whose jurisdiction is involved.

Charters are also issued to local trade and federal labour unions, bodies over which no existing recognized national or international organization claims control, as well as to state federations of labour and city central bodies (otherwise known as trades and labour councils).

COMMITTEE ON ADJUSTMENT

At each convention of the Federation a committee on adjustment is appointed for the purpose of investigating and endeavouring to bring about amicable settlements of jurisdictional disputes between unions.

DEPARTMENTS OF THE FEDERATION

The American Federation of Labor, in the development of its organization, has established departments for the purpose of bringing together organizations of kindred trades to deal with matters affecting their immediate interests, and which it is believed can be handled to better advantage by representatives of the unions thus associated. The departments cover four leading groups, viz., building trades, metal trades, railroad employees and union-label trades. Each department comprises organizations affiliated with the Federation, and has power to manage and finance its own business. These departments are charged with watching the interests of the industries represented, and may initiate or assist movements designed to promote the welfare of the workers. Local councils of these departments are in operation in various cities, and the union branches of the respective trades are thus brought together for joint action, their conduct, of course, to be in conformity with the general policy of the American Federation of Labor. Each department is entitled to send a delegate to the annual conventions of the Federation.

A resolution was submitted to the 1935 convention of the Federation proposing the establishment of an American Federation of Labor department of food industry employees, which read as follows:

That within ninety days following the adjournment of this convention, the president of the American Federation of Labor stands instructed to call together at his office in Washington, D.C., the representatives of all international and national unions, local trade and federal unions, that in any way have to do with the production and distribution of food, for the purpose of establishing a food department within the American Federation of Labor.

The recommendation of the Resolution Committee, to refer the above proposal to the executive council for consideration, was unanimously adopted.

The executive council of the Federation, in making its report to the 1936 convention at Tampa, Florida, stated:—"The survey of those organizations concerned in the formation of such a department within the A.F. of L. forced your council to the conclusion that the time is not at hand for such an undertaking. We recommend postponement of such action leading to the formation of this department until more interest is evidenced by the organizations involved."

The Building and Construction Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor is composed of nineteen organizations, the combined membership, according to individual returns received in the department, being 945,961, comprised in 9,168 local unions. There are seven state building trades councils, as well as a large number of local building trades councils, fourteen of which were operating in Canadian cities.

The combined membership of the sixteen international organizations included in the Metal Trades Department is 624,070, comprised in 6,162 local unions. This department has also a number of councils but none is located in the Dominion.

There are eight international organizations comprising the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor, with a combined membership of over 429,000. The railway system federations under charter number 95, four of which are composed of employees on the following Canadian railways: Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Northern Alberta, and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. Division No. 4, embracing the shop mechanics employed on all Canadian railway lines, also operates under charter from the Railway Employees' Department.

In the Union Label Trades Department there are 46 national or international organizations. Charters have been issued by this department to 203 union label leagues, of which six are located in the following Canadian cities: Cap de la Madeleine, Que.; Montreal, Que.; Toronto, Ont.; Kitchener, Ont.; Winnipeg, Man.; Vancouver, B.C.

MEMBERSHIP AND OFFICERS

INTERNATIONAL CRAFT ORGANIZATIONS

A large majority of the labour organizations operating in Canada and the United States are what are commonly called craft unions, that is, those whose members are engaged in a particular trade or calling, as for instance, machinists organized in a machinists' union, and blacksmiths in a blacksmiths' union. The American Federation of Labor has also granted charters to certain organizations with jurisdiction over all classes of workers engaged in a particular industry, such as coal mining. These are known as industrial unions.

According to the report presented to the last convention of the American Federation of Labor, for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1936, there were 111 national and international unions in affiliation. Ten unions were suspended by later action of the convention, for refusal to leave the Committee for Industrial Organization (a body organized following the 1935 convention of the A. F. of L.), which, it was claimed, was a dual organization.

There are a number of other labour bodies operating in Canada and the United States which are not affiliated with the A. F. of L., chief among these being the four railroad brotherhoods, the members of which are engaged in engine and train service. These four organizations comprise one of the most important labour groups operating on this continent.

The list appearing in Chapter XIX, Table 3, contains the names of the bodies affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, as well as those of other central organizations of which information has been received in the department, the total number being 131.

Besides the organizations referred to in this chapter there are a number of other labour bodies operating on this continent, but as they did not make returns to the department and because they are not considered important factors in the labour movement, owing to the fact that their activities are confined to very small areas, their names are not included in this report.

During the past year, the International Union United Automobile Workers of America, the Building Service Employees' International Union, the International Brotherhood of Foundry Employees, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, and the International United Rubber Workers of America, have each established one or more local unions in Canada, while the Coopers' International Union of North America has re-established membership in Canada but as yet has not established any local unions in the Dominion. The one local of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America has passed out of existence, and as a result this organization is dropped from the present list.

Of the 131 organizations whose names appear in Chapter XIX, table 3, 87 have extended their jurisdiction into Canada by establishing one or more branches or having members resident in the Dominion. The American Federation of Labor has also granted charters to nine local unions in Canada, there being no central organization covering the workpeople so organized, making 88 international unions with Canadian affiliation six more than the number recorded in 1935. Of the international organizations operating in Canada, 5 are not affiliated with the A. F. of L. and 9 others have been suspended by that body for failing to comply with its decisions.

The Industrial Workers of the World, an international industrial union, but having no connection with the labour movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor, has a number of local unions in Canada and is discussed in a subsequent chapter.

Fifty-six of the affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the Federation itself, have given recognition to the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (which is discussed in the following chapter) as head of the internationally organized labour movement of the Dominion by affiliating the whole of their Canadian memberships with that body. The Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen maintains its affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada for its Canadian members, although it was suspended from the A. F. of L. in 1928 over a question of jurisdiction. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, the United Mine Workers of America and the United Textile Workers of America are in a somewhat similar position, in that they maintain their affiliation with the Congress although they have been suspended from the American Federation of Labor. This makes a total of 62 international organizations identified with the Canadian body.

II. TRADES AND LABOUR CONGRESS OF CANADA

Originally Established in 1873—Functions—Organizations to Whom Charters Are Issued—Constitution Changed at Toronto Convention in 1934—Recognition by the American Federation of Labor—Objects of the Congress—Platform of Principles—Representation and Membership—Revenue—Representatives at the International Labour Conference—Attendance at the 1936 Convention—Membership, Receipts and Expenditures for Past Twenty Years—Officers of the Congress—Provincial Executive Committees—Fraternal Delegates.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which stands in a position somewhat analogous to the American Federation of Labor and the British Trades Union Congress, as far as legislative matters are concerned, was originally established in 1873. The Congress has met regularly each year since 1886, the last convention, held in Montreal, September 8-12, 1936, being recorded as the fifty-second. While the main energies of the Trades and Labour Congress are devoted to securing legislation which is believed to be in the interest of wage-earners, it has on occasion concerned itself with matters pertaining to the welfare of organized workers as represented by the international trade union movement. The Congress issues charters to unions which are not eligible for membership in any of the existing recognized international or national organizations, as well as to trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour. At the convention held in Toronto in 1934, the constitution was amended so as to permit the issuing of two classes of charters for local unions, viz., (a) those issued for federal units covering employees engaged in industrial activities, such charters to be issued only when application for same has been approved by the local trades and labour council, if one is in existence; (b) those issued for civic employees units. The American Federation of Labor recognizes the Congress as the mouthpiece of Canadian organized labour in dealing with legislative matters, and has affiliated the Canadian members of its directly chartered unions, by paying per capita tax to the Congress.

OBJECTS OF THE CONGRESS

The objects of the Trades and Labour Congress as adopted by the 1921 convention are as follows:—

- (a) To encourage and form such organizations of workers as conform to its rules and regulations;
- (b) To establish city or district central councils based upon the strict recognition of the autonomy of each affiliated organization and the promotion and advancement of such bodies;
- (c) To establish and maintain a congress with suitable headquarters at Ottawa and subsidiary executive committees or federations of labour in each of the provinces of Canada for the purpose of assisting each other;
- (d) To aid and encourage the sale of union labelled goods;
- (e) To influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour and to secure legislation in the interests of the working people;
- (f) To further the spirit of international trade unionism;
- (g) Generally for such purposes as may best advance the interests of working people.

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES

The platform of principles, as revised by the executive council following the 1931 convention, is as follows:—

1. Free education and compulsory school attendance.
2. Maximum legal working day of eight hours and establishment of five-day week.
3. Holidays with pay.
4. Insertion and enforcement of fair wage regulations (based on established union conditions) in all government work direct and indirect.
5. Public ownership and democratic management of all public utilities.
6. Government control and fullest development of all natural resources.
7. Establishment of a tariff board on which labour will be fully represented.
8. Revenue by direct taxation.
9. Abolition of non-elective legislative bodies.
10. Exclusion of all races that cannot be properly assimilated into the national life of Canada.
11. The demand for, and use of, the union label.
12. Prevention of employment of children under sixteen years of age.
13. Equal pay for equal work for men and women.

14. Voluntary arbitration in labour disputes.
15. Proportional representation with group constituencies.
16. The encouragement of the establishment of consumers' co-operative societies.
17. Unemployment insurance.
18. Old age pensions, state insurance for sickness and disability.
19. Uniformity of labour laws throughout the Dominion.
20. Disarmament.
21. Establishment of a colonization and immigration council on which labour will be fully represented.

REPRESENTATION AND MEMBERSHIP

The basis of representation of affiliated bodies at annual or other conventions is: from local branch unions in Canada of international and national organizations and trade unions directly chartered by the Congress, one delegate for the first 100 members or less, and one for each additional 100 members or the majority fraction thereof. International and national organizations which have affiliated their entire membership in the Dominion are each entitled to one additional delegate, who must be elected from their Canadian memberships. Trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour are entitled to three delegates each. Article III of the constitution of the Trades and Labour Congress, governing membership and charters, is as follows:—

Sec. 1.—The membership of the Trades and Labour Congress shall consist of such trades and labour bodies as are hereinafter defined and conform to its rules and regulations.

Sec. 2.—Any international union holding a charter from the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to affiliate its entire Canadian membership; and any local unit in Canada of an international union chartered by the American Federation of Labor which is not so affiliated shall be entitled to direct membership in this Congress.

Sec. 3.—Charters or certificates of affiliation, bearing the signature of the president and secretary-treasurer of the Congress and its seal, may be granted by the executive council of the Congress to any body of workers in Canada who are not eligible for membership in a recognized international or national union.

Sec. 4.—The Congress shall form and charter Trades and Labour Councils and Provincial Federations of Labour, composed of such organizations as are entitled to membership in the Congress.

Sec. 5.—No international or national union other than those already enumerated in sections 2, 3, and 4 shall be admitted to membership except by two-thirds vote of the annual convention of this Congress, but in no case shall any organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with that of an international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.

Sec. 6.—The fee for a charter and supplies for Provincial Federations of Labour, Trades and Labour Councils and such labour unions as may be formed and chartered direct by this Congress shall be $10, and each organization so chartered shall be supplied with an official seal.

Sec. 7.—The executive council shall have power, apart from any other power enumerated in this constitution, by a majority vote of its members, given either at a meeting of the council, or otherwise, to suspend from membership any affiliated or chartered body which in the opinion of the executive has violated either the letter or spirit of the constitution, or which has, or the officers of which have (a) encouraged or advocated secession from international unions or assisted in forming independent or dual organizations; (b) refused to join or affiliate with an international union of its trade or calling when so ordered by the executive. Such suspension shall debar any organization from all rights and benefits of membership in this Congress until the next annual convention, when the suspension may be made permanent and the charter revoked or affiliation cancelled by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote. Any organization may also be suspended from membership or its charter revoked or its membership cancelled upon a motion introduced at any regular convention and adopted by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote.

REVENUE OF THE CONGRESS

The revenue of the Congress, apart from the fee charged for charters supplied to such bodies as are entitled to them, is derived from a tax of 18 cents per member per year from international and national organizations and from unions chartered direct by the Congress, 36 cents per member from trades and labour councils, and a lump payment of $10 per annum from provincial federations of labour. The Congress owns the building in Ottawa in which the head office is located, and which is valued at $40,000, the management being vested in a board of trustees composed of the executive council.

REPRESENTATIVES AT THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

On the nomination of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, Mr. P. M. Draper, president, and Mr. James Simpson, vice-president, attended the twentieth session of the International Labour Conference in Geneva, Switzerland, June, 4-24, 1936, as delegate and technical adviser, respectively, representing the workers of Canada.

According to reports presented to the 1936 convention, credentials were received from 393 delegates, distributed as follows: 3 fraternal; 45 representing international and national unions; 2 representing federations of labour and provincial associations; 36 representing 18 trades and labour councils; 11 representing 3 divisions of railroad telegraphers, and 296 representing local unions.

The report of the secretary-treasurer named the 62 international organizations which had paid per capita tax on the whole of their Canadian memberships, as well as the 3 national bodies and the federations and trades and labour councils, and showed that the total membership for which per capita tax had been paid up to the close of the fiscal year (August 31, 1936) was 112,972, an increase, as compared with the previous year, of 6,974, comprised in 1,624 local branch unions, a gain of 90. In submitting this statement, the secretary-treasurer emphasized the fact that the membership reported was based on the actual per capita tax received and did not give a true picture of the strength of the Congress. In normal years approximately 25 per cent should be added to the membership figures for those in arrears and on whom no tax was paid, but during present conditions this percentage becomes much greater, thereby increasing considerably the actual membership of the Congress.

The receipts for the year, including the balance on hand, amounted to $27,556.61; the total expenditure was $21,143.72, leaving a balance of $6,412.89.

The following table indicates the total membership and receipts and expenditures for the past twenty years:—

The figures for the membership of the Congress as compiled from the returns received from the affiliated bodies are 36,426 greater than those reported to the convention, the explanation being that not all the organizations supplied their paid-up memberships but included all members carried on their books, for some of whom no per capita tax was paid. In addition to the affiliated membership of central organizations, the Congress had 98 directly chartered local unions with a membership of 8,224, which is included in the total membership of 149,398.

III. ALL-CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

Organized at a Conference of Representatives of National and Independent Unions Held at Montreal in March, 1927—Exclusion of Certain Organizations from Representation in the Trades and Labour Congress Results in Formation of the Canadian Federation of Labour—Conferences Held Prior to Establishment of the Congress—Preamble to Constitution—Purposes of the Congress—Accepts Industrial Unionism as Its Basic Principle—Membership and Representation—Attendance at the 1936 Convention—Officers of the Congress.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which held its sixth convention in Toronto, on September 28, 1936, had its origin at a conference of representatives of national and independent unions held at Montreal in March, 1927. The action of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in excluding from representation Knights of Labour Assemblies (all of which have since passed out of existence) and national and independent unions where international organization of the same craft existed, resulted in the formation in 1902 of the Canadian Federation of Labour. The new organization accepted into membership the unions which were excluded by the Congress. Following several conferences between representatives of the Canadian Federation of Labour and some of the other national unions, a preliminary meeting of representatives of such bodies was held in Toronto on November 22-23, 1926, and at this gathering it was arranged to hold a convention in Montreal on March 16, 1927. Committees were appointed to call the convention and to draft a constitution. On February 4, 1927, an invitation was extended to all national and independent unions in Canada to send delegates to the proposed meeting, the call being signed by C. J. Whitley, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, and M. M. MacLean, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which was the strongest organization among the national unions. The convention, which opened in Montreal on March 16, 1927, was attended by 107 delegates representing eight national organizations. The meeting adopted a resolution establishing the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which is embodied in the preamble to the constitution as follows:—

Whereas, we the representatives of national and independent unions in Canada, meeting in convention in the city of Montreal, Que., on the 16th to the 19th of March, 1937, are convinced that—

(a) the Canadian labour movement must be freed from the reactionary influence of United States-controlled unions;

(b) Canadian workers require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard;

(c) while the workers, under the present system cannot obtain the full value of their labour, it is nevertheless necessary to strive at all times to procure higher real wages and better conditions of labour;

(d) it is necessary to promote among the workers a thorough understanding of working-class economics;

Therefore, be it resolved, that a central body composed of the national and independent unions of Canada be here established to give expression to these aims and objects.

The Canadian Federation of Labour having decided to merge its identity with the new Congress, a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs, and in due course it passed out of existence.

PURPOSES OF THE CONGRESS

The purposes of the All-Canadian Congress, as set forth in Article II of the constitution, are as follows:—

Article 11.—PURPOSES.—The Congress shall promote the interests of its affiliated organizations and strive to improve the economic and social conditions of the workers by:

(a) That organization of the workers in autonomous bodies for economic action, i.e., organization in the industrial field.

(b) Assisting the workers, through education, to realize the necessity of working-class political action.

(c) Furthering such legislation as shall be of immediate benefit to the workers, and which tends to increase their social and political power.

The head office of the Congress is in Ottawa, where in 1930 the organization opened new offices in the building of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, 230 Laurier avenue W.

The All-Canadian Congress has its official monthly paper published under the title of the Canadian Unionist.

ACCEPTS INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

At the second annual convention of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour Industrial unionism was accepted as its basic organization principle.

MEMBERSHIP AND REPRESENTATION

The membership of the Congress is derived from (a) affiliated national unions, and (b) chartered independent local unions. Charters are also issued to central councils composed of delegates from national or independent unions identified with the Congress, but such bodies have no representation at conventions of the Congress, nor are they required to pay per capita tax. The representation at annual or special conventions is as follows: (a) affiliated national unions, two delegates representing the general executive board and one delegate from each local unit; (b) independent local unions, one delegate each.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1936 CONVENTION

As a result of a dispute between certain members of the executive and the president of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour concerning the executive's annual report to the convention, the former sent out notices cancelling the annual meeting scheduled for September 28, 1936, at Toronto. The president, however, conducted a convention, at the time and place indicated in the call, with a reduced number of delegates.

OFFICERS OF THE CONGRESS

President, A. R. Mosher (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), 230 Laurier avenue W., Ottawa, Ont.

Vice-president, C. A. Beattie (of the Canadian Association of Railwaymen), Toronto, Ont.

Secretary-treasurer, N. S. Dowd (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), 230 Laurier avenue W., Ottawa, Ont.

Other members of the Executive Board.—Ivan J. Campbell (of the Algoma Steel Workers' National Union), Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; J. Lea (of the National Beverage Workers' Union), London, Ont.; Mrs. M. Finch (of the National Clothing Workers of Canada), Toronto, Ont.; and G. R. Hodgson (of the National Union of Metal Polishers, Buffers and Platers), Toronto, Ont.

IV. CANADIAN FEDERATION OF LABOUR

Revived After Differences Arise Among Members of Executive of All-Canadian Congress of Labour—Previous History—Composition—Officers.

During the period under review the Canadian Federation of Labour once more became a separate organization, after having been a constituent part of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour since 1927. Just prior to the annual convention of the Congress, scheduled to be held in Toronto, Ont., beginning September 28, 1936, a disagreement occurred among members of the executive. As a result, one group decided to sever relations with the Congress, and the revival of the Canadian Federation of Labour was subsequently announced. At the close of the year, the Federation was making plans for a convention to be held early in 1937, and in the interim the affairs of the organization were in the hands of a provisional executive board.

PREVIOUS HISTORY

As stated in the preceding chapter, the Canadian Federation of Labour had been formed originally in 1902, when the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada decided in future to deny representation to certain unions which were dual to some of the international unions in affiliation with the Congress. The Federation functioned as a national organization until 1927, when it merged with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which had been established at a conference of representatives of national and independent unions held in Montreal, Que., during the month of March, 1927.

COMPOSITION

According to available information, at the close of the calendar year 1936 the Canadian Federation of Labour was composed of six central organizations, embracing sixty local branches, and five directly chartered local unions. The six central organizations were: the Canadian Federation of Musicians; the Canadian National Printing Trades' Union; the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; the National Union of Operating Engineers; the One Big Union; and the Transport and General Workers of Canada. The five directly chartered local unions were: The Canadian Bakery Workers' Union, Local No. 1, Vancouver, B.C.; the National Cleaners and Dyers' Union, Local No. 1, Windsor, Ont.; the Regina Fire Department Employees' Association; the Edmonton Civic Employees' Union, Local No. 3; and the National Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Tavern Workers, Local No. 1, Toronto, Ont.

OFFICERS

President, Zenon David (of the Canadian Association of Railwaymen), Montreal, Que.

Vice-presidents, A. E. Bray (of the Canadian Federation of Musicians), Montreal, Que., and J. McKinlay (of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada), Vancouver, B.C.

Secretary-treasurer, W. T. Burford (of the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada), 126A Sparks street, Ottawa, Ont.

Other members of the executive board.—G. W. McCollum (of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union), 34 Boyton road, Toronto, Ont., and A. Meikle (of the One Big Union), 245 Martin street, Winnipeg, Man.

V. ONE BIG UNION

Formation of One Big Union in 1919—Developments During 1920—Preamble to the Constitution—Membership—Chief Officers.

The formation of the One Big Union arose out of a decision of a number of delegates from western Canada who were in attendance at the 1918 convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, held in Quebec, to recommend to the labour bodies of the four western provinces that they hold a conference previous to the next convention of the Congress. It was stated at the time that the proposal was not designed to initiate a secession or separatist movement, but was for the purpose of allowing the western membership of the Congress to formulate a progressive policy, which by united action on the part of the western delegates would secure support from the delegates from the eastern labour organizations at the next convention.

The conference, which was called the Western Canada Labour Conference, met in Calgary, Alta., on March 13, 1919. There were 237 delegates present from western labour bodies, as follows: British Columbia, 85; Alberta, 89; Saskatchewan, 17, and Manitoba, 46. Present also were two delegates representing, respectively, the Trades and Labour Councils of Fort William and Port Arthur. The conference passed a resolution favouring the immediate reorganization of the workers along industrial lines. Another resolution, sponsored by the British Columbia Federation of Labour, an affiliate of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, recommended the severance of affiliation with the international organizations, and that steps be taken to form an industrial organization of all workers. An amendment to this resolution, which provided that the question be submitted to the entire Canadian trade union membership, was adopted. The name of the proposed organization, the One Big Union, was approved on recommendation of the policy committee, which also recommended the calling of another conference after the returns of the vote were received. In accordance with the call for a conference to give effect to the formation of the One Big Union, representatives from British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Ontario assembled in Calgary on June 11-16, 1919, and adopted laws to govern the organization.

Modern industrial society is divided into two classes, those who possess and not produce, and those who produce and not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity, there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible, and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labour power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labour power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.

As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands; as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labour power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self-defence, they are further compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether they seek it or not.

The One Big Union, therefore, seeks to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs and calls upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex, or craft into a workers' organization, so that they may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours of work, etc., and prepare ourselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by production for use.

A more detailed account of the formation and early development of the One Big Union is to be found in the reports on Labour Organization in Canada for 1919 and 1920.

AFFILIATION

In 1927 the One Big Union took part in the formation of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, but in 1929 was expelled by the executive of the latter body for non-payment of per capita tax. At the annual convention of the A. C. C. L. at Winnipeg in November of the same year, the O. B. U. was re-admitted upon payment of a portion of the affiliation fees for the period of delinquency. It was again dropped from membership of the Congress in 1930, but re-admitted in 1932. When the split occurred in the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in September, 1936, the O. B. U. again withdrew and affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

MEMBERSHIP OF ONE BIG UNION

The membership of the One Big Union at the close of 1919, the year the organization was established, was reported at 41,150, comprised in 101 local units. Considerable progress was made during the first two years of its existence, owing to the fact that many of the leading members of some international craft organizations, chiefly those identified with railway shop work, threw their support to the new industrial body. During the next few years the membership began to decline due to the strong opposition offered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and the various international labour unions whose long established form of organization was being challenged. At the close of 1925, the Canadian membership of the One Big Union was reported at 17,256, comprised in 53 local units. For 1929, the general secretary reported 43 local units in Canada with a combined membership of 22,890. According to the return submitted by the general secretary, the total membership in 1936 was 23,745, comprised in 44 local units, a loss of 9 units and 310 members as compared with 1935. The only central council of the O. B. U. is located at Winnipeg and is listed in Chapter XII (Trades and Labour Councils).

OFFICERS OF THE ONE BIG UNION

VI. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

An Advocate of Revolutionary Industrial Unionism—Preamble to the Constitution—I.W.W. in Canada—Canadian Administration Established in the Dominion—Numerical Strength of the I.W.W.—Officers of the Canadian Administration—General Secretary—Treasurer.

The Industrial Workers of the World stands in direct contrast to the trade union movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor (referred to in a previous chapter) and, in fact, to the majority of labour organizations operating on this continent. This body (commonly referred to as the I.W.W.), which was formed in 1905, proclaims itself to be the advocate of what it terms revolutionary industrial unionism, and has as an objective the abolition of the wage system. Among the founders of the organization were Eugene V. Debs, William D. Haywood and Daniel DeLeon, all of whom are now deceased. Metal miners made up the majority of the membership, the remainder being chiefly unskilled and migratory workers. Originally the I.W.W. was designated to be a political as well as an industrial organization, but in 1906 a split occurred over the selection of certain candidates in a Colorado election. Later in the same year a convention was held and those who were opposed to the president were strong enough to oust him from office and abolish the position of president. This position has never been re-established. A further split occurred in 1908, when those who opposed the discarding of the political plank in the I.W.W. platform were expelled. These expelled members subsequently formed what for some years was known as the Detroit faction, but in 1924, by vote of the members, this organization dissolved.

PRINCIPLES OF THE I.W.W.

The principles of the I.W.W., as set forth in the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1908, are as follows:—

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among the millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interest of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto: "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system."

It is the historic mission of the working class to do away with capitalism. The army of production must be organized, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

The early history of the I.W.W. has been recorded in previous issues of this report.

I.W.W. IN CANADA

One of the early affiliates of the Industrial Workers of the World was the Western Federation of Miners, which had a number of locals in Canada. In certain localities of Western Canada there were locals of the I.W.W. which were not composed of miners, and these continued to operate after the Western Federation of Miners quit the I.W.W. and was granted affiliation in the American Federation of Labor. Gradually these isolated locals passed out of existence, the last remaining Canadian branch having disappeared in 1915. The I.W.W., together with some other organizations, was declared unlawful by the Dominion Government on September 24, 1918, but the ban was removed on April 2, 1919, the Criminal Code meanwhile having been amended to cover illegal associations. Although adherents of the I.W.W. were known to be located in various parts of the Dominion, no move appears to have been made to re-establish branches until 1922, when the Vancouver branch of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union No. 120 was formed. The establishment of this branch was brought about through the affiliation of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an independent body, with the Red International of Labour Unions. To this proceeding certain members objected, and some of them subsequently became identified with the I.W.W. and were responsible for the formation of Local No. 120 at Vancouver.

CANADIAN ADMINISTRATION ESTABLISHED IN THE DOMINION

At a general meeting held in Port Arthur, Ont., on September 20, 1931, a resolution was adopted in favour of the establishment of a Canadian administration of the Industrial Workers of the World.

The provisions of the plan were submitted to the general convention of the I.W.W., held in Chicago, November 8-19, 1931. The meeting decided to refer the matter to a referendum vote, and as a result the Canadian administration was established, the powers conferred being as follows:

(a) The officials of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W., shall be a secretary-treasurer, who shall be officially designated "Canadian secretary-treasurer," and an executive board which shall be officially designated "Canadian Executive Board." The duties and powers of the above-named officials shall bear the same relation to the Canadian membership as the present general officials of the I.W.W. under the present constitution, with such exceptions as may be hereafter designated or adopted by general conventions of the I.W.W., or emergency rulings of the general administration of the I.W.W.

(b) The Canadian administration shall have the power to determine all initiation fees, dues and assessments under its jurisdiction.

(c) The Canadian administration shall be empowered to publish literature and establish a press. All literature and press policies shall be sanctioned by the general administration of the I.W.W.

The Canadian administration is under the supervision of the general administration, whose head office is in Chicago, and from whom the Canadian administration shall purchase all supplies, due books and due stamps and shall pay 2 cents per due stamp and 15 cents for cash due book, plus duty and shipping charges, but the general administration may at its discretion authorize the Canadian section to manufacture such supplies as are needed.

With the object of bringing back into the organization unemployed members and of retaining the present out-of-work members, it was decided to reduce the initiation fee to twenty cents and the monthly dues to five cents, those who were employed to pay the initiation fee of $1 and monthly dues of twenty-five cents. For the purpose of raising funds to conduct organization work, a twenty-five cent stamp was decided upon which could be sold to all persons whether or not they were members of the I.W.W.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE I.W.W.

Following its formation in 1905 the I.W.W. claimed a membership of 400,000, but the number of actual paid-up members was believed to be considerably below this figure. From a membership of about 12,000 in 1921, the numerical strength of the organization fluctuated considerably, the number of members in 1929 being 26,325, of whom 3,975 were located in Canada. At the close of 1936 the number of members in the Dominion, as reported by the secretary of the Canadian administration, was 4,200, the same number as reported in 1935, comprised in 11 local branches, a loss of 1 local.

No report having been received from the central organization, the membership appearing in the 1935 report is repeated for 1936.

OFFICERS OF THE CANADIAN ADMINISTRATION

The chief officers of the executive board of the Canadian administration are as follows: Chairman, Lou Walsh, Room 21, 163½ Church st., Toronto, Ont.; and Secretary, William McPhee, Room 21, 163½ Church st., Toronto, Ont.

GENERAL SECRETARY-TREASURER

VII. NATIONAL CATHOLIC UNIONS

Origin of National Catholic Unions—Events Preceding the Establishment of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada—Formation of the Federation—Purposes of the Federation—Federations and Secretariats—Canada Only British Country Having Catholic Unions—International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Objects of the Federation—Adopts Christian Principles as Basis—Convention of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Attendance at the 1936 Convention General Secretary Technical Advisor at Geneva, Chief Officers—List of Unions with Names and Addresses of Chief Officers.

In dealing with the subject of the origin of National Catholic unions it is desirable to make a brief retrospect to the year 1900, when a lock-out occurred in the boot and shoe industry in the City of Quebec, involving the independent unions of shoe workers, some of which had been established in 1899. The difficulty was referred to the Archbishop of Quebec for adjudication. In an award submitted on January 10, 1901, His Grace laid down certain principles to govern the course to be pursued in any future dispute, and in so doing called attention to the pronouncement of Pope Leo XIII, which was promulgated in his encyclical of May 15, 1891, on "The Conditions of the Working Classes," the provisions of which were subsequently proclaimed by Pope Pius X as fundamental rules for workmen's associations.

At this time some of the older national unions in the Province of Quebec, located principally in Quebec City, were affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but by an amendment to the constitution in 1902, the Congress denied recognition to national unions where international organizations of the same craft existed.

In 1912 La Federation Ouvriere Mutuelle du Nord (Mutual Labour Federation of the North) was established in Chicoutimi, being, perhaps, the first association of workmen in the province to confine its membership to Roman Catholic workmen. Early the following year La Corporation Ouvriere Catholique des Trois Rivières (Catholic Workmen's Association of Three Rivers) was formed, and in 1917 L'Union Nationale des Ouvriers de la Rive Sud (National Union of South Shore Workmen) was organized, both requiring members to be Roman Catholics. Delegates from the National Catholic unions in the Province of Quebec met in convention in the City of Quebec in September, 1918, there being 27 local branch unions and independent units represented. In a report submitted to the meeting, it was stated that there were 41 Catholic unions (bodies to which none but adherents of the Roman Catholic faith are admitted) and 17 other national unions which were called neutral, membership being open to all. The convention elected a set of officers and decided to meet at Three Rivers in 1919, when the question of forming a federation of national unions was to be considered.

The second convention was duly held at Three Rivers, on September 20-22, 1919, there being 123 delegates in attendance, representing 63 local branches of central bodies and independent units, comprising a total reported membership of 31,000. The convention expressed the view that the time had arrived for all Canadian workmen to free themselves of foreign or American interference in the conduct and management of their business, and appealed to all Catholic workmen in particular to group themselves into self-governing unions fully consistent with their national and religious aims.

The third annual meeting of the National Catholic unions was held in Chicoutimi, July 19-20, 1920, with 225 delegates in attendance, representing 120 branches with a reported membership of over 40,000. The formation of an organization under the name of National Federation of the Catholic Workers of Canada, was decided upon, and the executive was instructed to prepare a constitution and by-laws for submission to the unions of workers eligible for membership, which would come into force after adoption by the next convention.

FORMATION OF THE FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

At the convention in Hull, in September, 1921, there were 200 delegates from 89 unions in attendance, representing a reported membership of 45,000. In accordance with the instructions of the previous meeting held in Chicoutimi, the executive officers presented a draft constitution for a permanent organization. The convention decided that the name of the new body should be Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada. The draft constitution was in the main adopted without amendment, the principles of the Federation being referred to the religious authorities for preparation. The full text of the principles and the laws, which became effective on January 1, 1922, were printed in full in the report on Labour Organization in Canada for 1921.

AIM OF THE FEDERATION

The aim of the Federation and the means to secure its fulfilment are set forth in the following sections of the constitution.

Article 3.—The Federation has for its aim to promote and safeguard the general interests of Catholic syndicalism in Canada.

In order to reach this end, the F.C.W.C. proposes:—

1. To definitely establish a general plan according to which Catholic syndicalism in Canada shall be developed, and to pursue the methodical application of the same;

2. To create and maintain in this country a concerted movement of Catholic syndicalism which, while allowing the various groups their autonomy, would bind them by federative bonds, permitting to defend and develop in common the professional, economic, patriotic and religious interests of Catholic workers in Canada;

3. To organize a general propaganda in favour of Catholic syndicalism. This propaganda will be made especially through labour newspapers, salaried organizers and workingmen's research clubs;

4. To work out the legislation asked for by the mass of Catholic workers in Canada;

5. To be used as an intermediate agent between the federated groups, whether it is a question of mutual aid or of dispute to be terminated.

6. To represent the federated organizations whenever and in whatever manner the general interest may demand it;

(a) before the public powers;

(b) before such institutions or organizations, whether Canadian or foreign, with which it may seem proper to maintain relations;

7. To create as they are needed all services recognized to be necessary to the federated organizations;

8. To organize or favour all institutions of general interest likely to defend the Catholic workers or to help them;

9. The F.C.W.C. can affiliate with no political party whatever.

A CHAPLAIN FOR EACH CATHOLIC BODY

The constitution of the Federation of a Catholic Workers provides for the appointment of a general chaplain, to be selected by the religious authorities. The section governing the powers of the chaplain reads as follows:—

The general chaplain is by right a member of all congresses of the federation and of the federal bureau. He may attend the meeting of all committees formed by the federation or send a representative. He exercises, in deliberations, the same rights as those exercised by delegates or members belonging to the congress whereat such discussions take place, and is subject, like them, to the usual rules of procedure.

The chaplain does not vote. The general chaplain may attend the meetings and take part in the proceedings of any organization affiliated with the federation.

The chaplain depends solely, in the exercise of his functions, on the religious authorities by which he was appointed.

The general chaplain has the right to give his personal opinion on any question, like all delegates; but his proper function is to represent the church among the Catholic syndicated workmen. It is for him to state and recall, whenever it is needed, the Catholic principles and doctrines, and he only fills his mission when he asks the congress and the committee to make their resolutions and conduct conform to the Catholic principles and doctrine.

The general chaplain may demand that a resolution which, in his judgment, would affect Catholic morals or the teachings of the church, be submitted to the religious authorities and approved by them before being put in force.

The general chaplain of the federation has charge of the superior interests of the souls, of society and of religion. He is entitled, on the part of the delegates, to all the consideration and respect which are due to the religious authorities which he represents.

Each delegate body and local national Catholic syndicate also has a chaplain, appointed by the religious authorities, whose powers are similar to those of the general chaplain for the Federation of Catholic Workers.

FEDERATIONS AND SECRETARIATS

The National Catholic unions of closely allied and particular trades have, like the non-sectarian trade unions, established federations (delegate bodies referred to in a subsequent chapter of this report). In the City of Quebec in 1920 there was formed the secretariat of Catholic syndicates, which is designed to have charge of the various matters affecting the activities and development of the local organizations. There are secretariats in Quebec, Montreal, Three Rivers, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke, St. Hyacinthe, and the District of Ottawa. The Montreal secretariat publishes an official organ for the National Catholic unions in its jurisdiction, the title of the publication being La Vie Syndicale. The National Catholic Union movement also has city central councils, bodies similar to the trades and labour councils which are discussed in a subsequent chapter of this report.

CANADA ONLY BRITISH COUNTRY HAVING CATHOLIC UNIONS

As has been stated in earlier issues of this report, Canada is the only British country in which there are trade unions designed chiefly for adherents of the Roman Catholic Church, and, with two exceptions, all such syndicates are located in the Province of Quebec. Some years ago there were in Great Britain two organizations, the Catholic Federation and the National Conference of Catholic Trade Unionists, the memberships of which were composed of Roman Catholics, but in both cases the members were supposed to confine their activities to defending Roman Catholic interests inside the existing non-sectarian trade unions. It is reported that these organizations made several attempts to function but owing to the fact that the members would not sever their connection with the regular trade unions no religious difficulty was experienced. Later reports indicate that the two English organizations gradually died out.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

Catholic trade unions (or Christian Unions as they are called in Europe) had their origin in Germany more than sixty years ago, having been established through the efforts of Bishop Katteler, assisted by the clergy. Since that time the Christian trade union movement has spread to other European countries, there now being central federated bodies of such unions in Austria, Belgium, Spain, France, Hungary, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia. These several organizations are brought together in the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, which was established at the Hague in June, 1920. The Christian Trade Internationals operating in Europe embrace the following classes of workers: building workers; factory and transport workers; printers; woodworkers; clothing workers; agricultural workers; metal workers; miners; railway and tramway employees; postal employees; tobacco workers; textile workers; food and drink trades employees; public services employees; and general workers.

OBJECTS OF THE FEDERATION

The objects of the Federation are set forth in the by-laws as follows:—

- (a) Defend the workers' interest on the basis of the principles set forth in Article II, in the economic field, and specially in the field of international organizations of labour, wages, working conditions and labour legislation;
- (b) Favour the interests of the organization of affiliated confederations;
- (c) Carry on propaganda in favour of the Christian syndicalist movement in the various countries where it does not yet exist, and promote the affiliation of organizations on a Christian basis which are not yet affiliated;
- (d) Encourage mutual financial support between the affiliated confederations.

Article II of the statutes of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions sets forth that—"The confederation adopts as a basis Christian principles. It therefore affirms that economic and social life implies the collaboration of all children of the same people. It therefore repudiates violence and class strife on the part of the employers as well as on that of the workers. The confederation reckons the present economical and social order is on essential points in contradiction with the Christian spirit. It endeavours to thoroughly modify society in accordance with these principles by following a process of evolution organic and legal. The confederation has above all for its objects the defence of the interests of the workers and employees from a viewpoint of the economic, social and public order conditions through general collaboration."

In addition to the syndicates of Catholic workpeople identified with the Christian Federation of Trade Unions there are also in affiliation unions composed of Protestants. In Switzerland the Christian Syndicates are in great part composed of Protestant workers jointly with Catholic workers. In the Netherlands there are two federations, one composed of Catholic syndicates and the other Protestant unions, and both are in affiliation with the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions.

CONVENTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

The council of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, which consists of representatives of the affiliated national confederations and international trade secretariats, met in Luxemburg, May 22-23, 1936, under the presidency of Mr. Henri Pauwels (Belgium). According to the report of the general secretary, Mr. Serrarens, the total membership of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions was 1,109,341. Among other subjects dealt with by the convention were: application for membership in the Federation of the Polish Occupational Associations, whose membership was about 156,000; armaments; the colonial question from the point of view of both expansionist tendencies and raw materials; conditions of native workers; and the questions on the agenda of the next session of the International Labour Conference. The convention agreed with the proposals relating to holidays with pay, the recruiting of colonial workers, and safety regulations for building workers. Regret was expressed at the opposition to the 40-hour week.

The next meeting of the Federation was scheduled to be held in Paris, France, in May, 1937.

ATTENDANCE AT 1936 CONVENTION

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, which has met annually since 1921, held its 1936 convention in St. Hyacinthe, September 12-16, 1936. According to the report of the general secretary there were in attendance 200 delegates, representing 136 affiliated organizations from the various industries and trades.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

In 1935, the membership of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada was given as 38,000. The reported membership for 1936 was 45,000, comprised in 182 syndicates and 8 study circles, the latter, according to an amendment to the constitution of the Federation passed at the 1926 convention, being also entitled to representation in the Federation, provided that the delegate sent is also a member in good standing of an affiliated National Catholic union. In addition to the local bodies, the National Catholic trade unionists have 22 trade federations and 9 central councils, bodies similar in character to those operating under the auspices of the non-sectarian unions, which are discussed in a subsequent chapter of this report. The above mentioned delegate bodies are directly chartered by the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada. Nearly all of the local bodies are also identified with the Federation either by direct affiliation or through their connection with the trade federations or central councils. In the list following all of the bodies which are understood to be directly or indirectly identified with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada are indicated by an asterisk (*).

During the year 9 federations, 1 central council, 68 syndicates and 1 study circle were organized, while 19 syndicates and 1 local federation were dissolved.

VIII. CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

There are Twenty-eight Unions in This Class, Five More Than Recorded in 1935—Four Are Composed of Civil Servants in the Employ of the Dominion Government—Outline of the Inception of the Various Canadian Organizations.

Although the majority of the labour organizations operating in Canada are international in character, there is a considerable number whose operations are confined exclusively to the Dominion. There are 28 unions in this class, 5 more than the number recorded in 1935. Of these, four are composed of civil servants in the employ of the Dominion Government, and one comprises provincial government employees. The last named, and two of the former, as well as one other association in this group, are affiliates of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. There are a large number of other associations of Government employees, but as no claim is made that they should be classed as trade unions their names are not included in this group. They are, however, given a place in a subsequent chapter entitled "Non-Trade Union Organizations." The statement following gives certain information concerning the formation and the objects of each of the twenty-four Canadian labour organizations.

The Algoma Steel Workers' National Union, which was originally brought into being by the employees of the Algoma Steel Corporation, was formed on June 4, 1935. The objects of the union are set forth in the following section of the constitution:—

Section 1, Article 11.

- (A) Better wages.
- (B) Shorter hours.
- (C) Better working conditions.

Any employee not on a weekly or monthly salary is eligible for membership in the union.

The Algoma Steel Workers' National Union is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada was established in Montreal on March 17, 1929, by representatives of national and local unions of building construction workers affiliated with or chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. The conference declared that (a) the Canadian workers in the building construction industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees was organized at Montreal in March, 1936, and had in affiliation the following groups: National Seamen's Association of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Marine Engineers, and the Mercantile Marine Officers' Guild. The Brotherhood is composed of delegates from each council within the various groups. In addition to the organizations mentioned above, there has been added the Steamships' Stewards, Cooks and Helpers Group, the latter having been formed by means of a subdivision of the National Seamen's Association of Canada. At the close of the year the Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees was not affiliated with either the All-Canadian Congress of Labour or the Canadian Federation of Labour, although co-operating with the former.

The Canadian Federation of Musicians, a provisional national organization, was formed in May, 1936, with headquarters in Montreal. The objects of the Federation are: (1) to unite all independent or other eligible musicians' locals throughout the Dominion; (2) to incorporate into its ranks every eligible musician in Canada; (3) to eliminate all unfair wages and competition and every form of discrimination and to improve working conditions; (4) to promote a better understanding in the economics of their profession; (5) to exert every effort in attaining 100 per cent co-operation, good faith and fair dealing between each other; (6) to include the principles of justice and equity between the employer and the employee; (7) to avoid all "isms" and anything and everything of a political nature, through which there may be a tendency to bring the national labour movement as represented by the Canadian Federation of Labour more or less into disrepute, and which may possibly be harmful to its individual members; and (8) to secure legislation for the benefit and protection of all its members. The Canadian Federation of Musicians is an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association came into existence in November, 1919, as a result of the desire of the Brussels carpet weavers in Guelph, Peterborough and Toronto to have a uniform scale of wages for the trade in Canada. The Guelph weavers were the only ones then organized, being local No. 277 of the United Textile Workers of America. As it was claimed that there was no other method by which the trade in Canada could be organized, the Guelph weavers severed their connection with the United Textile Workers and joined with the weavers in Peterborough and Toronto and formed the Canadian association.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants developed from the Amalgamated Postal Workers, which came into existence in September, 1918, as a result of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the strike of the postal employees in July of that year was conducted in the east and the settlement accepted by the general officers. The original jurisdiction of the Postal Workers, membership in which was open to all post office employees under the rating of a first-class clerk, was from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to Victoria, B.C., and the intention of its promoters was to amalgamate the associations of postal clerks, railway mail clerks and letter carriers in the territory named. An application for a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress was not entertained by the last-named body because the organization admitted to membership certain local branches of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, an organization already affiliated with the Congress. At the annual convention of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, held in August, 1921, the name was changed to Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership being extended to all employees of the Dominion Government.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta, which is composed of employees of the provincial Government, was formed on March 19, 1919, being designed, among other things, "to bring about united action and to act on any matter or issue of common interest to the members of the association." In 1923 a vote was taken on the question of the association's affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but the proposal was defeated by a vote of 316 in favour to 426 against. In 1925 another vote was taken on the same proposition, with the result that 227 were in favour and 214 against—not a sufficient majority, however, to permit affiliation. In October, 1927, the question of affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress was again submitted to the membership with the following result: for affiliation, 396; against, 142; spoiled ballots, 2, giving a majority of 36 in excess of the required two-thirds. The convention of the Civil Service Association held subsequently ratified the decision and a charter was duly issued by the Trades Congress. The association also decided to affiliate with the Alberta Federation of Labour.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada was organized in Toronto on January 4, 1926. The organization, which declared its jurisdiction to cover all land telegraph, radiotelegraph, telephone and allied workers in Canada and Newfoundland, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. On February 1, 1923, at a meeting in Toronto, the commercial telegraphers of the Canadian National Telegraphs decided to go over in a body to the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees. Later the same class of telegraphers in the employ of the Canadian Pacific did likewise. Subsequently a reorganization of the Electrical Communication Workers took place, the former Broker and Leased Wire Divisions forming an independent association, which as above mentioned, ceased to function in 1931. The preamble to the constitution of the Electrical Communication Workers sets forth: (a) the Canadian workers in the electrical communication industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standards; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry. The main organization consists of the British Columbia District, which had one radio unit. The Electrical Communication Workers is also affiliated with the International Federation of Radiotelegraphists (London, England). In October, 1936, this organization withdrew from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and became an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union developed from a branch of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers located in Toronto, which in 1920 seceded because it was alleged (a) that the per capita tax was excessive in comparison with benefits received; (b) that a closer form of organization in the electrical industry was necessary, and (c) that the International Brotherhood had been lax in its efforts to organize the trade in the Dominion. Included in the objects of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union are: (1) to organize all workers in the electrical industry; (2) by mutual effort to place the members on a foundation sufficiently strong to prevent any encroachment on trade rights and privileges; (3) to establish an apprentice system and a higher standard of skill; (4) to encourage the formation of schools of instruction for teaching the practical application of electricity and trade education generally; (5) to cultivate feelings of friendship among the men of the craft; (6) to settle all disputes and grievances between employers and employees by arbitration or otherwise; (7) to assist each other in sickness and distress and to secure employment and adequate pay; (8) to regulate the relations between employers and employed; (9) to promote friendly relations with all electrical workers of the world, and by legal and proper means to elevate the moral, intellectual and social conditions of all members.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers is a craft organization, the object of which is mainly educational. The name of the association appeared in earlier issues of this report, but in 1926 it was changed to Mutual Engineers' Beneficial Fund, the new body retaining in the constitution some of the features of the former organization. In 1927 the name was omitted, it being stated that the association was then a purely mutual benefit organization. Some of the former branches of the original association which did not become a part of the beneficial scheme at a conference in London, Ont., on June 28-29, 1929, revived the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers and adopted an amended constitution. The objects of the association, which was incorporated in May, 1887, are "the elevation and maintenance of the rights of stationary engineers and the recognition of the other business matters in which the engineers in its jurisdiction may be interested or involved." In 1931 the association affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, but withdrew from the Congress during 1936.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees was formed in Toronto under the title "Brotherhood of Canadian Pacific Express Employees," on March 25, 1918, by a number of the employees of the Dominion Express Company. The Brotherhood was registered on May 23, 1918, by the Department of the Secretary of State, under the provisions of the Trade Unions Act. The object of the Brotherhood is contained in the following section of the rules:—

The object of the Brotherhood shall be to unite in one body, for their mutual protection and benefit, all employees of the Canadian Pacific Express Company, and the membership shall include no one but males of good moral character, 18 years of age and over, exclusively employed by the Canadian Pacific Express Company, except officials. Provided, that no general foreman or chief clerk, although eligible for membership, shall hold office. An agent or master of transportation shall be classed as an official.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters was organized on August 26, 1920, at a conference held in Toronto. The objects of the federation are: (1) to organize all fire fighters in the province; (2) to place its members on a higher plane of skill and efficiency; (3) to encourage the formation of local federations; (4) to secure legislation beneficial to firemen; (5) to establish sick and death benefit funds; and (6) to encourage the establishment of schools of instruction for fire fighting. Among other things which the federation favours are: (a) voluntary arbitration of all labour disputes; (b) all civic employees to come under the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act; and (c) the granting of charters to firemen's unions by the Trades and Labour Congress, instead of international charters. The revenue of the federation is derived from a monthly per capita tax. In addition to the seven directly chartered local branches of the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters, its affiliates include twenty-four local branches of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

The Federated Association of Letter Carriers, which was formed on September 15, 1891, is an organization of public servants of the class indicated designed to protect their interests in regard to salaries and working conditions, etc. Until the summer of 1918 the jurisdiction of the association over letter carriers had not been interfered with, but certain members of the association in the West who were not in accord with the settlement of the strike of the letter carriers which took place in July, 1918, launched a new body of postal employees, reference to which has already been made. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers is registered under the Friendly Societies' Act of Ontario for the transaction of life insurance in the province and is also affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The National Association of Marine Engineers of Canada is composed of marine engineers holding certificates granted by either the Dominion Government or the British Board of Trade and was established in 1893 to promote the interests of those employed as marine engineers in the Dominion. The association claims authority to establish subordinate councils and to make regulations for their governance. The preface to the constitution sets forth that it is essential for the progress of marine engineers that they should combine for the purpose of raising their status and to guard their certificates of qualification. In 1922 the association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and on August 27, 1926, was incorporated under The Companies Act of the Dominion.

The National Union of Operating Engineers, a provisional national organization, was formed in December, 1936, with temporary headquarters at 126A Sparks St., Ottawa. The organization is affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which is composed of Indian fishermen, came into existence at a conference held in Port Simpson, B.C., on December 15-18, 1931. The organization was formed for the betterment of the conditions of the Indians socially, mentally and physically, and is designed to be legislative, executive and judicial, and may establish branches in all native villages. Conventions are to be held annually and delegates are to be appointed from each branch. The officers of the brotherhood consist of the president, vice-president, general secretary, general treasurer, general recording secretary and an executive committee consisting of two representatives from each village branch of the brotherhood.

The one Big Union is discussed in Chapter V.

The United Postal Employees of Canada was formerly known as the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association, and came into existence in 1913 at a convention of representatives of a number of scattered independent lodges and postal workers. The unauthorized strike in the postal service west of the Great Lakes in 1918 resulted in the secession of a number of clerks in the western offices who, together with dissatisfied letter carriers, subsequently became members of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, now known as the Amalgamated Civil Servants. In May, 1920, the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress, but the affiliation has not been maintained. The aim of the association is to secure by co-operation with the Post Office Department the classification of post office clerks with a view to getting more equitable salary rates, regulation of hours of labour, the improvement of the public service and such other objects as may arise. The new name was chosen at the convention held in September, 1928, when a reorganization of the society was effected, the Dominion Mail Porters and Chauffeurs' Association being merged with the postal clerks under the name of United Postal Employees of Canada. At the last convention held in Toronto in September, 1934, the name of the organization was changed to the Canadian Postal Employees. In September, 1936, this organization became an affiliate of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The Canadian Printers' Union came into existence during 1930, and according to the former secretary, who is now general secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, this body "was formed in response to a demand from a number of individual printers at several points in the Dominion for a union of their crafts not under alien control." Later the name of the organization was changed to the Canadian National Printing Trades Union. This body is affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which under its charter of incorporation is an international organization, at one time had branches in Newfoundland and the United States, as well as in Canada, but in 1926 it was reported that the last remaining local division outside of the Dominion had passed out of existence. In 1920 the name of the brotherhood, with the consent of the chief officers, appeared in the international group of labour organizations, but at their request the name was in 1927 reinserted in the list of Canadian unions. The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees was formed in October, 1908, was registered under the Trade Unions Act in July, 1909, and in 1923 effected affiliation with the International Transport Workers' Federation, an organization with headquarters in Holland, which embraces many European bodies of transport workers. The Canadian Brotherhood was originally designed to include such railway employees as clerks in all departments, freight handlers, foremen, checkers and porters, car checkers, baggage masters, parlour, sleeping and dining car service employees, locomotive wipers, ash pitmen, cranemen, labourers and express company employees, but in December, 1925, it was announced that the brotherhood was definitely in the field to accept into membership all railway shopmen, both skilled and unskilled. In November, 1917, the brotherhood became affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but was expelled from membership by the 1921 convention over a question of jurisdiction between the Canadian Brotherhood and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, an organization with headquarters in the United States which claims jurisdiction over certain of the classes of workers comprising the membership of the Canadian body of railroad employees. Previous to the expulsion of the Canadian Brotherhood the Trades Congress had endeavoured to bring about an amalgamation of the two organizations involved, but the efforts proved futile. The executive of the Congress, whose action was upheld by the 1921 convention, took the attitude that a continuance of the dual operation of the two bodies claiming jurisdiction over the same class of workers and being in affiliation with the Congress was not in the best interests of the men directly involved, nor of the international trade union movement as represented by the Congress. The Brotherhood is now an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Association of Railwaymen (formerly the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Operators and Dispatchers) was formed during the summer of 1921 in opposition to the old-established Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, an international organization with headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio, with which the organized locomotive engineers in Canada have for many years been identified. During 1920 a number of the Canadian lodges of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers were suspended for violation by their members of what was termed the Chicago joint agreement, a pact entered into on May 17, 1913, with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for the purpose of jointly regulating the mileage of locomotive engineers and firemen in order to benefit the spare men. (In 1927 the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers by an almost unanimous vote decided to abrogate the agreement.) At the 1921 convention of the brotherhood the charters of three lodges, viz., No. 516 at Humboldt, No. 825 at Kamsack, and No. 837 at Trenton, which persisted in ignoring the joint agreement, were cancelled. Subsequently the new Canadian organization of enginemen came into existence. Another reason advanced for the organization of a purely Canadian body was the small return received by the members in proportion to the money sent as dues and assessments to the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in the United States. The Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen established branches in the localities where the charters were cancelled by the international organization, as well as at some other points. On March 1, 1923, the Canadian Association was registered under the Trade Unions Act of Canada, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and in 1931, when the association absorbed the Canadian Association of Operators and Dispatchers, extended its jurisdiction to conductors, trainmen, yardmen, telegraphers and dispatchers and changed its name accordingly. In 1934 the name was again changed to Canadian Association of Railwaymen.

The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is a body composed of employees of a branch of the postal service, which its promoters claim to be in all intents and purposes a labour organization. Among the objects of the Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is the advancement of the service and the interests of its members.

The Canadian Shoe Workers' Union and Allied Crafts, which in the report for 1935 was shown as an independent unit, has, during the year 1936, developed into a central organization, with 11 local unions in affiliation at the close of the year.

The Transport and General Workers of Canada appears for the first time in this group, having been formed near the close of 1936. It is a provisional national union with headquarters in Toronto. This organization is an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Victuallers and Caterers' Union, which was shown as a directly chartered local of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in the 1935 report, became a central organization about the end of the year. It is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

IX. FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

Plan of Labour Organization Provides for the Establishment of Federated Bodies, Including Provincial Federations of Labour, Building and Printing Trades Councils, Federations of Railway Shop Mechanics, Theatrical and Municipal Employees—Synopsis of Their Functions—Division by Groups—List of Federations, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

With a view to consolidating the efforts of local units of kindred trades, the general plan of labour organization provides for the establishment of federated bodies, with the affiliated branch unions electing delegates to represent them. The chief purpose of these delegate bodies is to deal collectively with matters that come within the scope of such organizations. While the jurisdiction of most of these federations, all of which are supported by a per capita tax from the affiliated unions, is confined to a particular locality, some of them include the shop mechanics on a railway system, others cover all organized workers in a whole province, and in three instances they are formed on a Dominion-wide basis, these being Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, A.F. of L., Canadian National System Federation No. 11, and C.P.R. System Federation, all of which embrace railway shop mechanics.

There are two provincial federations of labour working under charters issued by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, with jurisdiction covering their respective provinces. Membership in these provincial federations includes (1) trades and labour councils; (2) international and national local branch unions; and (3) federal labour unions, bodies usually representing trades over which no existing central organizing union claims jurisdiction. A federation somewhat similar to the two referred to above has been chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour to cover the province of New Brunswick. Annual meetings are held at which legislative and other matters of concern to wage-earners are considered. The legislative demands which have been adopted at the conventions are presented to the respective provincial Governments by the executive officers, who may be accompanied by representatives of affiliated local unions.

Other groups of delegate bodies representing kindred occupations include organizations among the building trades, printing trades, and employees of public authorities.

With the exception of that located in Niagara Falls, all the building trades councils in Canada are affiliates of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor. These councils have full autonomy over all matters affecting all organized workmen in their respective localities engaged in the building industry, when in conformity with the laws and decisions of the Building Trades Department. No local council is permitted to enter into any agreement with an association of employers unless such agreement has been submitted to and approved by the majority of the membership in a referendum vote.

Local allied printing trades councils are provided for in the agreement made between the five printing trade organizations (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Printing Pressmen's Union, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Typographical Union) under date of March 7, 1911, and under which there was established the International Allied Printing Trades Association. In some of the Federations, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America is also included. Local councils may adopt rules for their governance, provided that they are in accord with the general laws of the Printing Trades Association, and are designed in part to be the agents through which the allied printing trades union label may be issued to printing firms conforming to the necessary conditions.

The most important delegate body in the railway employees' group is Division No. 4, which is working under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor. It is the largest of the federations, having jurisdiction over the organized shop workers on all Canadian railway lines, including machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electrical workers, sheet metal workers, etc. These workers are in the first place members of their respective local unions and are brought together in a system federation covering the particular railway line on which they are employed. Delegates from these system federations and crafts make up the representation at the conventions of the division, which meets biennially, although special sessions may be called. The purposes of the division are (1) to promote harmony and enhance the welfare of all railroad employees; (2) to aid in organizing all such workers and to consider and decide jurisdictional disputes; (3) to discourage piece work and to confer jointly in regard to schedules and to approve same before presentation to the railway officials; (4) to encourage railroad organizations to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor; and (5) to further the interests of employees by means of legislation and to take such action as may be agreed upon to protect the interests of all concerned. The division also seeks: (a) to bring all railway employees within the organization; (b) to shorten the hours of labour to eight per day; (c) to establish a minimum wage scale for all employees in all branches of railway service; (d) to bring about a national agreement on all railroads in Canada which may if necessary be divided into sections; and (e) to prevent strikes and lockouts.

Included in the system federations affiliated with the department are those composed of the organized mechanics employed on the following railway lines: Canadian Pacific; Canadian National (including the Atlantic, Central and Western regions); Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta; Temiskaming & Northern Ontario; and the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. The employees of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo and the Kettle Valley Railways are under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Pacific System Federation. The functions of Division No. 4 include the making of wage schedules and the consideration of other matters pertaining to the working conditions of the various classes of employees represented. The executive board is composed of the general chairman, vice-chairman and secretary-treasurer, with two representatives from each affiliated craft organization. It is the business of the system federations, of which there are six in Canada, to see that the wage schedules on their respective lines are properly administered and to handle all grievances, reporting to and receiving instructions from Division No. 4. Besides the system federations, the department has received information concerning six local federated bodies of railway shop mechanics in the Dominion to which representatives are elected by the local branch unions affiliated, and their functions are somewhat similar to other delegate bodies of railway shop crafts.

The composition of the federations of employees of public authorities is in some instances more diversified than that of the others mentioned, their memberships including not only ordinary civic employees but also street railway and telephone employees, where such services are publicly owned. Besides the three local organizations, which meet at frequent intervals to deal with local conditions concerning the various trades making up the respective federations, there is one provincial body of such workers, viz., the British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees, which is registered under the Societies' Act of the province and is authorized to issue charters to local branch associations.

The Labour Educational Association of Western Ontario was formed in Woodstock in 1903 as a voluntary unaffiliated body. In 1907 the word "Western" was dropped from the name, the annual meetings of the organization having been attended by a number of delegates from eastern cities. The representatives at the annual conventions of the association include those from such recognized labour bodies in Ontario as contribute a prescribed annual fee, $1 being the minimum and $5 the maximum, according to membership. The functions of the Labour Educational Association having developed along somewhat similar lines as a provincial federation, the name of the organization is given a place in this section. Its object is to advance the principles of the labour movement and aid the work of organization through the dissemination of information, the holding of public meetings and lectures, the distribution of educational literature, etc.

The Federation of Wood Workers, whose jurisdiction covers the states of the Pacific Northwest as well as the province of British Columbia, is the only new organization under this heading.

The Federation of Printing and Kindred Trades, Montreal, has ceased to function and is now removed from the list.

There are in the Dominion 49 non-sectarian trade union federations, the same number as recorded in 1935. (The names of the federations of the National Catholic unions are given in the list appearing in Chapter VII—National Catholic Unions.)

The federations recorded in the appended list are divided into the following groups: provincial federations, 3; building trades councils, 12; printing trades councils, 13; railway employees federations, including three regions of C. N. Railways, 16; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; and miscellaneous, 1. The list of federations, with the names and addresses of presidents and secretaries, is as follows:—

X. DISTRICT COUNCILS

Outline of the Objects, Jurisdiction and Functions of Delegate Bodies Representing Particular Trade Union Branches—Number of District Councils in the Dominion—Names of Councils with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In addition to the establishment of federated bodies, described in the preceding chapter, labour organizations generally provide for a still closer affiliation of local branch unions by bringing together delegates from particular trade union bodies in "district councils" or "conference boards." The jurisdiction of these bodies varies, being in some instances confined to a locality where two or more local branches of the same craft organization exists; including in other instances all local branches of a given trade within a stated area; occasionally extending to an entire province; and sometimes even covering a particular class of workers throughout the whole Dominion. These district organizations are supported by a per capita tax on the branches comprising the membership, each unit being entitled to a certain number of delegates. Meetings are held at stated intervals to deal with trade and other matters considered to be in the interest of the membership, which it is believed could be dealt with, in a conference of representatives who have the opinions of their respective constituents, more satisfactorily than by the individual branches. Some of the more important functions of the district councils in Canada are outlined below.

The conference board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union is chartered by the central organization, and has power to make its own constitution and by-laws and to collect (in order to meet its expenses) a per capita tax from the local branches of which it is constituted. The object of this board is to endeavour to establish and maintain a uniform work-day and rate of wages in the territory under its jurisdiction, and also to regulate apprentice laws, procure favourable legislation for the craft, and obtain for its members information regarding conditions of employment.

Provision is made under the scheme of organization of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners for the establishment of district and provincial councils, the former, which are local in character, meeting at short intervals, and the latter annually. These delegate organizations have power to frame working and trade rules in their respective jurisdictions. They must also provide for and hold trial of all infractions of trade rules, and can enforce penalties subject, of course, to an appeal to the general president of the brotherhood.

The councils of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada have functions similar to those of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers has only one district council in Canada, namely, No. 5, comprising the local branches of the Brotherhood operating in the city of Montreal. Among the objects of the council are the creation of harmony and unity between the local unions of the craft; the establishment of a minimum wage in the district; and the enforcement of a code of working rules governing hours, wages, etc. Council No. 5 has legislative and executive power on all matters relating to the common interest of the locals under its jurisdiction, including the ordering of strikes, subject to the sanction of the general executive board of the brotherhood. A per capita tax is levied on the local unions to defray the necessary expenses of the council.

The Ontario Provincial Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters was formerly known as the Ontario Pipe Trades Council, but in December, 1926, the present name was chosen and a charter for the organization was issued by the head office of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. This provincial association, the membership of which is made up of plumbers employed in the building trade, seeks to improve organization among the craft and to secure better working conditions in the trade. In matters involving members or local branches in the province the association has power to make decisions. Special efforts are made to keep the members of the Ontario branches employed by prompt advice to each other of changes in local conditions and also by the transference of members from one city to another for special large jobs.

At the present time there is only one provincial conference of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association in Canada under charter from the central organization. It is designed to establish the minimum rate of pay and the maximum number of hours for all locals under its jurisdiction. The conference has full power to make laws to govern itself and to levy such assessments upon its members for financial support as it may deem necessary, so long as such laws do not conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the main association.

The International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Welders and Helpers has under charter district council No. 30, covering all Canadian lodges of the craft having members working on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada. This council is represented on the executive board of the Brotherhood by an international vice-president. It has power to form its own by-laws and to call strikes provided that the approval of the international executive board has been secured, but may arbitrate and close strikes on its own volition.

The District Council of Montreal and Vicinity, of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, was organized in June, 1929. The council acts as administrative board for all locals under its jurisdiction. There is no local constitution, but the council is governed by the general constitution of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

There are three district lodges of the International Association of Machinists. District No. 2 has jurisdiction over all locals embracing members of the craft employed on Canadian railways, subject to the general laws of the Grand Lodge. The members comprising the district determine the proportion and method of representation and also the amount and method of collection of revenue. Assessments may be levied within its jurisdiction with the approval of the affiliated members. The district is divided into seven sections corresponding to the territory of the respective general managers of the main trunk roads, as follows: No. 1, comprising the western lines of the C.P.R.; No. 2, the eastern lines of the C.P.R.; No. 3, the western region of the C.N.R.; No. 4, the central region of the C.N.R.; No. 5, the Atlantic region of the C.N.R.; No. 6, the T. H. & B. Railroad; and No. 7, the T. & N.O. Railroad. The officers of the district are the president and secretary-treasurer, who, with the seven section chairmen, comprise the district executive board. District Lodges Nos. 46 and 82 are local bodies, composed of the lodges in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, respectively, and the surrounding districts. These district lodges deal with matters affecting the interests of the members of the association in the localities mentioned.

Under charter from the International Moulders' Union is the Conference Board of Ontario, which has jurisdiction over all locals in the province. It makes its own laws, subject to the approval of the general president, and elects a business agent for the territory under its control. The necessary expenses of the conference board are covered by a per capita levy on each local union in affiliation, the money so raised being received through the international headquarters.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has two district councils in the Dominion, one in Montreal and the other in Toronto. These councils have power to transact business pertaining to the welfare of the members of the various local branches, such as the prevention of strikes, the organization of label agitations, and the adjustment, where possible, of all local differences before they are referred to headquarters. Authority is given to these councils to investigate the financial standing of affiliated local branches, the reports being forwarded to the general executive board. At the general convention the councils are each entitled to one delegate to represent them.

The Toronto Joint Board of the International Fur Workers' Union is the only district council of this organization operating in Canada, and has power to adopt its own by-laws, provided, of course, that there is no objection by its affiliates. The board may assess the members of affiliated locals to meet the necessary expenses.

The primary object of the joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of which there are two, located at Montreal and Toronto, respectively, is to call, conduct, and settle strikes and lockouts affecting the local branches under their jurisdiction. The decision of such boards in all disputes is binding upon the local unions.

The United Garment Workers of America has established one district council in the Dominion. This council has jurisdiction over the locals in the city of Toronto, and its functions are similar to those of councils in the other branches of the clothing group.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union has under charter in Canada one council, with jurisdiction over all locals in the province of Ontario. Among the objects of the Ontario Provincial Council is the promotion of improvements in working conditions for its members. It also endeavours to extend the recognition and use of all union labels, particularly the boot and shoe workers' union stamp, and in a general way to co-operate with the executive in carrying out the contracts and policies of the organization.

The Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union has its own by-laws. Matters having to do with the sanitary conditions of printing offices, the securing of legislation in the interest of the printing industry, and the promotion of harmonious relations among the various branches on matters affecting the trade, engage the attention of the delegates at the annual meetings. A per capita tax which is paid direct to the board, is levied to defray the general expenses of the conference.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees has five district councils under charter. These councils, which meet monthly, are designed to promote the welfare of the brotherhood and to bring about a larger measure of co-operation between the local lodges in the respective districts, each lodge being entitled to representation.

Of the three district councils of the International Longshoremen's Association listed in the accompanying table, only one is composed entirely of Canadian locals, viz., that at Saint John, N.B. This council may make rulings and decisions affecting members of the local branches within its jurisdiction, but such rulings and decisions are subject to the approval of the district branch, while the final decision rests with the executive council of the international association. The Atlantic Coast District Council has jurisdiction over the entire north Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports in the territory, and a clause in its constitution stipulates that one of the vice-presidents must be located in Canada. There is also a similar district body on the Pacific Coast the laws of which require that one of the vice-presidents must reside in British Columbia. A function of these district councils is to investigate the conduct of local branches and members under their jurisdiction, and they also have the power to inflict penalties and fines for violation of the rules of the association.

The United Mine Workers of America has two district organizations, viz., District 26, with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and District 18, covering the coal mining areas of Alberta and British Columbia, the affairs of the latter, however, being administered by provisional officers, the charter having been temporarily withdrawn. (Particulars of the suspension of the charter of District 18 were published in the report for 1925.) District unions of the United Mine Workers have power to adopt rules for their own governance, provided that these rules do not conflict with the laws of the international union or with joint agreements in effect at the time. The districts also have control over the affiliated locals, and have power to collect a per capita tax and to levy assessments on their own members, such assessments not to exceed $1 per month. The district unions are not permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of the members without the sanction of an international convention or the international executive board, but the unions may order local strikes within their own territory on their own responsibility; provided, however, that where such strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international executive board.

The local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union in Ontario are brought together in a provincial federation. The objects of the federation are: (1) the education of the members by means of an exchange of ideas at annual conventions; (2) the advocacy of higher wages and shorter hours; (3) the universal closing of all barber shops on the Lord's Day; and (4) provincial licensing and examination as to qualifications of all barbers, and also more adequate sanitary regulations for barber shops and rigid enforcement of the law pertaining thereto.

There are three districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators: No. 1 comprises the States of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, and the province of British Columbia; No. 11, the Maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario; and No. 12, the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. These districts have power to enact laws for their own governance, so long as such laws do not conflict with the international constitution and have been approved by the affiliated units. Among the purposes of these district bodies is the standardization of working conditions and rates of pay and the securing of legislation for the better protection of those engaged in the theatrical trades.

The International Association of Fire Fighters has two district councils, one with jurisdiction over the locals in the province of Alberta, and the other, British Columbia. The objects of these bodies are: (1) to organize all permanent fire fighters in the provinces mentioned; (2) to foster the encouragement of a higher degree of skill and efficiency on the part of fire fighters; (3) the cultivation of friendship among the members; (4) proper remuneration for duty performed; (5) a pension law that will provide ample funds for those dependent upon pension; (6) to have legislation enacted where necessary to make the fire fighters' position more efficient and humane; and (7) the establishment of sick and death benefit funds.

The Ontario Provincial Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers is authorized to adjudicate on all grievances that may arise between the local branches comprising the board. It is a legislative and advisory body, and its actions are subject to the constitution of the central organization. The board meets annually on the second Monday in January, but may be convened for special sessions.

There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, No. 7 having jurisdiction over all lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway east of Port Arthur, while No. 8 covers the same lines west from Fort William. The object of these district councils is to centralize the work in the respective localities. The chairman of the district bodies handles any grievances which cannot be settled at the local point by meeting with the higher officials at the main centre and endeavouring to effect an adjustment.

The British Columbia Council of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and the Toronto Council of the United Garment Workers of America have been added to the accompanying list during the year. The only bodies dropped from the list were the Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, and the Quebec District Council of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

The list following contains the names of 46 delegate bodies, divided by trades as follows: carpenters and clothing workers (including Ladies' and United Garment Workers and Fur Workers), 6 each; railway employees, 5; machinists, longshoremens and stage employees, 3 each; building workers, mine workers, fire fighters and firemen and oilers, 2 each; and bricklayers, electrical workers, painters, plumbers, stonecutters, boilermakers, bridge and iron workers, moulders, boot and shoe workers, printers, barbers and operating engineers, 1 each.

The list of district councils which follows is arranged in trade groups and gives the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries.

XI. BROTHERHOOD COMMITTEES

The Plan of Organization of the Railroad Brotherhoods Provides for the Setting-up of Delegate Bodies, Including Committees Under the Names of Grievance, Protective, Legislative, etc.—Functions of Committees—List of Railways on Which Committees Formed—Names and Addresses of Chief Officers.

Making up a very important group of labour organizations operating in Canada are the railroad brotherhoods, the members of which are engaged in the operation of trains. These bodies have their local lodges at the various divisional points of the different railway lines. The plan of organization of the railroad brotherhoods provides for the setting-up of delegate bodies, including committees under the names of "grievance," "adjustment," "protective," "legislative," etc., the aims and objects of which have been discussed at considerable length in previous issues of this report.

The functions of the first three named committees, which are composed of representatives from the local lodges comprising the employees of a particular railroad, include the consideration of matters affecting the conditions of employment of the members. Through the efforts of these bodies many adjustments of local complaints have been effected, and on occasion they have made satisfactory settlements of disputes involving the whole membership on a given railway system. Four of the railroad brotherhoods have established bodies known as legislative boards, and maintain representatives at Ottawa. These bodies are designed to protect the interest of railwaymen in laws which may be proposed in connection with railroad operation and also in respect to decisions made by the Board of Railway Commissioners. The provincial legislative boards have similar duties as regards their respective provinces and may co-operate with other organizations in securing uniformity of laws concerning labour. Some other railroad employees' organizations send representatives to Ottawa to look after the welfare of their members when such a proceeding is considered necessary.

The list of delegate bodies for each railway employees' organization is given separately, the names of the railroads over which the respective committees have jurisdiction being arranged in alphabetical order. In each case the name and address of the chairman and secretary (where obtainable) are given:—

XII. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

City Delegate Bodies Designed to Give Expression of Opinion of Organized Workers on Public Questions—Number of Councils Operating in the Dominion—Those Under Dual Charter—Division by Provinces—Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In addition to the federations and district councils which have been discussed in preceding chapters, labour organizations have developed another form of delegate body, commonly known as the trades and labour council or central labour council. These councils are usually established in localities where a number of local branch unions are operating, and delegates from locals within the city or district constitute the membership of the council. Trades and labour councils are voluntary bodies, local branch unions not being compelled to affiliate, although, as a result of efforts on the part of certain councils, many of the international organizations emphasize the importance of the affiliation of local branches with the trades councils in their respective districts.

No power to issue charters is vested in these bodies, but each local union affiliated is required to pay a per capita tax for the purpose of meeting the general expenses. Trades and labour councils are formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of common interest, and are designed, in part, to give expression to the opinion of the member organizations on certain public questions. In some instances trades councils have endorsed the demands of certain affiliated bodies for improved working conditions, and not only have they given their moral support, but they also have been the medium through which appeals for funds to support strikes have been made. Some trades and labour councils, however, have undertaken to go further by usurping the functions of international organizations in issuing strike orders. To check this action the American Federation of Labor, which has under charter 734 councils, some of which are located in Canada, in 1919 amended its constitution prohibiting trades councils which hold charters from the Federation to order any affiliated local branch union to go on strike or to take a vote on the question of a strike until the proper authorities have agreed to such action. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at its 1920 convention took action to deal summarily with councils which violated the constitution of the Congress or encouraged secession movements in the ranks of organized labour.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour has chartered similar organizations, and these are termed "national labour councils." Those identified with the National Catholic Unions are called "central councils," (included in Chapter VII), while those connected with the One Big Union are known as "central labour councils."

There are 13 councils connected with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, operating in Halifax, Moncton, Montreal, Quebec, London, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Prince Rupert and Vancouver.

The Secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, in his return to the department, reports councils of that organization located in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

The single central labour council of the One Big Union is located in Winnipeg.

The remaining 35 councils are chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and fourteen of these also hold a charter from the American Federation of Labor. Those under dual charters are located as follows: Edmonton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, St. Thomas, Toronto, Vancouver, Windsor and Winnipeg.

Twenty-two of the councils are located in Ontario cities, the remaining 34 being divided among the other provinces as follows: Alberta, 7; Quebec, Saskatchewan and British Columbia, 6 each; Manitoba, 4; New Brunswick, 3; and Nova Scotia, 2.

The National Labour Council (A.C.C.L.) Prince Rupert, has been revived and is re-inserted in the list. The seven councils of the Canadian Federation of Labour are listed for the first time. During 1936, four councils ceased to function, viz., Brockville Trades and Labour Council; Sudbury Trades and Labour Council; Thunder Bay Central Labour Council (O.B.U.); and Windsor National Labour Council (A.C.C.L.).

The councils chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are designated by the letters "A.C.C.L.," those identified with the Canadian Federation of Labour are shown with the full name following the location, while the one connected with the One Big Union is designated by the letters "O.B.U."

The following list gives the location of the trades and labour councils in the Dominion, arranged in provincial groups (those operating under dual charters being marked with an asterisk), with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries:—

XIII. TRADE UNION LOCAL UNITS

The Local Branch Union is Foundation of All Central Organizations and Delegate Bodies—The Finances Necessary to Support the Several Adjuncts in the Scheme of Organization are Contributed by the Local Units—Number of Local Branch Unions in Each Group Operating in Canada—Independent Units Formed and Dissolved—Numerical Standing of the Nine Provinces—Cities Having Not Less Than Twenty Branch Unions of All Classes—List of Union Branches With Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries Where Obtainable—Unions Formed During the Early Part of 1937.

The foundation of all the central organizations and delegate bodies which have been discussed in preceding chapters of this report is the local branch union. The name of every international and non-international local branch, exclusive of the National Catholic unions, as well as all independent units in the Dominion, so far as it has been possible to secure particulars, is given in this chapter.

In most instances the local branches have been established through the efforts of representatives of the respective labour organizations operating in Canada. The local units are the basis of all central bodies, and provide the finances necessary for their maintenance in the form of a per capita tax established from time to time. Local units consist of followers of a particular trade or calling in a given locality, a unit chartered by a central organization being given jurisdiction over a stated area. In a number of instances a local branch in a locality bordering on the international boundary line has members living both in Canada and in the United States, some officials in such cases being located on one side and some on the other side of the boundary. In localities where two or more local branches in a craft receive charters from the same central body district councils are sometimes formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of general concern to the members of the organization. Federations are formed by local branches of certain kindred trades, and trades and labour councils are established in localities where the local branches are sufficiently numerous to maintain them. The finances necessary to support these several adjuncts in the scheme of organization are also contributed by the affiliated local units enumerated in this chapter, some of which are identified with each of the three classes of delegate bodies above mentioned.

The branches of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America are known as "system" divisions, which include the membership employed on a certain class of work over a whole telegraph system. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers, besides having local lodges, also have "system" divisions, which cover the operations on a whole railroad system. In the present publication, the names of the "system" divisions are printed under the heading of the locality in which the respective secretaries reside.

As has been the practice in past years, application was made to the secretaries of all central organizing bodies for lists of their local branches in Canada, as well as to the officers of local units of which the department had a record. Of the 88 international organizations with branches in Canada only a few failed to furnish a list of their local unions in the Dominion, although in a number of cases it was necessary to make more than one request, and of the 28 Canadian organizations 5 failed to supply the information requested. In all cases where the local officers failed to supply particulars on the first application a second request was made, with the result that out of a total of 2,886 of all classes of unions in the Dominion direct replies were received from 2,463. Where particulars were not received from the local secretary, the names and addresses furnished by the general secretaries have been used. The information received in the department indicates that at the close of the year 1936 there were 1,885 local branch unions connected with 87 international organizations. The Industrial Workers of the World, an international industrial union, had 11 Canadian affiliated branches, making a total of 88 international organizations operating in the Dominion and a total of 1,896 Canadian branches identified with international bodies. The Canadian central organizations had 740 local branches and the independent units numbered 60. In addition there were 190 National Catholic syndicates and study circles. These figures indicate, as previously mentioned, that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,886 local branch unions of all classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, a gain of 158 for the year, with a total membership of 322,473, an increase of 41,769.

As usual, the Province of Ontario occupied first place as to the number of local branches of international organizations, having 806 of the total of 1,896; Quebec stood second with 275; Alberta third with 194; and British Columbia fourth with 190. The remaining five provinces ranked as follows: Saskatchewan, 133; Manitoba, 113; Nova Scotia, 94; New Brunswick, 87, and Prince Edward Island, 4. Ontario also stood first in the number of local branches of Canadian organizations, having 275 out of a total of 740; Quebec ranked second with 91, British Columbia third with 90, and Alberta fourth with 82. The other five provinces stood as follows: Manitoba, 69; Saskatchewan, 60; Nova Scotia, 39; New Brunswick, 27, and Prince Edward Island, 7.

The six local units of civic employees in Winnipeg, which are united in the Civic Employees' Federation, have their own constitution and by-laws, the federation, to which each unit sends three delegates and pays a per capita tax, being the executive of the constituting units.

Independent units which were formed or which seceded from other organizations during the year were: Domestic Workers' Union, Halifax, N.S.; Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, Florence, N.S.; Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, North Sydney, N.S.; Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, Sydney Mines, N.S., (2); Labour Association, Chatham, N.B.; National Independent Coal Handlers' Association, Montreal, Que.; Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers, Montreal, Que.; Textile Workers' Union, Montreal, Que.; Tanners and Curriers' Union, St. Hyacinthe, Que.; Labour Union, Cobourg, Ont.; Amalgamated Workers' Association, Kenora, Ont.; Machinists' Union, Kingston, Ont.; Steamship Clerks, Ottawa, Ont.; Bowles' Lunch Employees' Independent Union, Toronto, Ont.; Brown's Bread, Ltd., Bakery Employees' Association, Toronto, Ont.; Canadian Printers' Union, Calgary, Alta.; British Columbia Provincial Association of Fire Fighters, Vancouver, B.C.; Canadian Seafarers' Association, Vancouver, B.C.; Sailors' Union of the Pacific, Vancouver, B.C.; and Inland Boatmen's Union of the Pacific, Victoria, B.C. The following eleven independent units either were dissolved or became identified with some other organization: Bricklayers' Union, No. 1, Inc., Montreal, Que.; Dairymen's Union, Riviere du Loup, Que.; Canadian Shoe Workers' Union and Allied Crafts, Galt, Ont.; Algoma Steel Workers' Union, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; Telegraph Messengers' Union, Toronto, Ont.; Jewellery Workers' Union, Toronto, Ont.; Cadomin Miners' Local Union, Cadomin, Alta.; Lethbridge Miners' Union, Lethbridge, Alta.; Standard Miners' Union, Shaughnessy, Alta.; B.C. Miners' Association, Fernie, B.C.; and Vancouver Plasterers, Vancouver, B.C.

The numerical standing for 1936 of the nine provinces of the Dominion as to local branches of all classes of labour organizations, including the National Catholic unions, was as follows: Ontario, 1,093, an increase of 67 over 1935; Quebec, 573, an increase of 59; British Columbia, 295, an increase of 31; Alberta, 278, an increase of 12; Saskatchewan, 193, a decrease of 2; Manitoba, 188, an increase of 2; Nova Scotia, 138, a decrease of 9; New Brunswick, 116, a decrease of 1; and Prince Edward Island, 12, a decrease of 1.

There were 30 cities in the Dominion having not less than 20 local branch unions of all classes, 2 more than the number recorded in this group in 1935. The two cities which qualified for inclusion in this class in 1936 were St. Hyacinthe and St. Catharines. Montreal, as usual, ranked first with 220 local unions (45 of which are National Catholic syndicates); Toronto stood second with 200; Winnipeg occupied third place with 118; and Vancouver fourth with 117 (the same order in which these cities appeared in the previous year). The other 26 cities ranked as follows: Edmonton, 85; Quebec, 77 (36 of which were National Catholic syndicates); Calgary, 66; Ottawa, 64; Hamilton, 62; London, 61; Regina, 44; Halifax and Victoria, 42 each; Windsor, 41; Saskatoon, 39; Sherbrooke, 38 (20 of which were National Catholic syndicates); Three Rivers, 38 (20 of which were National Catholic syndicates); Saint John, 37; Fort William, 34; Port Arthur, 32; Moose Jaw, 30; Moncton, 27; North Bay, 26; St. Hyacinthe, 26 (21 of which were National Catholic syndicates); St. Thomas, 25; Stratford, 23; Brandon and Lethbridge, 21 each; Brantford and St. Catharines, 20 each.

During the interval between the dates at which reports were received from the central organizations and the publication of this review a number of local branches have been established, their names being published in a separate list, following the directory of local unions.

The list here printed is arranged by provinces, proceeding from east to west, with cities and towns arranged in alphabetical order. Local unions under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are designated by the letters T. and L. C. following the names; unions in Canada under charters direct from the American Federation of Labor have the letters A.F. of L. as an affix; branches of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are denoted by the letters A.C.C.L.; branches of the Canadian Federation of Labour are shown by the letters C.F. of L.; and the independent units are so described. When the information could be obtained, the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, as revised up to the date of publication, are given, the post office address of the respective officers being the same as the heading under which their names appear, unless otherwise specified.

XIV. BUSINESS AGENTS

An Important Office Which Has Developed in the Scheme of Trade Union Organization—Duties of Business Agents—Number Reported at the Close of 1936—List of Localities and Trades Having Business Agents, with Their Names and Addresses.

A somewhat important office which has developed in the scheme of trade union organization is that of business agent. Previous to the establishment of the office of business agent, duties now entrusted to such an officer were frequently referred to committees, the members of which often found it difficult to give sufficient time to the work. The regular duties of a business agent, referred to as "walking delegate," in the early days of the office's creation, require him, where permissible, to visit the various works on which members of his craft are employed to ascertain if all are in good standing with the organization and to endeavour to secure applications for membership if there are non-members working. The agent is required to see that the fair wage clauses on government or municipal contracts (where there are such provisions) are observed, and where alleged violations are detected, he is empowered to take the necessary steps to bring them to the attention of the proper authorities. Likewise the business agent must investigate complaints concerning conditions of employment and, if the union considers these complaints to be of sufficient importance, he must try and adjust the difficulties. An important feature of the business agent's duties is the receiving of applications for labour from employers and the furnishing of the men required so far as may be possible. Business agents are usually elected annually by the local branches concerned, their salaries being paid from local funds, either from the regular dues, or by a weekly or monthly assessment, but in a few instances different methods of payment prevail. In some localities, where a single union is not strong enough to maintain a business agent, two or more local unions of the same craft or kindred trades sometimes combine to support such an official.

Published herewith are the names of 208 business agents, 31 more than the number reported in 1935. When the position of business agent is combined with the secretaryship, as it is in many instances, the name of the business agent is omitted from the following list, but is published in the directory of secretaries of local unions.

The arrangement of the list printed below shows the localities, proceeding from east to west, in which business agents are maintained, together with the names of the trades and the names and addresses of the business agents.

XV. REVOLUTIONARY LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS

Third (Communist) International Formed in Moscow March 6, 1919—First Meeting of International Council of Trade Unions Held in Moscow in July, 1921—Red International of Labour Unions—Preamble to Constitution—Aims and Purposes—Application for Affiliation of the British Communist Party Rejected by Labour Party—Would Bar the Communist Party From the Ballot of New York State—Communists Debarred in Illinois—Communist Party of Canada—Declared Illegal in 1931—Communist Party Convention Postponed—Communist Candidates in Provincial Elections—Young Communist League—Young Pioneers—Workers' Unity League—Would Debar All Communists From Quebec Legislature—Communist Literature Distributed in Corridors of Legislative Buildings.

The Third (Communist) International was formed in Moscow on March 6, 1919. This revolutionary body seeks to combine political action of the workers with economic action to attain its aim. In August, 1920, about a year after the re-establishment of the International Federation of Trade Unions (referred to in a subsequent chapter), the Third International organized the International Council of Trade Unions, with the object of grouping the labour organizations adhering to the Moscow International. At the first meeting of the International Council of Trade Unions, which was held in Moscow, July, 1921, there were 380 delegates present, reported to represent a membership of 16,400,000 in 41 countries.

As a medium through which to propagate the doctrine of the Third International, there was established at this meeting the Red International of Labour Unions. This body proclaimed itself to be an international, which, together with the Communist International, will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the setting up of the dictatorship of the proletariat: an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth.

The original affiliate in Canada of the Communist International was the Workers' Party, the name being subsequently changed to the Communist Party of Canada, with headquarters in Toronto, an organization which recognized the Moscow body as the only real centre of world revolutionary activities. As an aid to the propagation of the communist doctrine among the youth of Canada, there was set up by the Communist International the Young Communists' League, a body which is affiliated with the Young Communist International at Moscow. For the younger children an organization known as the "Young Pioneers" was established. The official representative on the North American continent of the Red International of Labour Unions is the Trade Union Educational League. One of the objects of the League is the changing of the old-established plan of craft labour organization to what is known as industrial unionism, similar to the system in operation in the U.S.S.R.—one union for each industry. Adherents of the League, who are also members of trade unions, have endeavoured by a system called "boring from within" to secure support for the proposed plan of labour reorganization, following the accomplishment of which the organized workers on this continent are to be affiliated with the Red International.

RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOUR UNIONS

The above-mentioned revolutionary adjuncts of the Communist International being so closely related, they are all discussed in the present chapter, in which are also described incidents regarding opposition to their propaganda and methods. The first of these bodies to be discussed is the Red International of Labour Unions, which was formed as a result of a conference of Russian trade union officials and members of the Third (Communist) International held on July 15, 1920. As a result of this meeting a provisional committee, known as the International Council of Trade and Industrial Unions, was appointed for the purpose of calling a world congress of trade unions in the following year. In accordance with instructions received from the Third International, this meeting was arranged and representatives of various organizations throughout the world met in Moscow in July, 1921. At this conference a permanent international organization under the name of Red International of Labour Unions was formed. A constitution was adopted, the preamble of which was as follows:—

The class struggle has now reached such a degree of development and acuteness that the working class, in order to successfully conduct and complete its struggle for emancipation, must fight as a solid, revolutionary class power, not only on a national but also on an international scale, against the bourgeoisie which despite the severe competition on the world market, is closely united in its hatred of the proletarian revolution and solidly welded against the slightest attempt of the proletariat to free itself from exploitation. Since the exploitation is international the fight against it must have an international character. All internationals of labour unions, which existed up to the present moment, at best were but international statistical bureaus for mutual information. The International Secretariat of Labour Unions before the war was merely an information agency; it did not pursue any militant class aims. The Amsterdam International of Labour Unions is even less fit to deal with the issues at hand than its predecessor. The first was but an information office, the latter occupies itself with politics of the worst kind, with anti-proletarian, bourgeois politics. It sets forth the idea of class co-operation, social peace and peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism. In its essence it is an international of counteraction to the struggle for emancipation of the working class. Against this international of impotence, confusion, subservience to the bourgeoisie, such as the Amsterdam International is, we must oppose an international of revolutionary vigour, of class activity—an international which together with the Communist International will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat; an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth.

Such a militant labour union international can be built up only by revolutionary class unions, conscious of the purpose and methods of the defensive and offensive struggle against the class enemy. The problem history has put before the revolutionary unions requires the utmost concentration of power, unexampled intensity and the greatest self-sacrifice of the conscious vanguard elements of the working class.

The following are the aims and purposes of the Red International of Labour Unions:—

(1) To organize the large working mass in the whole world for the overthrow of capitalism, the emancipation of the toilers from oppression and exploitation and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth.

(2) To carry on a wide agitation and propaganda of the principles of revolutionary class struggle, social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat and revolutionary mass action for the purpose of overthrowing the capitalist system and the bourgeois state.

(3) To fight against the corruptive ulcer, gnawing at the vitals of the world labour union movement, of compromising with the bourgeoisie against the ideals of class co-operation and social peace and the absurd hopes for a peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism.

(4) To unite the revolutionary class elements of the world labour union movement and carry on decisive battle against the International Bureau of Labour attached to the League of Nations and against the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, which by their programs and tactics are but the bulwark of the world bourgeoisie.

(5) To co-ordinate and regulate the struggle of the working class in all countries and organize international demonstrations each time when the situation demands them.

(6) To take the initiative of international campaigns about prominent events of class struggle, to open subscription lists for the benefit of strikers in great social conflicts, etc.

Membership in the Red International is open to any revolutionary economic class organization if it accepts the following conditions:—

(1) Endorsement of the principles of revolutionary class struggle.

(2) Application of these principles in its daily struggle with capitalism and the bourgeois state.

(3) Recognition of the necessity of the overthrow of capitalism through the social revolution and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat for the transition period.

(4) Recognition and submission to the international proletarian discipline.

(5) Recognition and application of the decisions of the constituent congress of the Red International of Labour Unions.

(6) The rupture with the Amsterdam yellow international.

(7) United action with all the revolutionary organizations and the Communist Party of the country in all defensive and offensive activities against the bourgeoisie.

WOULD BAR THE COMMUNIST PARTY FROM THE BALLOT OF NEW YORK STATE

The borough president of Queens County filed a petition with the Attorney-General of the State of New York asking that the Communist Party be barred from the ballot of the state at the election of November 3, 1936. He also asked that the Attorney-General investigate the legality of the Communist Party with a view to prohibiting its name, candidates or emblem from appearing on any ballots in the future.

The petition further stated:—

"That your petitioner believes the Communist Party of the United States of America is an unlawful organization and anarchistic, as defined by the Penal Code of the State, Sections 160, 161 and 162; that it is a 'red' organization, part and parcel of the Third International with headquarters in Moscow, Russia; that it seeks to overthrow the government of the United States by force and violence; that it seeks to change the form of government of this country by unconstitutional methods; that it would have atheism prevail in this country; and that it is seeking to undermine the people of the United States by breeding discontent, preaching false doctrines, inciting class struggle, advocating force and violence, and inculcating disrespect and contempt for law and order and the Deity."

The petition was not granted, but following the election it was reported that the Communist Party was removed from the list of "legal" political parties in New York State, because it failed to poll 50,000 votes for its candidate for Governor. Unless it obtains at least 50 signatures on petitions from each of the state's counties before the next election, the party will not have a place on the next ballot. The law specifying 50,000 as the number of requisite votes for a place on the next ballot was passed by the 1936 Legislature.

COMMUNISTS DEBARRED IN ILLINOIS

Three Supreme Court Justices of the State Electoral Board of Illinois ruled that the petition of candidates of the Communist Party was insufficient to entitle them to places on the November, 1936, general election ballot. The petition objecting to the Communist candidates claimed that the party blanket petition did not contain the required 200 signatures from at least 50 counties, and the objection was sustained by the board.

APPLICATION FOR AFFILIATION OF THE BRITISH COMMUNIST PARTY REJECTED BY LABOUR PARTY

In supporting its application for affiliation to the British Labour Party the Central Committee of the Communist Party issued a statement, which ends with the following declaration:—

"We pledge ourselves loyally to accept the constitution of the Labour Party and carry out all decisions democratically arrived at in the interests of the working class. We declare that unity is possible, that it can be achieved, that a common program can be worked out that will place the British working-class movement in line with their comrades of all lands, and advance still further our great movement towards Socialism and the abolition for ever of the horrors of war and the menace of Fascism. It is in this sense, and for this purpose alone, that the Communist Party asks the Edinburgh Conference to accept it as an affiliated organization."

The National Executive Committee of the Labour Party, through its secretary, forwarded the following communication in reply to the application:—

"After full consideration, the National Executive Committee came to the conclusion that no circumstance had arisen to justify any departure from the decision registered by the annual conference at Edinburgh in 1922, when, after a lengthy discussion (in which you will remember you took part), a similar application for affiliation was rejected by 3,860,000 to 261,000.

"On that occasion it was clearly stated that the fundamental difference between the democratic policy and practice of the Labour Party and the policy of dictatorship which the Communist Party had been created to promote was irreconcilable. No events which have taken place in the intervening period have served to reconcile that profound political distinction. It is true that Fascism has conquered power in various European states. In the opinion of the National Executive Committee, however, the victories of the Fascist dictatorships were in part facilitated by the campaigns for Communist dictatorship that preceded them—campaigns which effectively split the working-class movements and rendered their overthrow possible.

"Moreover, the National Executive Committee cannot fail to take note of the proclaimed fact that the present application for affiliation is but an evidence of the deviation in the tactics which have been pursued by the Communist International in recent years, and that affiliation is sought, not for the purpose of promoting the Labour Party's declared policy and program, but, on the contrary, to utilize party facilities on the platform, in public conference and in the party press to displace their essential democratic and Socialist character and substitute a policy and program based upon Communist Party principles.

"The National Executive Committee is as firmly convinced as were their predecessors that any weakening in the Labour Party's defence of political democracy, such as the affiliation of the Communist Party would imply, would inevitably assist the forces of reaction, would endanger our existing liberties, and would retard the achievement of Socialism in this country.

"In these circumstances the National Executive Committee is unable to accede to your application."

At the Labour Party conference held at Edinburgh, Scotland, on October 7, 1936, the following resolution was submitted:—

"That this conference, recognizing the need for the unity of the working-class movement, instructs the National Executive Committee to accept the affiliation of the Communist Party on the conditions laid down by the party constitution."

After a lengthy discussion the resolution was rejected by a card vote of 592,000 for to 1,728,000 against.

The following is the closing paragraph of a statement on "British Labour and Communism" issued by the National Council of Labour and embodied in the 1936 annual report of the British Trades Union Congress:—

"The issue is plain. The Labour Movement will remain firm to its principles. It will not attempt to achieve a spurious unity with those who hold principles so completely irreconcilable with Labour and who have no faith in democracy. The clear-cut refusal of the Executive Committee of the Labour Party to accept the Communist affiliation is a guarantee for the future development and progress of British Socialism."

COMMUNIST PARTY OF CANADA

The first national convention of the Workers' Party of Canada (the name being afterwards changed to the Communist Party of Canada) was held in Toronto, February 17, 1922. In connection with the formation of the Workers' Party of Canada, it may be of interest to relate that late in 1921 the organization of the Workers' Party of America was completed at a convention held in New York. The platform of the Workers' Party of Canada, as adopted at the first convention, was almost identical with that of the Communist Party in the United States, and read as follows:—

1. To consolidate the existing labour organizations and develop them into organizations of militant struggle against capitalism, to permeate the labour unions and strive to replace the present reactionary leadership by revolutionary leadership.

2. To participate in the elections and the general political life of the country. Its representatives in the various legislative and administrative institutions will expose the sham democracy of capitalism and help to mobilize the workers for the final struggle against the capitalist state. They will give conscious and public expression to the every day grievances of the working class in concrete demands upon the capitalist governments and their institutions.

3. To lead in the fight for the immediate needs of the workers, broaden and deepen their demands, organize and develop out of their every day struggles a force for the abolition of capitalism.

4. To work for the overthrow of capitalism and capitalist dictatorship by the conquest of political power, the establishment of the working class dictatorship and of the workers' republic.

COMMUNIST ORGANIZATION DECLARED ILLEGAL

In 1931 the Communist Party of Canada was declared an unlawful association and eight of its members were sent to penitentiary by an Ontario court.

COMMUNIST PARTY CONVENTION POSTPONED

Arrangements had been made and, in some instances, delegates appointed for the convention of the Communist Party of Canada, which was originally scheduled to open in Toronto on October 9, 1936. However, on October 1, the Central Committee issued the following statement, which was signed by Sam Carr, acting general secretary of the Communist Party of Canada, to all organizations and friends of the Party announcing the postponement until early in 1937 of the convention slated to open the latter part of the next week:—

"The General Secretary of the Communist Party of Canada, Tim Buck, is at present in Spain. His inability to return in time for the opening of the Eighth National Convention makes it necessary for the Central Committee to announce the postponement of the convention that was to have opened on October 9.

"The people of Spain are now fighting the most desperate battle against the forces of Fascism. Any help that we can give them should be forthcoming rapidly and unstintingly. The presence of Comrade Buck in Spain, though it necessitated the postponement of our convention, will be greeted by all progressive Canadians.

"In the nearest future, a full session of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Canada will be held to discuss some immediate problems facing our movement and the people of Canada. The Central Committee will map out the plans for a vigorous campaign to prepare for the Eighth Convention to be held early in 1937."

COMMUNIST CANDIDATES IN PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

In the Manitoba provincial election held July 27, 1936, James Litterick, general secretary of the Communist Party of Manitoba and the only Communist to contest a seat, was elected as one of the representatives for the city of Winnipeg. He is the first member of the Communist Party of Canada to sit in a provincial legislature. Members of the same Party contested three ridings in the city of Montreal in the Quebec Provincial election held on August 17, 1936, but none was elected.

YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE

The Young Communist League of Canada was established on July 22, 1922, under the auspices of the Communist Party, and subsequently became an affiliated section of the Young Communist International, which has its headquarters in Moscow. The platform of the League is set out as follows:—

1. To penetrate the mass of the working class youth with communist agitation and education and to draw them away from the youth organizations established by the capitalists such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Church Clubs, Y.M.C.A., etc.

2. To conduct a militant campaign against capitalist militarism among the youth who form the bulk of the capitalist armies.

3. To link up with the militant section of the working class in the unions and work for the conversion of the weak craft unions into strong industrial unions capable of defending the workers against the offensive of the capitalists on their standard of living and for the overthrow of capitalism. To pay attention to the economic needs of the working class youth by demanding: (a) prohibition of all children from engaging in any kind of labour until they have reached the age of sixteen; (b) young workers to receive the same wages as adult workers for the same work.

The chief officer of the League is Bill Kashtan, national secretary, 274 College st., Toronto. The official organ of the Young Communist League of Canada was the Young Worker, published weekly in Toronto, Ont., but in 1936 it ceased publication and its subscription list was taken over by the Advance, a monthly publication issued in Toronto.

YOUNG PIONEERS

For the purpose of teaching Communism to the younger children of the Dominion, an organization called the Young Pioneers has been established. This body, being under the jurisdiction of the Young Communist League, has no national officers.

WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE

In the last report reference was made to the negotiations between the various unions of the Workers' Unity League and affiliated organizations and the international unions whereby the membership of most of the former unions were taken over by the latter. As a result of further negotiations the memberships of the remaining locals of organizations affiliated with the Workers' Unity League have been absorbed by locals of the various international bodies, and the League has passed out of existence.

WOULD DEBAR ALL COMMUNISTS FROM QUEBEC LEGISLATURE

According to press reports, the Catholic Farmer's Association of St. Hyacinthe passed a resolution calling for an amendment to the Quebec Election Act, so as to debar any and all Communists from presenting themselves as candidates to sit in the Legislative Assembly of the province of Quebec. It was reported also that this same organization requested that Section 98 of the Criminal Code be re-established with the least possible delay.

COMMUNIST LITERATURE DISTRIBUTED IN CORRIDORS OF LEGISLATIVE BUILDINGS

As a result of Communist literature being found in the corridors of the legislative buildings in Quebec, Premier Maurice Duplessis, speaking in the Legislature on October 16, 1936, said: "We plan to put a closer watch on people entering and leaving the Legislature, not because we do not want the public to come here and listen to their representatives, but because we wish to bring before the bar of justice those responsible for distributing the literature found in the Parliament Buildings last night. I wish to warn also those, be they communists or any other 'ists,' that the Attorney-General's Department plans to take severe and immediate action against those responsible for these abuses."

XVI. ORGANIZED WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

The Total Membership for all Classes of Workers in Seventy Countries—International Federation of Trade Unions—Objects of the Federation—Seventh International Trade Union Congress—International Trade Federations—Membership of I.F.T.U.—International Trade Secretariats—Chief Officers of the Federation—Trade Union Unity in France—Other International Organizations—Membership of the British Trades Union Congress—Chief Officers—The Fifty-sixth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor—Membership—Organizations in Affiliation with the Federation—Officers—Secretaries of Departments—Canadian Organizers.

In addition to showing the trade union membership of the various organizations in Canada, the department in this chapter desires to present such reliable information as it has been possible to secure concerning organized wage-earners throughout the world.

With the exception of the trade union membership for Canada and the United States, which is taken from departmental records, the figures in the accompanying table have been supplied by the General Secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, and represent the number of organized workers at the latest date for which particulars were available.

For the seventy countries appearing in the appended table, the total for all classes of workers was 53,400,152, the number for seventy countries in 1935 being 40,875,357.

As has been mentioned in earlier issues of this report, there is in the United States, Great Britain, Canada, other British countries, and in all the countries where the International Federation of Trade Unions has affiliated National Centres, a more clearly defined limitation to the scope of trade union organization than that which prevails in some other countries of Europe, Asia, South America and Africa, where there are organized bodies operating along other than purely industrial lines, the membership of which is not confined strictly to wage-earners.

With this exception being borne in mind, the figures for the various countries are given as follows:—

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The International Federation of Trade Unions was originally established in 1901, but with the outbreak of the World War in 1914 it ceased to function, and the 1915 convention scheduled to be held at San Francisco was cancelled. The American Federation of Labor, believing that it was incompatible with the then United States policy of neutrality to send per capita tax to Berlin, at that time the seat of the international body, discontinued paying its contributions. Subsequently efforts were made by the national centres of Great Britain, United States and France to have the office of the Federation transferred to a neutral country, but without success. With the conclusion of the war, a representative international meeting, at which delegates were present from eleven countries, including the United States, was convened at Amsterdam, Holland, in July, 1919. As a result of this conference the affairs of the old international organization were wound up, and a new federation was established. Although represented at the meeting in Amsterdam, the American Federation of Labor did not continue its affiliation, claiming that the rate of per capita tax was too high, and also objecting to the issuance by the executive officers of declarations of policy with which the American Federation was at variance. The headquarters were for a time in Berlin, Germany, but in 1933 were transferred to Paris, France.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada became an affiliate of the International Federation in June, 1920, since which time officers of the Congress have been on the general council.

OBJECTS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The objects of the International Federation of Trade Unions, as revised at the meeting in June, 1924, are as follows:—

- (a) To bring about the unity of the international working class by developing closer relations between the trade unions in all countries.
- (b) The development of International Trade Secretariats accepting the International Federation of Trade Union's platform.
- (c) To promote the interests and activities of the trade union movement, nationally and internationally.
- (d) To carry on any activities of common interest to the trade unions.
- (e) To promote the development of international social legislation.
- (f) To promote workers' education.
- (g) To avert war and combat reaction.

The methods by which the Federation seeks to achieve its objects are:—

- (a) Close co-operation with the affiliated national centres and the International Trade Secretariats.
- (b) Co-operation with other organizations, in so far as such co-operation appears useful in the interests of the trade union movement.
- (c) Giving support to trade union activities in the affiliated countries, when requested by the national centres concerned.
- (d) Giving support to trade union activities in countries not yet affiliated.
- (e) Mediation in any cases of dispute within the trade union movement.
- (f) The compilation of statistics.
- (g) The collection and compilation of information concerning the trade union movement and social legislation.
- (h) The issuance of a periodical and other publications of interest to the trade union movement.
- (i) The protection of the workers' interests in immigration and emigration.
- (j) Propaganda in favour of arbitration and disarmament.

EXECUTIVE OF I. F. T. U. MET IN PARIS JANUARY 15-16, 1936

At the Paris meeting of the I.F.T.U. the agenda for the International Conference of Women Trade Unionists and that of the International Conference on Workers' Education to be held in London in connection with the I.F.T.U. Congress were discussed. The executive accepted the application for affiliation of the Norwegian National Trade Union Centre, the affiliation to take effect retroactively as from January 1, 1936.

On January 18, 1936, the Indian National Trades Union Federation, which had been provisionally affiliated to the I.F.T.U. for two years, reported its definite affiliation.

The Foundation Congress of the Argentine National Trade Union Centre decided on immediate affiliation to the International Federation of Trade Unions, the affiliation being accepted by the Executive of the Federation as from January, 1936.

At the Executive meeting on July 6, which was attended by 24 delegates, representing 18 countries, and 19 delegates, representing 13 international trade secretariats, the application for affiliation of the Mexican National Trade Union Centre was accepted. The agenda for the Congress was approved at this meeting and Budapest was selected as the next meeting place for the General Council.

SEVENTH INTERNATIONAL TRADE UNION CONGRESS

In his opening address at the Seventh International Trade Union Congress, Sir Walter M. Citrine, president of the Federation, reviewed the developments which had taken place since the last International Trade Union Congress, held in Brussels. He pointed out that there had been appreciable improvement in conditions during the past three years but that there was still some cause for anxiety. Representatives of employers at the International Labour Conference were severely condemned for obstructing the immediate sanction of the forty-hour week. The president emphasized the point "that situations might arise in our struggle for collective security and indivisible peace which would perhaps compel us to fight for the maintenance of public law and the support of peace."

The report of Walter Schevenels, general secretary of the Federation, showed that there were 132 delegates present from the national centres of the following countries: Austria, Belgium, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Dantzig, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece, Holland, India, Italy, Luxemburg, Mexico, Norway, Palestine, Poland, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland. Nineteen international trade secretariats were represented by 37 delegates, and fraternal delegates were present from the Labour and Socialist International, the International Labour Office, the Socialist Youth International, and the Socialist Workers' Sport International. Representatives were also present from sympathizing national centres in Australia, Brazil, Ireland, Japan, New Zealand and South Africa. A message of welcome was received from William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and leaders of three large American unions also attended the Congress.

The general secretary further reported that the membership of the I.F.T.U. was 13,000,000, as compared with 8,600,000 reported at the last Congress at Brussels.

The question of trade union unity was brought before the Congress on a motion by a representative of the Norwegian National Centre, and was discussed by the various delegates for the greater part of three days. The subject matter was then referred to a committee. This committee drew up a resolution, which was later unanimously adopted by the Congress, and which "expressed approval of the efforts made up until now by the International Federation of Trade Unions for the restoration of unity and urged that negotiations for the realization of unity be taken up with all national centres still outside the I.F.T.U."

The subjects of war, disarmament and fascism were then discussed at considerable length. One of the speakers was a German representative, who described "the extraordinarily dangerous and very far advanced state of re-armament and war psychosis which was being systematically created in Germany."

In an economic report presented by C. Mertens, Belgium, emphasis was laid upon three important demands advanced by the Federation. These were (1) reduction of working hours, (2) currency stabilization, and (3) economic planning. This latter point was also touched on in the report of R. Tayerle, Czechoslovakia, on "Freedom of Trade Union Association," when he stated: "In this (economic planning) the most important problem is the right to constant collaboration, which right the trade unions wish to procure and safeguard. An especially great importance thereby attaches to the question of a system of arbitration and collective agreements."

INTERNATIONAL TRADE FEDERATION

The International Federation of Trade Unions has among its many affiliated organizations a number of international trade federations of labour unions, each of which comprises the members of a particular craft or class of labour. Twenty-eight out of the twenty-nine federations are affiliates of the I.F.T.U. All of these federations have their headquarters in Europe, and include in their affiliations the trade unions of many countries, the combined memberships in some instances being over a million. Nine of these international trade federations, according to the latest information, have in affiliation labour organizations which have local branches in Canada, their names and those of the affiliates with Canadian branches being: (1) International Federation of Radio-telegraphists, affiliate, Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; (2) International Clothing Workers' Federation, affiliates, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union, International Fur Workers' Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; (3) International Miners' Federation, affiliate, United Mine Workers of America; (4) International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliate, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; (5) International Union of Federations of Workers in the Food and Drink Trades, affiliate, Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union; (6) International Federation of Building and Woodworkers, affiliate, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; (7) International Secretariat of Painters and Kindred Trades, affiliate, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America; (8) International Metal Workers' Federation, affiliate, International Association of Machinists; and (9) Postal Employees' International, affiliate, Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada. There is one international federation which has in affiliation an organization operating in the United States, but which has no branches in Canada, viz., the Universal Alliance of Diamond Workers, affiliate, Diamond Workers' Protective Union of America. All of the above-mentioned affiliates of the respective international trade federations, except the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, are identified with the American Federation of Labor. The names of the remaining eighteen international trade secretariats are as follows: International Federation of Bookbinders and Kindred Trades; International Typographical Secretariat; International Federation of General Factory Workers; International Union of Hairdressers; International Federation of Glassworkers; International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers; International Landworkers' Federation; International Federation of Lithographers and Kindred Trades; International Federation of Workers in Public Services; International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees; International Secretariat of Stone Workers; International Secretariat of Tobacco Workers; International Federation of Textile Workers' Associations; International Federation of Pottery Workers; International Federation of Teachers; International Federation of Boot and Shoe Operatives and Leather Workers; International Federation of Hatters; International Federation of Civil Servants; and International Federation of Enginemen and Firemen.

In 1912 the membership had risen to 7,394,461, comprised in 19 affiliated national centres. No further information as to numerical strength was published until the Amsterdam Congress in 1919, when the affiliates numbered 14 and the membership was reported at 17,633,000. OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

There are certain other international organizations of socialist and labour parties in various countries throughout the world having for their objects the improvement of social and labour conditions through political action. The present organizations developed out of the movement which originated in the organization of the International Workingmen's Association, known as the First International, founded in 1864 and dissolved in 1876. In addition to the International Federation of Trade Unions, which is discussed in the present chapter, there are six other important international organizations, as follows: Christian (Roman Catholic), concentrated in the Christian International of Utrecht (referred to in Chapter VII, National Catholic Unions); Labour and Socialist International, which works in close co-operation with the I.F.T.U., there being joint committees on various subjects, as previously mentioned in this chapter; Communist, concentrated in the Red International of Labour Unions, of Moscow; Anarchist, concentrated in the International Working Men's Association, Madrid (formerly Berlin); Independent, concentrated in the International Federation of Neutral Trade Unions, Utrecht; and the trade unions of the two Americas, concentrated in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, Washington, D.C.

According to information contained in the general council's report, there were 603 delegates appointed to attend the sixty-eighth British Trades Union Congress convention held at Plymouth, England, September 7-11, 1936, representing 214 unions with 3,614,551 members, as compared with 3,388,810 members comprised in 211 unions and represented by 575 delegates in 1935.

CONNECTION OF CANADIAN BRANCHES WITH B.T.U.C. SEVERED

For many years there were in Canada branches of organizations with headquarters in the United Kingdom affiliated with the British Trades Union Congress. The connection of the last of these branches with British organizations was severed in 1925 when the Canadian locals of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners were granted complete self-government, becoming the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, which organization is now merged with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The fifty-sixth annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor opened at Tampa, Florida, November 16, 1936. The report of the credential committee showed that there were in attendance 485 accredited delegates, representing 88 international and national unions, 4 departments, 34 state branches, 125 central bodies, and 77 local trade and federal labour unions, and 3 fraternal delegates, one representing the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and two representing the British Trades Union Congress.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

In 1881, the year in which the American Federation of Labor was formed, the membership was less than 5,000. At the 1936 convention the secretary reported that the average paid-up and reported membership at the close of the fiscal year ending August 31, 1936, was 3,422,398, an increase of 377,051 as compared with the number reported in 1935. The average paid-up memberships for the past forty years have been as follows:—

1897..	264,825	1917..	2,371,434

In reporting on the membership of the Federation, the secretary-treasurer, as in the past, pointed out that national and international unions are required to pay per capita tax upon their fully paid-up memberships and that therefore the membership does not include all members who were unemployed during the fiscal year.

ORGANIZATIONS IN AFFILIATION WITH THE FEDERATION

At the close of the last fiscal year (August 31, 1936), the total affiliations of the American Federation of Labor included 111 national and international unions, representing 32,906 local branch unions and 914 local trade and federal labour unions, making in all 33,820 branches. Four departments, 49 state federations and 734 city central bodies were also under charter from the Federation. The local branches which constitute the national and international organizations are the source from which nearly all funds are secured to carry on every activity in the labour movement. They also supply the finances for and constitute the state federations, city central bodies and local department councils. There were 522 of these councils, the charters for which are derived from the federation departments.

XVII. INCIDENTS OF INTEREST TO ORGANIZED WORKERS

Division Occurs in All-Canadian Congress of Labour—Trainman Loses Seniority Petition—Charter of Vancouver Fire Fighters' Local Revoked—Toronto Trades and Labour Council Favours Industrial Organization in Mass Production Industries—Typographical Unions Among the Oldest in Canada—Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen Secures Certificate of Registry—Committee For Industrial Organization—Miners Give President Lewis Large Salary Increase—Carpenters' President Resigns As Vice-President of A. F. of L.—Miners Held on Bombing Charge.

DIVISION OCCURS IN ALL-CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

The executive board of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, exercising its constitutional prerogative, set the date and place of the 1936 annual convention as Monday, September 28, in the City of Toronto. As is usually the custom, the members of the executive board met a few days previous to the date set for the convention for the purpose of completing the report to be presented to the delegates. During the consideration of the draft report, differences of opinion developed between the president and other members of the executive present as to the subject matter contained therein, resulting in a definite break, whereupon the president left the meeting. Those of the executive in attendance at the meeting claimed that the president, Mr. Mosher, had resigned, but the latter denied having taken such action. Subsequently, in the absence of A. R. Mosher and M. M. Maclean, the other members of the executive decided to advise the unions which had signified their intention of sending delegates to the convention that it had been postponed. Notwithstanding this notification, Mr. Mosher opened the convention, as previously arranged, on September 28. On the following day the election of officers took place and resulted in the re-election of Mr. Mosher, together with an entirely new executive board.

On application made in behalf of the convention, Mr. Justice W. T. Henderson, of the Ontario Supreme Court, granted an interim injunction restraining W. T. Burford, from "interfering with, disposing of, moving or dealing with or utilizing the funds, assets or property of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour."

The interim injunction case was called before Mr. Justice F. C. Hogg in Toronto, but by agreement the hearing was transferred to Ottawa. After an unsuccessful attempt to have the parties to the dispute come to an understanding, Mr. Justice Hope, before whom the hearing was held, reserved his decision in the application for continuance of the injunction.

Before a judgment had been rendered, legal counsel in conference reached a compromise settlement in the dispute. This settlement provided for the setting up of a provisional committee, composed of A. R. Mosher, Zenon David, W. T. Burford and M. M. Maclean, which would have full control of the Congress pending a convention. It also provided for the appointment as umpire of Hon. Senator J. A. McDonald, to whom all questions at issue between the two parties and any question arising out of the settlement would be referred, his decision to be final. A signed agreement for settlement of the dispute as outlined was placed before Mr. Justice Hope, and on his acceptance further legal proceedings were discontinued.

Subsequently Mr. David and Mr. Burford tendered their resignations from the provisional committee, which were accepted. Following the resignation of these two officials an announcement was made in Winnipeg that steps had been taken to resurrect the Canadian Federation of Labour, an organization formed in 1902 and merged with other groups into the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927. For a time a provisional committee carried on the work of the Federation, but later permanent officers were elected, as follows: president, Zenon David, Montreal, Que.; and secretary-treasurer, W. T. Burford, 126A Sparks St., Ottawa, Ont.

TRAINMAN LOSES SENIORITY PETITION

In order to force the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to rank him higher in the seniority list, Onesime Audette, brought suit against the organization in November, 1936. After taking evidence, Mr. Justice J. J. Denis, in Superior Court, dismissed the suit.

The court held that "the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, Audette's employer, is the only power having authority to adjudicate as to his rank and seniority." The Brotherhood, the head office of which is in Cleveland, Ohio, and the lodge to which Audette belonged in Farnham, Que., said Mr. Justice Denis, "are unable to either grant seniority or take it away once it has been granted by the C.P.R."

The judgment pointed out further that "the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen is an unincorporated labour union and as such it has no legal existence and cannot be considered, in law, as an entity distinct from its individual members and is not suable in the common name; in like manner, the Missisquoi Lodge No. 371 (Farnham) is not a corporate entity and has no legal existence and is not suable."

It was also pointed out by Mr. Justice Denis, that seniority had been granted Audette in 1915 and his subsequent acquiescence during thirteen years following, now estopped him from raising any complaint.

The evidence during the hearing showed that the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has an agreement with all railroads, setting forth the schedule of rates of pay and regulations governing the services of its membership. The agreement stipulates that the seniority list—the rank of each employee in a particular class in relation to other employees in the same class—shall be posted on January 1 of each year by the railway company at the divisional office of each division.

Any employee who has a complaint is, apart from his right of direct appeal to his employers, entitled to lodge a protest with the local lodge of the brotherhood of which he is a member. If the complaint is found to be meritorious, the lodge may then make representations to the railway officials, but the decision of the brotherhood is not binding on the employers.

CHARTER OF VANCOUVER FIRE FIGHTERS' LOCAL REVOKED

According to reports received in the department, the charter of the Vancouver local of the International Association of Fire Fighters was revoked in October, 1936, by the central organization because of alleged violation of a constitutional clause forbidding strike activities.

During the negotiations between the civic authorities and the union in April, 1935, on the question of wages and hours of work, it was claimed by the central organization, the members of the local had taken a strike vote.

Section 2 of Article III of the constitution of the International Association of Fire Fighters reads as follows:—

"We shall not strike or take active part in any sympathy strikes as our position is peculiar to most organized workers, as we are formed to protect the lives and property of communities in case of fire or other serious hazards."

and section 7 of Article XV reads:—

"The Executive Committee is hereby vested with authority to revoke the charter of any local whenever, upon evidence satisfactory to a majority of the executive Committee, it is shown that a local is guilty of disloyalty or where its actions have been adverse or detrimental to the welfare of the rank and file of the association."

The revoking of the charter of the fire fighters' local union had its repercussion in the Vancouver and District Trades and Labour Council meeting in November, 1936, when delegates from the firemen's organization were not allowed to take their seats. This action caused considerable discussion. Later in the meeting the representatives of the suspended union were given an opportunity to explain the reasons for the revoking of their charter.

Subsequently the International Fire Fighters' Union chartered a new local in Vancouver. Although the charter of the old local, No. 18, was cancelled, this union continues its affiliation with the B.C. Provincial Association of Fire Fighters and with the British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees.

TORONTO TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL FAVOURS INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION IN MASS PRODUCTION INDUSTRIES

The question of organization in the mass production industries came up for discussion several times during the year in the Toronto Trades and Labour Council and finally referred to the local unions for further consideration. When the subject came up for final disposition on May 21, 1936, the delegates, in the main, acted on instructions from the membership of their union.

The following resolution was introduced and discussed at considerable length:

"That the Toronto Trades and Labour Council goes on record in favor of the industrial form of organization as a necessary step in the unionization of the unorganized workers in mass-production industries; endorses the work of the C.I.O. in this regard as a progressive step; supports it as an essential part of union democracy the right of a minority to continue its appeal to the broad masses of the membership, and refutes the contention that this work is not progressive and inevitably leads to dual unionism."

By a vote of 95 to 8 the Council adopted the resolution.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNIONS ARE AMONG THE OLDEST IN CANADA

On October 12, 1936, the members of International Typographical Union No. 91, Toronto, Ont., celebrated the 104th anniversary of their union. The York Typographical Society (which later became local No. 91 of the International Typographical Union) was one of the oldest labour unions in Canada of which definite information is available, being formed on October 12, 1832, in the old York Hotel, with the late W. A. C. Myers as the presiding officer. The October meeting was preceded by an open air gathering attended by some 30 printers, and at which organization plans were discussed.

The need for organization was further emphasized by the fact that the employing printers about that time decided to reduce the rates of wages of their employees. The following demands were decided upon at the first meeting of the society: 10 hour day; 7 pence per hour for time hands and piece workers; 1 shilling and 3 pence per thousand ems (printers' measurement).

These demands when presented to the employers were promptly rejected and the prevailing rate of $7.00 per week for long and monotonous hours of work remained in effect for some considerable time. It is reported that at the first anniversary of the typographical society William Lyon Mackenzie, then mayor of York (afterwards Toronto) addressed the membership at a banquet in Ontario House.

For a number of years after the rebellion of 1837, the typographical society ceased to hold its meetings. When an attempt was made in 1844 to reduce the wages of the printers, the society was re-organized under the name of "the Toronto Typographical Union." In 1866, the union affiliated with the international trade union movement, and received from the central organization its present number.

Early in 1872, during a strike of printers in Toronto for a nine-hour working day, a large number of work-people paraded to Queen's Park. Immediately following this, some twenty or more printers were arrested and charged under an old English law with conspiracy in restraint of trade. The Federal Parliament, being in session at the time, immediately passed the Trade Unions Act which declared the purposes of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade.

International Typographical Union No. 91, Toronto, has had a continuous record from 1844, and at the end of 1936 had over 1,000 members.

Quebec Typographical Union No. 302, which is claimed to be one of the first of its kind to be formed in Canada, celebrated its centenary anniversary in that city on October 17, 1936. The celebration was attended by members of the craft from many points in Canada and the United States. A fitting reception was tendered the visitors by members of the local union, and a special service held as a tribute to the memory of those members who had died.

Although this local union only claims a continuous existence from 1836, it is stated on reliable authority that as early as 1827 the printers of the city of Quebec had a local union. This body had for its objects (1) the regulation of wages; (2) the care of members incapacitated through illness, and (3) the holding of literary and musical entertainments for the benefit of members.

Local No. 302 became an affiliate of the International Typographical Union in 1869.

While not laying claim to being one of the oldest unions in the country, the Saint John Typographical Union No. 85 does claim to be the first typographical union in Canada to affiliate with the central organization in the United States, in fact, according to reliable records, this union is the first in Canada to have international affiliation, having received its charter in 1859.

BROTHERHOOD OF RAILROAD TRAINMEN SECURES CERTIFICATE OF REGISTRY

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio, has complied with the regulations of the Department of Insurance in regard to the transaction of insurance business. A notice in the Canada Gazette, over the signature of G. D. Finlayson, Superintendent of Insurance, and dated May 8, 1936, read as follows:

NOTICE is hereby given that Certificate of Registry No. C 265 has this day been issued to the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen Insurance Department, authorizing it to transact in Canada the business of Life Insurance, Disability Insurance and Sickness Insurance, to the extent authorized by its articles of incorporation, constitution and laws. Mr. A. J. Kelly, Ottawa, Ontario, has been appointed the society's Canadian Chief Agent."

COMMITTEE FOR INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION

Reference was made in last year's report to the formation of the Committee for Industrial Organization in November, 1935, for the purpose of promoting the organization of unorganized workers in mass-production and other industries into industrial unions to be affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. This step was taken after several years of unsuccessful effort to have such an organizational campaign officially sponsored by the Federation. The chairman of the Committee since its inception has been John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, who resigned as vice-president of the American Federation of Labor shortly after the formation of the Committee, and the position of secretary has been filled throughout by Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union. In the beginning the Committee for Industrial Organization was composed of representatives of eight affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, as follows: United Mine Workers of America; International Typographical Union; Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; United Textile Workers of America; International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America; United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; and International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

On January 23, 1936, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, in session at Miami, Florida, requested that the Committee for Industrial Organization immediately dissolve and cease its operations. This action was taken after the members of the council had come to the conclusion that the activities of the newly-formed Committee constituted "a challenge to the supremacy" of the Federation and that it would "ultimately become dual in purpose and character" to the Federation. A subcommittee, composed of George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians and George M. Bugniazet, president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, was named to confer with representatives of the Committee and was instructed to report the result of its conferences to the next session of the executive council, to be held in May.

On behalf of the Committee for Industrial Organization, Secretary Howard immediately replied to the executive council's statement, declaring that the charges were without foundation and that the work of his group was entirely legal and proper. He pointed out that the Federation was composed of both industrial and craft unions, and went on to affirm that the Committee was merely conducting an educational campaign in order "to inspire organization of workers in unorganized industries." He asserted that no union had been organized in opposition to any Federation affiliate. "The effort of the Committee," he said, "has been to increase the membership of organizations holding charters issued by the American Federation of Labor."

Shortly afterwards the executive council turned down requests for permission to organize workers in the radio and automobile industries into industrial unions. Directly chartered federal unions of radio workers, which for several years had been seeking a national industrial union charter from the Federation, were placed by the council under the jurisdiction of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The radio workers subsequently voted to refuse to merge with the electrical workers in the manner proposed by the executive council, and early in February threatened to secede from the Federation. The automobile workers, chartered as a national union in August, 1935, were given jurisdiction over production workers only, while workers in jobbing or parts plants were placed under the jurisdiction of the International Association of Machinists.

The annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America, held in Washington, D.C., late in January, after expressing unanimous approval of the industrial union policy of President John L. Lewis, granted authority to the executive board to withhold some $48,000 in annual dues to the American Federation of Labor, if, in its discretion, the board saw fit to do so. In addition, the convention instructed Mr. Lewis to deliver a series of speeches on a nation-wide radio network to stress the need for industrial unionism in the mass-production industries.

Similar support of the work of the Committee for Industrial Organization was voiced in statements issued by President David Dubinsky of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, President Max Zaritsky of the cap and millinery department of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union and President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America on behalf of their respective organizations.

On February 21 the Committee for Industrial Organization met in Washington. A letter was despatched to President William Green of the American Federation of Labor containing the Committee's refusal to accede to the executive council's request that it dissolve. The letter, signed by seven of the eight international union presidents on the Committee, denied that the proponents of industrial unionism were acting contrary to the constitution of the Federation and declared that there was no evidence to support the council's fear that their movement might become a dual organization. "We wish to emphasize again," the letter continued, "that we are trying to remove the roots of dualism by making it possible for the millions of mass-production workers now outside the American Federation of Labor to enter on the only basis they will accept—industrial unions." In conclusion the Committee stated that it would be glad to meet the subcommittee named by the executive council.

On the following day another letter was sent to President Green, by Mr. Lewis, acting in his capacity as chairman of the Committee, urging that a $1,500,000 drive to organize the nation's steel workers be started immediately. He offered the services of trained organizers, pledged the eight unions active in the Committee to raise $500,000 of the amount he estimated necessary to carry out the campaign, and asked that the remainder be raised by other unions affiliated with the Federation. Insisting that there was "urgent need" for an industrial union of steel workers, he declared that his Committee since its inception had been "flooded with requests for aid" from the workers in the steel industry. "All of these communications," wrote Mr. Lewis, "point to growing rebellion among company unions, to the desire of independents to join the main body of labour, and to the necessity for quick action lest the present opportunity be lost to labour."

President Green subsequently announced that he was working on a budget for an organizational campaign among steel workers to be started in the spring. "As soon as I complete this budget," he said, "every union in the Federation—including those in the industrial union committee—will be asked to contribute money and organizers." While Mr. Green had intended that organization of the steel workers should be on a craft union basis, the annual convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America, held in May at Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, voted to conduct its membership drive in the steel industry along industrial lines.

On June 4 the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America formally affiliated itself with the Committee for Industrial Organization, thus bringing the total number of international unions represented on the Committee to ten (the Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America had affiliated earlier in the year). As the agreement reached between the Amalgamated Association and the Committee provided for co-operation in the organization of steel workers into an industrial union, the plans previously announced by President Green for a membership drive in the steel industry under the auspices of the executive council of the Federation were abandoned. On June 13 Chairman Lewis announced the appointment of a Steel Workers' Organizing Committee under the chairmanship of Philip Murray, vice-president of the United Mine Workers of America, to aid the Amalgamated Association in its membership campaign, which was to begin immediately and to which the Committee for Industrial Organization pledged a fund of $500,000.

At the May session of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor it was disclosed that the council's subcommittee had conferred with officers of the Committee for Industrial Organization on May 18 and on May 20 had written to officials of each union in the industrial group, giving them two weeks to state whether they would dissolve their Committee. In the ultimatum it was declared that "the creation of a rival organization within the American Federation of Labor constitutes a menace to its success, as well as to the establishment of unity and solidarity within its ranks. No organization commanding respect or worthy of existence can tolerate a dual movement within its field of jurisdiction." It was further stated that "Organizations of such a kind and character can only be interpreted as an attempt to establish minority rule and to impose the will of a minority upon the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor, contrary to decisions arrived at in convention by majority vote."

In their replies to the executive council's ultimatum the unions represented on the Committee for Industrial Organization all stated their refusal to give up membership in the Committee. The United Mine Workers of America questioned "the right and authority, or the propriety, of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to make such demands upon any committee such as the Committee for Industrial Organization, or upon any international organization to cease constructive work calculated to serve the best interests of American labour in bringing about effective organization of such labour in the mass-production industries." The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union declared that "it is the inherent right of our union, as well as of any other union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, to advocate individually or jointly a change in organizing methods or in the form of organization, and to promote our advocacy in a democratic fraternal manner" and that the subcommittee's "peremptory order is clearly an act of overstepping of authority and the assumption of a right which is contrary to democratic procedure and usage in the American Federation of Labor." The International Typographical Union contended that the executive council possessed "no power to penalize an affiliated national or international union until such action has been ordered by a two-thirds majority of a regular convention of the American Federation of Labor in a roll-call vote."

On July 3 the Committee for Industrial Organization voted to accept into membership the United Automobile Workers of America and the United Rubber Workers of America and to help them with organizational campaigns.

Late in June the ten unions then represented on the Committee for Industrial Organization had been cited to appear before the executive council of the Federation on July 8 to answer charges that they were seeking to set up a rival or dual organization. The council took no action at that time, but on July 15 it decided to serve formal charges on these unions and to cite them to appear for trial at the headquarters of the Federation in Washington on August 3. The specific charges, signed by John P. Frey, president of the Metal Trades Department of the Federation, alleged that the Committee was competing as a rival organization to the Federation within that body, that the unions represented on the Committee were engaged in "fostering, maintaining and supporting this dual movement and fomenting insurrection within the American Federation of Labor" and that the activities of the Committee constituted "rebellion against the administrative organization policies adopted by majority vote at the last Federation convention."

On July 21 representatives of the twelve unions then affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization met in Washington and by unanimous action refused to appear before the executive council of the Federation for trial on August 3. Notification of this decision and a declaration that the Committee would "carry on" were contained in a letter from Chairman Lewis to President Green.

On August 5 the Federation's executive council voted 13 to 1 to suspend ten of the twelve unions represented on the Committee unless they should withdraw from that group within thirty days. President David Dubinsky of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, one of the leaders of the industrial union movement, cast the only dissenting vote. The two unions not included in the suspension edict were the International Typographical Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union. The Council held that Mr. Howard was associated with the Committee for Industrial Organization only as an individual and not in his capacity as president of the typographical union. It likewise held that Mr. Zaritsky represented only the cap and millinery department of the hatters' union, and not the entire organization. Subsequently, however, at its annual convention, held in October in New York City, the hatters' union as a body went on record in favour of the policy of the Committee for Industrial Organization and chose Mr. Zaritsky to be its president.

On August 11 the Committee for Industrial Organization formally announced that it had decided to ignore the suspension edict of the executive council of the Federation and that it would go ahead with its plans to organize steel workers and employees in other mass production industries into industrial unions.

On August 29, following a meeting of its general executive board, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, through its president, David Dubinsky, wrote President Green that the American Federation of Labor executive council had no power to discipline "autonomous self-governing bodies." As an alternative it proposed that the council lift the suspension order and refer the dispute to the coming Federation convention. The following day President Howard of the International Typographical Union proposed a rank and file referendum on the Federation's "family quarrel." On September 1 President Dubinsky, in a letter to Mr. Green, made known his resignation from the Federation council, the resignation to take effect at once. In his letter Mr. Dubinsky reiterated his union's refusal to comply with the council's order to withdraw from the Committee for Industrial Organization and again characterized the suspension order as a violation of the council's authority.

The suspension edict automatically went into effect on September 5, and ten international unions having over one-third of the membership of the American Federation of Labor thus became deprived of the privileges and benefits of Federation affiliation. Included among the suspended unions were some of the important labour organizations in America, the United Mine Workers of America having been the largest affiliate of the Federation and the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union the third largest.

On September 18 the annual convention of the United Textile Workers of America, held in New York city, affirmed the adherence of that body to the Committee for Industrial Organization and decided to launch a campaign to organize nearly a million unorganized textile workers coincident with the Committee's organization drive in other mass-production industries.

The eightieth convention of the International Typographical Union, held in Colorado Springs, Colorado, the same day passed a resolution asserting that the Federation's executive council in issuing the suspension order had exceeded its constitutional authority and accusing the council of "usurping power specifically reserved to regular conventions of the American Federation of Labor." The convention expressed its full approval of President Howard's adherence to the Committee for Industrial Organization and authorized the union's officers "to take such action as in their judgment may be necessary to protect and preserve the autonomous rights, privileges and powers of the International Typographical Union as an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor." The delegates then went on to pledge their moral and financial support to the work of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The annual convention of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, held in New York city in early October, authorized the newly-elected president of the organization, Mr. Max Zaritsky, to make the following two-point peace proposal: (1) that the suspension order be withdrawn and the unions associated with the Committee for Industrial Organization be seated at the November convention of the Federation; and (2) that the executive council name a subcommittee to explore a settlement of the dispute with the industrial union group. Chairman Lewis announced his immediate acceptance of the terms of the proposal. On October 12 the executive council announced its acceptance of the second point of the proposal and two days later named a subcommittee to confer with the Lewis group. Mr. Lewis, however, insisted upon acceptance of the first point as a prerequisite to negotiations, but the council would make no concession on this point and no conferences were held.

On November 7 the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America and the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America joined the Committee for Industrial Organization, bringing the membership of the Committee to a total of fourteen international unions.

Following the failure of the executive council's subcommittee, consisting of George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, Felix H. Knight, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, and Matthew Woll, vice-president of the International Photo Engravers' Union, and the Committee for Industrial Organization to arrange a conference, President Green offered to confer personally with Chairman Lewis. Mr. Lewis declined, however, stating that Mr. Green by his own admission in his telegram of invitation, lacked "authority to change the policy outlined by the executive council."

On November 11 President Green, a member of the United Mine Workers of America, was cited to appear before the executive board of the miners' organization on November 18 to answer complaints that he had taken part in a "conspiracy" to suspend his own union from the Federation, failed to adhere to the policies of his union, continued to associate and fraternize with "avowed enemies" of the union subsequent to its suspension, and "distorted and misrepresented" the aims and objects of his union and its authorized representatives. In his reply, Mr. Green denied these allegations "directly and categorically" and stated that his attendance at the Federation's convention in Tampa, Florida, would prevent his appearing before the mine union's board on the date specified. On November 18 the board, after discussing hearings on the charges against Mr. Green, stated that "if, after time for consideration, he elects to cease and desist from his present acts and associations, he will be made welcome by this union in accordance with his rank and accomplishments. If he decides to continue his opposition to its policies, he must henceforth assume the full responsibility of his disloyalty."

The annual report of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, made public November 15, on the eve of the Federation's annual convention in Tampa, Florida, severely condemned the Committee for Industrial Organization for refusing to confer with a subcommittee of the council and for declining to dissolve and cease its allegedly dual or rival activities.

On November 20 the convention voted to boycott the union label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, a member of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and on November 23 it passed a resolution approving the past actions of the executive council in its dealings with the Committee. The resolution went on to recommend continuation of the suspension order "until the present breach be healed and adjusted under such terms and conditions as the executive council may deem best in each particular case or in all cases combined," continuation of the special subcommittee appointed to discover a basis of settlement, and the calling of a special convention by the executive council if it should deem such a step necessary.

At the end of the year the Committee for Industrial Organization was still functioning, although the executive council's suspension order was still in effect.

MINERS GIVE PRESIDENT LEWIS LARGE SALARY INCREASE

The delegates to the 1936 convention of the United Mine Workers of America voted to increase the salary of President John L. Lewis from $12,000 to $25,000 a year. Other officers to be granted salary increases were: Philip Murray, vice-president, from $9,000 to $18,000; Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer, from $9,000 to $18,000; Ellis Searles, editor of the Miners' Journal, from $4,000 to $7,000; executive board members, from $300 to $500 a month; and convention delegates from $10.50 to $12.50 a day.

Later in the convention sessions, President Lewis made an announcement declining the increase, but nevertheless the increases were written into the organization's laws.

CARPENTERS' PRESIDENT RESIGNS AS VICE-PRESIDENT OF A. F. OF L.

On October 16, 1936, William Hutcheson, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, resigned as an American Federation of Labor vice-president, a position he had held since 1934. According to President Green of the A.F. of L., the carpenters' president gave two reasons for submitting his resignation. These were:—

1. That no one union should have more than one officer on the Federation's executive council (Frank Duffy, vice-president of the Carpenters' Union, is also a Federation vice-president).

2. That Mr. Hutcheson could not attend the current council meeting and did not wish to subscribe to the council's report to the next Federation convention without helping to write it.

The resignation of Mr. Hutcheson was accepted and the position thus vacated was filled by the selection of George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada.

At the fifty-sixth convention of the A.F. of L., held at Tampa, Florida, November 16-27, 1936, Mr. Browne was elected fourteenth vice-president.

MINERS HELD ON BOMBING CHARGE

At the request of United States federal officers, William Keek, president of the Progressive Miners of America, and several members or former members of the organization were arrested in December, 1936, in connection with the investigation of railroad bombings in Illinois. Two of the number were ordered to furnish $30,000 bonds for their release, inasmuch as they were named in three indictments. The others were held on $10,000 bail each.

The government entered the drive to stop dynamitings in the coal field conflict after a long series of train bombings had destroyed much property and imperilled many lives. The dynamiting of coal trains was attributed by authorities to the bitter inter-union controversy in the Southern Illinois coal fields.

Warrants on which the men were arrested charged violation of the Federal Anti-Trust Act. It was intimated, however, that indictments also had been returned on Anti-Racketeering and Obstruction of the Mails Acts.

The Progressive Miners of America was formed in 1932, following a split in the ranks of the United Mine Workers of America.

XVIII. REGISTRATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND UNION LABELS

Trade Unions Act Passed in 1872—The Act Not Compulsory—Unions Registered in 1936—Existing Registered Unions—Registrations Under the Professional Syndicates Act—Union Labels Registered.

The provisions of the Trade Unions Act, enacted by the Federal Parliament in 1872, were designed to exempt labour unions from liability for prosecution for being organized in restraint of trade. The Act not being compulsory, few labour unions have sought registration, the total number to date being only 54, of which 37 have either dissolved or amalgamated with unregistered unions. During 1936 two unions were registered—(1) Vancouver Longshoremen's Association, Vancouver, B.C., and (2) Bowles Lunch Employees' Independent Union, Toronto, Ont.

The following list gives the names of the registered organizations, which includes three Canadian central bodies, one local of an international body, two local branches of Canadian organizations, two National Catholic unions and nine independent local units, and indicates the date of registration:—

REGISTERED TRADE UNIONS

REGISTRATIONS UNDER THE PROFESSIONAL SYNDICATES ACT

The Professional Syndicates Act was passed by the Quebec Legislature in 1924. Under the provisions of this Act, after the performance of certain formalities, a union is constituted a corporation enjoying civil rights. The statute, inter alia, also authorizes the registered unions to "enter into contracts or agreements with all other syndicates, societies, or persons respecting the attainments of their objects, particularly such as relate to the collective conditions of labour." Up to the close of 1935 nine delegate bodies and 114 local syndicates had been registered under the Act, and during 1936 three delegate bodies and 19 syndicates were registered, making a total of 145 registrations. The full list of existing National Catholic bodies which have registered under the Professional Syndicates Act, in order of registration, is as follows:—

XIX. STATISTICS OF TRADE UNIONISTS IN CANADA

Source of Statistical Data—International Organizations Showed a Large Increase—Canadian Group Also Showed a Gain—Eleven More Independent Units—National Catholic Unions Had a Considerable Increase—Grand Total of Trade Unionists in the Dominion—Reported Female Membership—International Central Labour Organizations Operating in Canada—Canadian Central Bodies—Trade Union Branches by Provinces—Federations—District Councils—Trades and Labour Councils—Trade Union Membership by Localities.

The information from which the statistics as to the numerical strength of the various central labour organizations and their affiliates have been prepared was in the main furnished early in 1937 by officials of the unions, the figures supplied giving the standing at the close of 1936. As usual, application for particulars was made by the department to every known central international and Canadian organization, and in most instances the information solicited was promptly supplied, very few failing to furnish any particulars. The figures recorded for the organizations which did not report, or sent in only partial information, have been secured from departmental records and other reliable sources. Where last year's particulars are used, the figures are printed in italics.

In Table No. 1, giving the number of local unions and the memberships of international organizations in Canada, the figures have been arranged to show, respectively, (1) the number of branches, and (2) the membership of each organization in Canada and elsewhere. Defining the term "elsewhere" it may be mentioned that several international organizations with headquarters in the United States have local branches in countries other than Canada and the United States. Among these are the following: (1) the American Federation of Labor and the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, with branches in the Philippine Islands and Panama; (2) the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, and the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters, with branches in the Panama Canal Zone; (3) the Cigarmakers' International Union and the Leather Workers' International Union, with branches in the Philippine Islands; (4) the Order of Railway Conductors, with a division in Mexico; (5) the International Seamen's Union, the Operative Plasterers' International Association, and the American Federation of Musicians, with branches in the Hawaiian Islands; (6) the International Typographical Union, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (7) the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and Panama; (8) the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with branches in Panama and Newfoundland; (9) the International Association of Machinists, with branches in Panama, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (10) the Journeymen Tailors' Union, the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with branches in Newfoundland.

The Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen of North America having lost its one local branch in Canada, its name is now dropped from the accompanying table. The International Union United Automobile Workers of America, the Building Service Employees' International Union, the Coopers' International Union of North America, the International Brotherhood of Foundry Employees, the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, and the International United Rubber Workers of America all established one or more local branches in the Dominion during the year. With the addition of the names of these seven organizations, there were 88 international organizations, with local branches or Canadian members, operating in Canada at the close of 1936.

The figures in the accompanying table show that there were in Canada at the close of the year 1,896 local branches of international organizations, an increase of 102 over the number recorded for 1935. The membership reported or secured from other reliable sources gives the international organizations a total of 174,769, a gain of 31,199. In 1935 the number of branches reported for this group was 1,794, with a combined membership of 143,570. The peak in the Canadian membership of international organizations was reached in 1920, when it stood at 267,247, comprised in 2,455 local branches.

The 88 international organizations whose names appear in the appended table represent a total of 32,295 branches under their respective jurisdictions, with a combined membership of 4,306,945. The figures for the Industrial Workers of the World, with 102 local branches and 37,760 members, are included in the above totals. Only 15 of the 88 international organizations having branches or members in Canada are not in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and among them they have 8,082 subordinate branches, with a combined membership of 1,796,117, of which 502 branches with 65,295 members are located in the Dominion. Of the remaining 2,510,828 members comprised in 24,213 branches identified with the other 73 international organizations, 109,474 belong to 1,394 Canadian branches. The average paid-up membership of the American Federation of Labor, with its 111 affiliated national and international organizations and directly chartered local unions, was reported to be 3,422,398 for the year ending August 31, 1936 (the end of its fiscal year), but the statement of the general secretary at the 1936 convention was to the effect that the national and international unions are required to pay per capita tax upon their full paid-up membership, and that therefore the membership did not include all members who were unemployed during the fiscal year.

The United Mine Workers of America occupies first place as to number of members in Canada, having reported a membership for 1936 of 16,600, comprised in 66 local branches, a gain in members of 5,408 and in branches of 22. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees, which was first in 1935, ranked second with 12,109 members, a decrease of 56, comprised in 194 branches, a gain of 1. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen stood in third place with a reported membership of 10,942, an increase of 1,215, but a loss of 1 in branches, the 1936 figure being 112. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was close behind the Carmen with 10,929 members, a gain of 599, comprised in 92 locals, an increase of 1. The International Association of Machinists with 77 local branches, a loss of 2, reported 7,500 members, a gain of 1,546. Other international organizations reporting large Canadian memberships for 1936 included: (1) Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 7,000; (2) Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, 6,769; (3) International Union, United Automobile Workers of America, 6,000; (4) Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, 5,959; (5) American Federation of Musicians, 5,000; (6) International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers of the United States and Canada, 5,000; and (7) Order of Railroad Telegraphers, 5,000. Of the international organizations the names of which are recorded in the appended table, and which made returns as to their numerical strength, 54 showed increases in their Canadian following, 24 had losses and the remaining 10 reporting unions showed no change.

In table No. 1A, in which is recorded the number of local branches and membership of the Canadian organizations, the directly chartered branches and membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are enumerated, the greater part of the affiliated membership of the Congress, however, being drawn from the international organizations which have local branches in the Dominion. At the close of the year 1936 the Congress had 98 local unions under direct charters, an increase of 17 as compared with the number recorded for 1935, with a combined membership of 8,224, a gain of 709. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, the membership of which is comprised in Canadian organizations, had a loss of 11 in locals and 958 in membership, reporting 42 directly chartered locals and 3,894 members. The Canadian Federation of Labour, a body originally formed in 1902 but merged with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927, was revived in October, 1936. The general secretary failed to supply the membership for the 5 directly chartered locals reported to the department. The remaining organizations in this group had between them 595 local branch unions, with a combined membership of 71,723. These figures indicate that there were 6 more branch unions and 3,763 more members in this group than were recorded in 1935.

Besides the local branches affiliated with either international or Canadian organizations there were 60 independent trade units in the Dominion, a gain of 11, the membership reported by 54 being 18,863, an increase of 2,004 as compared with the membership recorded by 43 independent units in 1935.

The membership of the National Catholic Unions as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic workers of Canada was 45,000, a gain of 7,000, comprised in 190 local bodies, 8 of which are designated as study circles, a gain of 50.

Information furnished the department by the officers of labour organizations or secured from other reliable sources indicates that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,886 local branch unions of all classes, an increase of 158, divided as follows: international, 1,896; Canadian, 740; National Catholic, 190; and independent, 60. There was a gain in membership of 41,769, the total for 1936 being 322,473, apportioned among the various groups as follows: international, 174,769; Canadian, 83,841; National Catholic, 45,000; and independent, 18,863.

As in previous years, the department has endeavoured to secure information as to what proportion of trade union membership is made up of female workers. These particulars, as has been stated previously, are difficult to obtain, since many organizations do not keep separate records of male and female members. Of the 88 international organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table only 15 furnished the desired information, the total number of female members reported in their respective jurisdictions (outside of Canada), in which they have a combined membership of 4,132,176, being only 122,321. This female membership is known to be far short of the actual number of women workers identified with organized labour, there being many other organizations besides those reporting which admit female members, but, as above stated, they keep no separate records of male and female members and consequently made no report. The Canadian female membership of trade unions at the close of 1936, as reported by 269 of the local branch unions of all classes in the Dominion, was 11,034.

The National Women's Trade Union League, which has the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, is a body designed to assist in the organization of women workers. The League, which has head offices in Washington, D.C., does not issue charters to trade unions of women, its efforts being directed towards encouraging the female workers to enter the existing labour organizations. The platform of the League embraces: (1) organization of workers into trade unions; (2) equal pay for equal work; (3) eight-hour day and 44-hour week; (4) an American standard of living; (5) full citizenship for women; (6) the outlawry of war; and (7) closer affiliation of women workers of all countries. Miss Rose Schneiderman is the president and Miss Elizabeth Christman the secretary, their office being located at 306 Machinists' Building, Ninth St. and Mt. Vernon Place, N.W., Washington, D.C.

(b) Includes only the unions directly chartered, i.e., those unions not affiliated through any international organization.

The American Federation of Labor at the close of the fiscal year August 31, 1936, had 111 national and international unions affiliated, representing 32,906 locals, as well as four departments, 49 state federations, 734 city central bodies and 914 local trade and federal labour unions, making a total of 1,812 charters, representing an average membership of 3,422,398. Because of unemployment there were thousands of members for whom no per capita tax was paid by the affiliated unions, and who, therefore, are not included in the number of members reported.

(c) Includes 2 sub-branches.

(d) Membership for one union only.

(e) Includes sub branches of local unions.

(†) Indicates that although suspended from membership in the A.F. of L., the Canadian membership is still affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

Indicates that union is affiliated with American Federation of Labor.

*Indicate that union has also affiliated its Canadian membership with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

The accompanying table indicates the reported memberships of the Canadian central labour bodies. Included in the table is the name of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the large majority of its membership, as previously stated, being drawn from international organizations, the numerical strength of which has already been given. The Congress, besides its affiliated membership of 62 international and 4 Canadian organizations, had 98 directly chartered local unions, an increase of 17. The membership of the unions in direct affiliation, which is recorded in the following table, and not counted elsewhere, was 8,224, an increase of 709. The total membership of the Congress at the close of its fiscal year (August 31, 1936), as reported by the general secretary-treasurer to the annual convention, was 112,972, an increase of 6,974, comprised in 1,624 branches.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour had in affiliation the 6 central bodies marked thus (†) in the appended table. Its directly chartered unions numbered 42, a decrease of 11, with a combined reported membership of 3,894, a loss of 958. The total membership of the Congress is 31,383 comprised in 318 local branch unions. According to the report of the general secretary, the Canadian Federation of Labour had in affiliation the 6 central organizations indicated thus (†), with a combined membership of 25,081, comprised in 60 local branch unions. In addition, the Federation reported 5 directly chartered unions but failed to give their memberships.

The Algoma Steel Workers' National Union, a new central body, reported a membership of 2,200, comprised in 1 union.

No return was received from the head office of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, but the membership of 9,000, a gain of 240, was reported by the general secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour as the number upon which per capita tax was being paid. According to departmental records, the local unions of this body numbered 31, a loss of 2.

Another new central body is the Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees, which was reported as having 3 local unions, with a membership of 4,500.

The Canadian Federation of Musicians, which reported 8 locals and a membership of 530, is also a new organization.

The Canadian Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association formed one new branch in 1936, making a total of 6, with a membership of 170, a gain of 20.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, which is the strongest numerically of the four organizations of employees of the Dominion Government, the names of which are recorded in the trade union group, had 40 local branches, a gain of 1, with a combined membership of 3,910, a loss of 286. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers ranked second in the group of organizations of Dominion Government Employees, having 57 local branches, a gain of 3, with 1,684 members, an increase of 74. The Canadian Postal Employees stood third, with a loss of 2 branches and 86 members, having 26 branches and a membership of 957. The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation reported 18 branches, no change, but the number of members was reduced by 29, being reported at 895.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta, which had 11 branches, a decrease of 1, and a membership of 1,204, a gain of 4, is the only organization of provincial government employees in the trade union group.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada reported 2 locals, a decrease of 4, with a membership of 28, a loss of 334.

A membership of 620, a gain of 70, comprised in 4 local branches, no change, was reported by 3 of the branches of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers reported 21 local branch unions, a loss of 1, with a membership of 619, a gain of 9.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees showed a gain of 1 in local branches and a loss of 154 members, reporting 27 locals and a membership of 1,398.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters had 31 affiliated branches, with a membership of 1,692, but as 24 of the branches are affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, the membership of which has been computed in table No. 1, only the membership of the 7 branches not under dual charters is recorded in the following table. Owing to the affiliation of a large number of the local unions with the International Association during the year, this figure showed a decrease of 413 from 1935.

The National Association of Marine Engineers reported the same number of locals as recorded in 1935, viz., 16, but a decrease in membership of 17, the total for 1936 being 633.

FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

The table following contains the name of every known federation of trade union branches in the Dominion, together with the number of affiliations and combined membership. The figures given in the table do not in any way affect the number of local branch unions or the total trade union membership of the Dominion, all of the local branch unions and memberships having been included in the statement which appears in preceding sections of this chapter.

The Alberta Federation of Labour reported 144 affiliations, a gain of 17, with a combined membership of 11,600, an increase of 1,850. The New Brunswick Federation of Labour showed no change in the number of affiliates, 43, with 5,124 members, a gain of 2,065.

The New Brunswick Council of Labour reported 15 unions in affiliation, a loss of 2, with a combined membership of 2,750.

Of the building trade councils, that in Montreal was the strongest numerically, having 22 affiliates, a gain of 3, with 5,700 members, a decrease of 3,400. The Toronto council stood second, with 19 affiliates, a loss of 4, but the membership was not reported. Division No. 4 had in affiliation local branch unions of 7 international organizations and several railway system federations, and comprised a total membership of 25,000, the same number as reported in the previous year. The strongest system federation the members of which are in the employ of a single railway company is the Canadian Pacific Railway System Federation, No. 125, which is composed of the shop mechanics in affiliation with 9 international organizations comprising such workers, with a total membership in 1936 of 10,000, a loss of 600. Standing third in this group as to membership was the Canadian National Railway System Federation, No. 11, which is sub-divided into Atlantic, Central and Western regions, the first named region having 1,259 members, the central, 4,325 members, and the western, 4,255 members, making a total membership of 9,839, an increase of 584 as compared with 1935. The two strongest numerically of the local system federations of shop mechanics were those comprising employees of the C.P.R. The Montreal federation had 7 local unions in affiliation, a loss of 4, with 5,000 members, an increase of 1,950. Next was the federation in Winnipeg, with 7 local unions affiliated, a decrease of 1, with 920 members, a gain of 71. The Labour Educational Association of Ontario, the name of which appears in the miscellaneous section, permits representation to those bodies which contribute a prescribed fee, irrespective of membership, its numerical strength at the close of 1936 being 102 organizations, with a membership of 4,116.

Of the 22 delegate bodies of the National Catholic unions reported as coming under this heading, 7 made returns. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

In a preceding chapter of this report, the composition and functions of trades and labour councils have been discussed. The object in presenting the following statement is to indicate the extent to which these bodies represent the organized workers in the localities where they have been established. In some instances, trades and labour councils have jurisdiction over a number of adjacent localities, but in the main they are confined to particular cities or towns. Thirteen of the councils were operating under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and are designated by the affix "A.C.C.L."; seven councils have been reported by the general secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour as being connected with that body, the name of the organization, preceded by the locality, being shown in each case; and the one which was identified with the One Big Union is indicated by the letters "O.B.U." The remaining 36 councils were made up of delegates from local branches of international organizations and such Canadian bodies as were in affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Fourteen of the latter councils are also chartered by the American Federation of Labor, a proceeding to which the Canadian body does not object. The number of unions given for each locality includes the branches of all classes of organizations named in the report.

In Nova Scotia there were two trades and labour councils, both being located in the city of Halifax. The one chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada reported 22 affiliated local branch unions, out of 42 in the locality. The council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour had 8 affiliated locals, with a membership of 630.

In New Brunswick there were three councils, two in Moncton and one in Saint John. The latter, chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, stood first, with 26 affiliates and a membership of 2,215. The Moncton council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was second, with 5 affiliated local unions and a membership of 700. The Trades and Labour Congress chartered council in Moncton reported 9 affiliates, with 631 members.

The Montreal council of the Trades and Labour Congress, as usual, stood first among the six councils in the province of Quebec, having 87 affiliated unions, out of 220 of all classes in the city, and represented 40,000 members. The Montreal council of the All-Canadian Congress reported 37 affiliates, with a membership of 10,342. Next in order of numerical strength was the Montreal council, Canadian Federation of Labour, reporting for the first time, which showed 27 affiliated unions and a membership of 9,473. The Quebec and Levis Council of the Trades and Labour Congress reported 26 affiliated local unions, with a membership of 4,500.

The Toronto council, representing the international trade union movement, ranked first among the 22 councils in the province of Ontario, having 96 of the local unions in the locality in affiliation, and represented 35,000 organized workers. The Hamilton council, chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress, stood second, with 51 affiliated unions and 4,000 members. The Port Arthur council also reported 4,000 members, comprised in 19 local unions. The Ottawa council occupied fourth place, with 32 affiliated unions and a membership of 3,500, closely followed by the Essex County Trades and Labour Council, which had 3,000 members, comprised in 23 local branch unions.

The Winnipeg council, representing the international trade union movement, stood first in the province of Manitoba, with 49 locals in affiliation and with a membership of 11,275. The only other council to report was that of the Canadian Federation of Labour, which showed 30 unions in affiliation, with 4,066 members.

In the province of Saskatchewan, the Regina council, chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress, occupied first place, reporting 17 affiliated unions, with a membership of 1,100. In second place stood the Saskatoon council with a membership of 1,016, comprised in 14 local branch unions. The Moose Jaw council was third with 21 affiliated locals and a membership of 760.

Of the seven councils in the province of Alberta, the Edmonton council of the Trades and Labour Congress stood in first place, with 40 out of 85 local unions in the locality in affiliation, with a combined membership of 3,500. The Edmonton council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour occupied second place, with 1,700 members, comprised in 17 local unions. In third place was the Calgary council, with 19 affiliated unions and a membership of 1,223. The Edmonton council of the Canadian Federation of Labour followed, with 14 unions in affiliation and 879 members.

The Vancouver-New Westminster and District Council had the largest following of the councils in British Columbia, having in affiliation 68 of the 134 unions in the locality, representing a membership of 12,000. The Vancouver council of the Canadian Federation of Labour reported 14 affiliates, with a membership of 2,350. The council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in the same city was third, reporting 11 unions in affiliation, with a membership of 2,160. Victoria council occupied fourth place in the province with a membership of 1,000, comprised in 20 of the 42 local branch unions in the city.

Of the five reporting central councils of the National Catholic Unions, that in St. Hyacinthe had the greatest following, with 1,500 members, comprised in 16 local syndicates. In second place was the Three Rivers central council, with 20 affiliated syndicates and a membership of 1,217. The Chicoutimi council reported 15 syndicates in affiliation, with 835 members.

The names of the councils operating under dual charters are preceded in the following table by an asterisk. The table shows the returns, where reported, for both 1935 and 1936, and indicates (1) the number of branch unions in affiliation, (2) members represented, and (3) total branch unions operating in the locality.

Recorded in this section is the name of every locality in the Dominion in which existed one or more branches of the various classes of trade unions operating in Canada. Three tables are presented herewith, showing: (1) the localities which had local branches of international organizations (including the Industrial Workers of the World), Canadian and independent units; and (2) the localities which had National Catholic unions. The names of the cities, towns, etc., are arranged alphabetically, and in order of provinces, proceeding from east to west. The number of branches reporting membership and the memberships reported are also shown in this statement.

There were 2,886 trade union branches of all classes in Canada, 1,896 of which were affiliates of international organizations, including 11 branches of the Industrial Workers of the World; 740 were branches of Canadian bodies, 190 were National Catholic unions, and 60 were independent units. Reports as to membership, etc., were received from 2,463 local unions, 174 more than for the year 1935.

The membership reported from the head offices of all organizations with branches or members in Canada, or secured from other reliable sources, totals 322,473, comprised, as above stated, in 2,886 branches. The membership given by the 2,463 reporting local branches was 254,218, or an average of 103 for each reporting branch. The remaining membership of 68,255, divided among the 423 non-reporting branches, gives an average of 161 members. The membership of the system divisions of telegraphers cannot be recorded in any particular locality, and is therefore included under localities not specified. The 2,330 reporting branches of those classed as international, Canadian and independent units showed a membership of 230,997, an average of about 99; and the total membership of 366 non-reporting branches was 46,476, an average of approximately 127. The 133 reporting National Catholic unions, out of a total of 190, gave a membership of 23,221, an average of almost 175; and the remaining membership of 21,779, divided among the 57 non-reporting unions, indicates the high average of 382.

Where a local union has a large membership, or where a skilled craft is highly organized, reports of numerical strength are invariably supplied. There are instances, however, where officers are not permitted to supply any information concerning the organization without first obtaining the sanction of the members, and this permission, it is known, has been refused at times, it being considered that the publication of such information might be injurious to their interests. The apathy of the local officers is very often responsible for the failure to furnish particulars, but for the present report the response to requests for membership figures was rather good, the reporting unions, as above mentioned, representing slightly more than 85 per cent of the total.

There were 30 branch unions in Canada which reported a membership of 1,000 or over, 13 more than the number in this class in 1935. Of these, twenty-four were identified with the international organizations, three were National Catholic unions, two were independent units, and one was identified with a Canadian body.

The union reporting the largest membership was the National Independent Longshoremen's Union of Montreal, with 3,000 members. The international local branch union with jurisdiction confined to a particular city which had the largest following was local No. 373, International Longshoremen's Association, Montreal, which reported 2,985 members. Next came the Algoma Steel Workers' Union, Sault Ste. Marie, and the Protective Association of Shoe Workers (National Catholic), Quebec, Que., which reported the same number of members, viz., 2,200. The union with the next largest membership was the National Catholic Union of Miners, Thetford Mines, Que., with 1,900. Other strong unions with memberships confined to a particular city were: Toronto branch No. 113 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America, 1,834 members; Winnipeg local No. 35, United Garment Workers of America, 1,500 members; Montreal branch No. 790 of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America, 1,451 members; Fort Frances branch No. 2560, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, 1,397 members; Montreal National Catholic Union of Textile Workers, 1,390 members; Toronto branch No. 149, American Federation of Musicians, 1,332 members; Halifax branch No. 269, International Longshoremen's Association, 1,300 members; Springhill branch No. 4514, United Mine Workers of America, and Vancouver branch No. 101, Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America, 1,260 members each; Vancouver branch No. 120, Lumber Workers' Industrial Union (Industrial Workers of the World), New Aberdeen local No. 4529, United Mine Workers of America, and Cornwall branch No. 2499, United Textile Workers of America, 1,200 members each; Sydney branch No. 1064, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, 1,160; Saint John local No. 273, International Longshoremen's Association, 1,150; Montreal branch No. 234, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, 1,119; Toronto branch No. 91, International Typographical Union, 1,094; New Waterford branch No. 4527, United Mine Workers of America, 1,075; Montreal branch No. 200, Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America, Montreal Syndicated Longshoremen (Independent), Stellarton branch No. 4481, United Mine Workers of America, and Montreal branch No. 49, United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, 1,000 members each.

Three of the system divisions of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers and one system division of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, the members of which are scattered over a wide area, reported large followings, the strongest being System Division No. 7, covering the Canadian Pacific Railway, which had 2,325 members. Standing second was System Division No. 1, covering the Canadian National Railways, lines east of Fort William, with 2,320 members. Third was System Division No. 43, with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Railways, lines west of Fort William, with 1,370 members. System Division No. 43 of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union, with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Telegraphs, reported 1,320 members.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN CANADIAN CITIES

The appended table shows the names of 30 cities having not less than 20 trade union branches of all classes, and gives (1) number in each locality, (2) number of unions reporting membership, and (3) number of members reported.

XX. DISBURSEMENTS FOR TRADE UNION BENEFITS

Expenditures For Benefits Reported by Five Canadian Central Organizations—Canadian Group Showed an Increase—Sixty-one International Organizations Operating in Canada Reported From Headquarters as to Disbursements for Benefits to Members—International Organizations Also Showed an Increase—Expenditure for Death Benefits Accounts for More than One-half of the Total Disbursements—Large Disbursements by Four Railroad Brotherhoods—International Benefits in Detail—Amounts Paid by Canadian Local Branch Unions to Their Own Members.

In addition to the trade protection which labour organizations endeavour to give to their members, the majority of the trade unions have established beneficiary features, under the provisions of which large sums are disbursed annually. Of the 28 Canadian central organizations, 5 reported expenditures for benefits—4 paid death benefits (some of which is paid by insurance companies with which the organizations have group insurance policies), strike benefits were paid by 1, and other benefits by 2. The total amount disbursed was reported to be $67,989.17 an increase of $40,617.93 as compared with the figures furnished by the same number of organizations in 1935. The following table gives the names of the central bodies reporting payments for benefits, together with the amounts disbursed for the classes of benefits mentioned.

Of the 88 international organizations operating in Canada, 61 reported from headquarters as to disbursements for benefits to members. The expenditures reported are for a one-year period, and while in some instances they cover the fiscal year of the respective organizations, in the main they are for the calendar year 1936. Of the 61 organizations the names of which appear in the accompanying table, death benefits were paid by 56, unemployed and travelling benefits by 7, strike benefits by 31, sick and accident benefits by 12, and old age pensions by 10, viz., the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America; the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers; the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; the International Union of Quarry Workers; the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway, and Motor Coach Employees of America; and the International Typographical Union, with the remaining amounts recorded in the column being for other purposes. Some of the remaining 27 organizations with Canadian affiliations have benefit features, the administration of which in some instances is under the control of the local branches. This is mainly accounted for by the fact that many local unions existed independently prior to their affiliation with the international "central," and some of these locals provided for death, sick and other benefits, for which a fund had been created. In this manner the benefit features have often become identified with the local branches, and their jurisdiction in this respect has been recognized. In other instances there is a division of control, sick benefits being administered by local branches, while the death, strike and pension funds are governed by the international body. The returns as to benefit payments furnished by the international organizations are for the whole membership. It is in very rare cases that separate reports are received as to disbursements made by international organizations to their Canadian members, the general officers stating that to prepare such a statement would entail considerable work, a task which they do not appear to be willing to undertake.

As in previous years, the Department has endeavoured to ascertain what benefits in addition to those disbursed by the central organizations were paid during 1936 to their own members from the funds under the immediate control of the various Canadian branches of international organizations. Application for this information was forwarded to every known local union, and of these 557 reported having made payments on account of benefits, the aggregate of such disbursements being given in a separate table.

One hundred and thirty-seven local branches of Canadian organizations, including 37 National Catholic unions, and 23 independent units reported disbursements for benefits to their own members.

The following statement shows the total reported expenditures made in Canada and the United States on account of benefits by the various international organizations operating in Canada, as printed in detail in a subsequent table:—

Unemployed and travelling benefits.	1,272,323
Strike benefits.	874,235
Sick and accident benefits.	1,915,898
Old age pensions and other benefits.	4,027,014

These figures show that for 1936 the reported disbursements for benefits by international organizations operating in Canada were $2,096,700 greater than the amount expended in 1935. The expenditure for death benefits, as in previous years, accounted for more than one-half of the total disbursements and showed an increase of $1,963,061. For unemployed and travelling benefits there was an increase of $950,112, the sum disbursed being $1,272,323. The benefits paid to those on strike amounted to $874,235, an increase of $334,936. The disbursements for sick and accident benefits, which totalled $1,915,898, were $1,706,175 less than in 1935. The payments made on account of old age pensions totalled $3,369,073, an increase of $738,419, the remaining sum of $657,941 recorded in the column with old age pensions being spent for other benefits and donations to other organizations.

The largest expenditure for death benefits alone was made by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which reported disbursements aggregating $3,071,419. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers spent $1,497,165, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen disbursed the sum of $1,049,456 for this class of benefit. Only 7 organizations reported payments on account of unemployed and travelling benefits, the largest sum being disbursed by the International Photo Engravers' Union, which spent $903,733 for unemployed benefits, and the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League being second, with an expenditure of $225,651. For strike benefits the International Association of Machinists reported the largest expenditure, having disbursed the sum of $232,669; the International Typographical Union had an outlay of $158,677; and the International Moulders' Union of North America was third, with payments totalling $110,036, followed by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, with an expenditure of $86,525. The heaviest outlay for sick and accident benefits, which also included disability and benevolent allowances, was by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, which reported the disbursements of $1,026,489; the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was second, with payments amounting to $223,454, which, however, included certain payments for funeral benefits; and in third place stood the Order of Railway Conductors, which reported payments amounting to $187,620 for sick and accident benefits. The International Typographical Union stood first in expenditures for old age pensions, with payments aggregating $2,034,920; the next largest disbursement was by the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union, with an outlay of $450,791; and the third largest expenditure for old age pensions was by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with an outlay of $288,053.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen again reported the largest aggregate expenditure for benefits, having disbursed the sum of $3,375,727; the International Typographical Union, for another year, took second place, with an outlay of $2,744,686; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen was third, with payments of $2,516,103; and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers ranked fourth, with disbursements of $1,795,655. The combined expenditures for benefits by the four railroad brotherhoods the members of which are engaged in engine and train service comprise $8,752,762 of the total of $20,228,178 expended for benefits in Canada and the United States by the international labour bodies operating in Canada.

The following table gives the expenditures made throughout their whole jurisdictions for the various classes of benefits by international organizations with local branches or members in Canada:—

BENEFITS PAID BY LOCAL BRANCHES

Returns furnished by 717 local branch unions in Canada show that these bodies expended a total of $411,907 to their own members for the various benefits provided by their respective laws. This sum is $27,809 larger than that reported in 1935 by 711 local branches. As in the previous year, the highest expenditure was for unemployed benefits, $143,520 being disbursed, an increase of $9,895 as compared with 1935. The next highest expenditure was for sick and accident benefits, $100,127 being disbursed, a decrease of $14,194. For death benefits, $59,679 was paid out, an increase of $12,822. Strike benefits amounted to $48,391, an amount larger by $17,620 than that extended in 1935. The expenditure for "other benefits," which represent disbursements for various purposes, including donations to other unions, amounted to $60,190, an increase of $1,666. Of the total outlay for benefits by Canadian branch unions to their own members, the 557 locals having international affiliation disbursed $319,280, an increase of $6,230, the expenditures for each class of benefits being: death, $20,117; unemployed, $139,897; strike, $44,308; sick and accident, $73,562; and other, $41,396. The 137 branches of Canadian organizations, including 37 National Catholic unions, distributed $63,968, an increase over 1935 of $22,585, divided as follows: death, $32,162; unemployed, $1,517; strike, $3,378; sick and accident, $14,515; and other, $12,396. Twenty-three independent units reported expenditures for benefits of $28,659, a decrease of $1,006, apportioned as follows: death, $7,400; unemployed, $2,106; strike, $705; sick and accident, $12,050; and other, $6,398.

The following summary indicates the total amount disbursed by local branch unions in Canada for the classes of benefits named:—

Unemployed benefits..	143,520
Strike benefits..	48,391
Sick and accident benefits..	100,127
Other benefits..	60,190

The expenditure of the above amounts by the local branch unions among their own members, as previously explained, was in addition to the disbursements made for benefits by the central organizations.

The arrangement of the accompanying table is similar to the preceding one giving the disbursements by the central international bodies, with the exception that the "other benefits" does not include old age pension payments, but does embrace all gratuities, etc., which are not classed in other columns:—

XXI. NEW AND DISSOLVED LABOUR BODIES

During 1936 There Were 371 Branch Unions Established in the Dominion and 213 Were Dissolved—Net Increase in Trade Union Branches Was 158—New and Dissolved Bodies by Trade Groups—New and Dissolved Delegate Bodies—Names and Location of the Various Labour Bodies Formed—Labour Bodies Dissolved.

During the year 371 local branch unions were organized in the Dominion and in the same period 213 were dissolved, making a net increase of 158 in the number of trade union branches in Canada. By trade groups the new and dissolved unions were apportioned as follows:—

Mining.....	39	1
Lumbering.....	54	32
Building.....	27	15
Metal.....	16	6
Printing.....	45	13
Clothing.....	7	11
Steam engineers.....	18	15
Food.....	19	19
Railway.....	1	5
Communication.....	35	13
Navigation.....	26	19
Personal service.....	27	20
Public authorities.....	56	16
Miscellaneous.....	371	213

The delegate bodies organized during 1936 numbered 21—9 federations, 2 district councils and 10 trades and labour or central councils. For the same period 8 delegate bodies passed out of existence—2 federations, 2 district councils and 4 trades and labour councils. As explained in an earlier chapter, the formation or dissolution of these delegate bodies does not affect the trade union membership of the Dominion, their establishment being made possible only by the existence of local branch unions, which are the foundation of the whole plan of labour organization.

LIST OF LABOUR BODIES FORMED IN 1936

The following statement contains the name of every federation, district council, trades and labour council and local branch union known to have been formed in Canada during the year 1936, as well as the names of some organizations of which particulars had not been received for previous reports. Where the locality is given for bodies covering a wide territory it designates the address of the secretary. The list of local branches is arranged in trade groups, the name of the organization from which the charter was secured, the location of the branch and the total number of charters issued by the central organization being given.

XXII. THE LABOUR PRESS

The More Important Labour Organizations Have Official Journals—Method of Circulating—Canadian Publications—List of International Labour Journals—National Catholic Union Periodicals—Other Publications.

The organized labour movement on the North American continent has developed a labour press of considerable importance. Through this medium the business of the respective unions and the activities of the trade union movement generally are brought to the attention of the members. All of the more important labour organizations have official journals, most of which are issued monthly. The editorship of these publications is in some cases an elective position, but usually the secretary has charge of the editing and management. While a regular subscription rate is charged for all official journals, most organizations arrange to include the fee in the per capita tax so as to ensure that the publication reaches every member, whether residing in Canada, the United States, or elsewhere. As the headquarters of all the international labour bodies are south of the border, it is natural that the offices of publication should be similarly located.

Fourteen labour periodicals are published in Canada, nine of which are official journals of central organizing bodies. Two official journals have not been mentioned hitherto in this review, namely, (1) The Labour Review, published by the Canadian Federation of Labour, the first issue of which appeared for the month of December, 1936, and (2) Shipping and Terminals, the official organ of the Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees. The only journal to cease publication during the year was Le Charpentier Menuisier, the monthly periodical of the Quebec Provincial Council of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. The B. C. Lumber Worker is the organ of the British Columbia Lumber and Saw-mill Workers' Unions, affiliates of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

There are also a number of labour papers which, although not sponsored by any labour organization, are published in the interest of the trade union movement. The Industrial Worker, the official publication of the Educational Labor Press and Radio Bureau of Canada, published in Toronto, "is not sponsored in any way by any trade union movement but believes in . . . fostering and promoting sound trade union ideals." Another publication listed for the first time in this chapter is The New Commonwealth, which is issued in Toronto.

The following five Canadian labour publications devote some of their space to material printed in the French language: (1) Canadian Congress Journal; (2) Canadian Unionist; (3) Canadian Railway Employees' Monthly; (4) The Federated Railwaymen; and (5) The Labour World. The official journal of the United Mine Workers of America contains sections printed in several different languages.

There are upwards of 150 weekly papers published in the United States under the auspices or in the interest of organized workers and recognized as a part of the labour press by the trade union movement. With the object of stimulating the labour press of the continent there was established some years ago the International Labor Press. Through this agency the editors of various recognized labour publications are brought into conference annually at the same time and place that the American Federation of Labor holds its convention and matters relating to their work are discussed and suggestions invited as to how the labour news service of North America may be improved. The president of the International Labor Press is Matthew Woll, 105 A.F. of L. Bldg., Washington, D.C., and the secretary, R. E. Woodmansee, Box 15, Springfield, Ill.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the recognized trade union periodicals listed above, there are other publications which champion the cause of the wage-earner. In 1922 the Workers' Party of Canada (the name was changed in 1924 to the Communist Party of Canada) published The Worker as its official organ, and continued to do so until the party was declared illegal in December, 1931, whereupon the paper appeared under the auspices of the Worker Publishing Association. Beginning May 1, 1936, this publication was issued by the Clarion Publishing Association, Toronto, Ont., under the name of the Daily Clarion. After the Young Communist League was organized in 1922, The Young Worker, published weekly in Toronto, Ont., appeared as its official organ. In 1936 The Young Worker ceased publication and its subscription list was taken over by Advance, a monthly publication issued in Toronto by the Advance Publishing Association. It is understood that the Canadian Labour Defence League has ceased to publish its official journal, the Labour Defender.

The Workers' Party of America publishes in New York, N.Y., an official paper entitled the Daily Worker, one of the two dailies published in the English language in the interest of communism. The other communist daily is published in London, England, under a similar name. The Labour Herald, which had been the official journal of the Trade Union Educational League, was in 1924 consolidated with the Liberator and Soviet Russia Pictorial under the name of the Workers' Monthly. Beginning in 1927 this magazine was published monthly by the Workers' (Communist) Party of America under the title of The Communist as a medium for the theoretical discussion of revolutionary problems.

The Communist League of America, the opposition group to the Workers' (Communist) Party of America, published a weekly organ in New York under the title of The New Militant, and the National Youth Committee of the same group in December, 1931, commenced the publication of a monthly paper under the name of the Young Spartican.

XXIV. NON-TRADE UNION ORGANIZATIONS

Important Associations of Wage-earners in the Dominion Not Connected with Organized Labour—Chief Organizations of School Teachers—Associations of Government Employees and Commercial Travellers—Objects of the Organizations in this Group—Chief Officers, Affiliations, and Membership.

Apart from the organizations identified with the labour movement in the Dominion, the standing of which has been shown in preceding chapters of this report, there is a considerable number of associations which cannot be included in the category of trade unions. Their importance, however, would appear to warrant some reference to them in a report designed in part to indicate the numerical strength of organizations of wage-earners operating in the Dominion. This group of non-trade union associations includes organizations of school teachers, who, besides being organized locally, have their provincial federations. These in turn are brought together in a Dominion-wide body known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. Among the advantages of membership in the teachers' organizations, it is stated, is the effort put forth to secure what are considered adequate salaries for the teaching profession. Members are not supposed to accept positions at salaries below the schedules prepared by the associations. With the object of maintaining this principle, members are enjoined in some instances from seeking a position where a vacancy has occurred through the refusal of a school board to pay the scheduled salary. This policy is in accord with one of the fundamental principles of organized labour.

Mention has been made in preceding chapters of a number of associations of Government employees identified with the trade union movement. The great majority of such associations, however, are not so affiliated, and their names are therefore included in the present group. Some of these organizations are composed of various classes of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, and the others of employees of provincial Governments. The object of these associations is to speak collectively for their respective memberships on matters which they desire to bring to the attention of the proper authorities.

Among the strongest numerically of the associations in this group are those embracing commercial travellers. Some of these organizations, which have been in existence for many years, have, as a result of their efforts, secured numerous privileges for their members, and in addition have disbursed large sums for benefit purposes. The oldest of these organizations is the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was established in Toronto in 1871, incorporated by Act of Parliament on May 26, 1874, and by an amendment thereto in March, 1876, granted further privileges. The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association was formed in 1875, and incorporated in 1880; the Ontario Association was formed on December 23, 1876, and incorporated in Ontario on September 13, 1880; the North-west Association was incorporated in Manitoba on May 23, 1887, this incorporation being confirmed by the Dominion Government on June 21, 1906. There is also the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, a grouping of French-Canadian Roman Catholic commercial travellers' societies, which accepts as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See," and is designed to direct its members towards the religious and social apostolate.

There are in the Dominion a number of ex-soldier associations formed with a view to fostering the comradeship of the trenches. Besides the one referred to under government employees, however, the only veterans' associations which it is considered fitting to include in this report are (1) Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild, organized in 1925, composed of men who are employed in the departments of the Canadian National Railways, (2) Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors, which was formed in Montreal in 1919 to protect its members against alleged discrimination by labour unions.

A number of miscellaneous organizations are also given a place in this chapter.

In each of the provinces of the Dominion there are associations of school teachers, with which local bodies are in most cases connected. Eleven of these provincial associations are identified with a Dominion-wide association known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. The objects of this body, which was organized at Calgary in July, 1920, are as follows:—

(a) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest.

(b) To provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given.

(c) The Dominion organization shall in no way interfere with the full liberties of the provincial organizations in dealing with matters concerning their own provinces.

The chief officers of the Canadian Teachers' Federation are: Pres., J. R. Mitchell, 2159 Argyle Ave., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., C. N. Crutchfield, B.A., Shawinigan Falls, Que.

In a previous chapter, reference has been made to those organizations of Government employees which are identified with the labour movement through their affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. These are the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, the Civil Service Association of Alberta, and the Canadian Postal Employees. The remaining Government employees' associations are not connected with organized labour, but function as separate central organizations and as such are recorded in this group. The associations of Dominion Government employees in some instances cover definite branches of the civil service, while it is understood the provincial bodies embrace all classes in one general organization. The object of the civil service associations is in the main to speak collectively for their respective members on matters affecting conditions of employment. Several group associations of Dominion Government employees are affiliated with the Civil Service Federation which is designed to represent all branches of the service, and which, although itself not connected with organized labour, does not exclude membership to those bodies which are so affiliated. Among the associations of Dominion Government employees is the Halcyon Club. This was originally intended as a social organization, but, since the passing out of existence of the Women's Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, the Halcyon Club has also become the medium of expression of the women in the Government service at Ottawa in regard to conditions of employment or other matters. 7 LABOUR ORGANIZATION IN CANADA

INTRODUCTION

The Report Aims to Present the Standing of the Various Labour Bodies in the Dominion—International and Canadian, the Two Main Headings Under Which Labour Organizations in Canada Are Classified—Principal Types of Organizations—Trade Union Membership in 1937—Union Membership by Industrial and Trade Groups—Unions Having Large Memberships—Development of Trade Unions in Canada—Trade Union Legislation in Canada—Labour in Politics—Labour Members—Workers' Educational Association of Ontario.

The annual report on Labour Organization in Canada, 1937, aims to present as accurately as possible the standing of the various labour bodies in the Dominion at the close of the calendar year. Following closely along the lines of others in the series which began in 1911, the present volume contains statistical and other information concerning central labour organizations, delegate bodies and local unions in Canada for which particulars were received in the department. Information is also given concerning organizations other than trade unions, the labour press, trade union conventions, union benefits and organizations of workers throughout the world. The particulars presented in this report have been obtained to a large extent from the officers of the various organizations concerned, but where this was impossible the information was secured from departmental records or other reliable sources.

The monthly issues of the Labour Gazette, the official publication of the department, contain synopsized reports of conventions of the more important international and Canadian organizations and other trade union activities.

As previously stated, there are two main classes into which labour organizations in Canada are divided: (1) local branches of international unions having membership in the United States and Canada; and (2) labour bodies the members of which are wholly in Canada. Nearly all of the Canadian branches of the international unions are in affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in a subsequent chapter), which, however, has also in affiliation a number of central organizations whose jurisdiction is limited to the Dominion, as well as local unions directly chartered. The wholly Canadian organizations are grouped according to affiliation under: the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; the All-Canadian Congress of Labour; the Canadian Federation of Labour; the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada; other Canadian central bodies; and independent local units.

The principal types of organization are the craft unions, including workmen in a single craft or a number of related crafts or trades, for example, bricklayers and stonemasons; and the industrial unions, which have members in the various occupations in a particular industry, for instance, in coal mining. Some of the first class include several crafts with helpers and labourers, so that they are quasi-industrial unions. There is also another type of organization which organizes workers in all industries under one general union, centrally controlled, usually with subdivisions by industries and localities. The development of the various types of labour organization in Canada is briefly outlined in a later section of this chapter.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN CANADA IN 1937

According to the figures compiled for this report, the aggregate membership of the various trade unions in Canada at the close of 1937 has exceeded the previous record of the peak year of 1919, when there were 378,047 organized workers in the Dominion.

The total membership of all classes of trade unions in Canada in 1937 was 384,619, an increase of 62,146 over the previous year, comprised in 3,258 locals, a gain of 372 as compared with the figures for 1936.

An analysis of returns received in the department from trade unions or other reliable sources shows that the international union group, consisting of the Canadian members of 96 organizations, 8 more than recorded in 1936, had 2,048 branches in the Dominion, an increase of 152, with a combined membership of 217,465, a gain of 42,696. Included in the international group is the Industrial Workers of the World, with a reported membership in Canada of 1,156, a loss of 3,044 as compared with 1936, comprised in 6 local branch unions, a loss of 5. The group of Canadian central organizations, which numbered 31, an increase of 3, had 853 branches, a gain of 113, with a combined membership of 98,633, a gain of 14,792.

The National Catholic group consists of 285 unions, a gain of 95, the total membership as supplied by the secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada being 52,000, an increase of 7,000.

There were 72 independent units, 12 more than in 1936, the membership as reported by 67 being 16,521, a loss of 2,342.

A computation of these figures indicates that there were in Canada at the close of 1937 a total of 3,258 trade union branches, a gain of 372, with a combined membership of 384,619, an increase, as above stated, of 62,146. According to the latest estimate of population (June 1, 1937), trade unionists in 1937 represented 3.45 per cent of the total population of Canada; adding 116,904, the number of members in the non-trade union associations, the organized wage-earners in the Dominion at the close of 1937 represented 4.5 per cent of the population.

Succeeding chapters of the present report indicate in detailed form the composition and numerical strength of the principal groups of labour organizations in Canada. Each year the department obtains membership figures from the various international and national trade union organizations and from the local unions throughout the Dominion. In addition, the department this year discussed with the four principal federated bodies the desirability of having the aforementioned reported membership figures verified by means of an audit by an officer of the federal Department of Finance. Two of the bodies, viz., the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, expressed their approval of the proposed procedure and willingness to submit their records to such audit; subsequently an audit was made of the membership figures of these two bodies. The other two bodies concerned, viz., the Canadian Federation of Labour and the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, declined to make their records available for the proposed audit. For the present report, therefore, it is possible to give audited figures only for the two first-mentioned organizations, and consequently the comparative table which has appeared in previous volumes is omitted from the present report.

The table following shows, for each year, the number of trade union branches in Canada, together with their combined memberships:—

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE GROUPS

The division of union membership among the various industries and trade groups is shown by the accompanying table and chart. The membership of each central body is included in the trade group in which most of its members are employed. For example, the membership of the various carpenters' unions is classified under building trades. The membership of each central body is given in Table 1 and 1A, Chapter XX (Statistics).

The railroad employees' group, as usual, contains the largest number of members, namely, 79,347, representing 20·63 per cent of the total.

Groups of Industries	Member-ship	Per-centage
Mining and Quarrying.....	26,909	7·00
Building.....	30,408	7·90
Printing and Paper Making.....	24,273	6·31

Other Transportation and Navigation.....	35,161	9·14
Public Employees, Personal Service and Amusement.....	37,106	9·64
All other trades and general labour.....	84,267	21·91

Mining and Quarrying.—Organizations in these industries are chiefly among miners. The United Mine Workers of America, which has a large membership in Nova Scotia and in Alberta and British Columbia, Districts 26 and 18, respectively, and a few independent miners' locals include all classes of workers in coal mines, mechanics, engineers, etc., as well as miners. The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, with local unions in Ontario, Manitoba and British Columbia, also has a considerable membership. A number of asbestos miners in Quebec are organized into a National Catholic Union.

Building Trades.—With but few exceptions this group includes the various unions the members of which are engaged chiefly in building and construction. Those that are not so included are carpenters in wood working establishments and electrical workers on electric railways, in railway shops and in electric light and power plants. In the larger cities these unions have formed building trades councils. The carpenters, electrical workers and plumbers together make up over 42 per cent of the total membership.

Metal Trades.—In addition to the members of the unions in this group who work chiefly in metal working establishments and in railway shops, there are included elevator constructors and bridge, structural and ornamental iron workers. The automobile workers, iron, steel and tin workers and the machinists account for over half of the membership in the group. The boilermakers, moulders and a steel workers' union each had over 2,000 members.

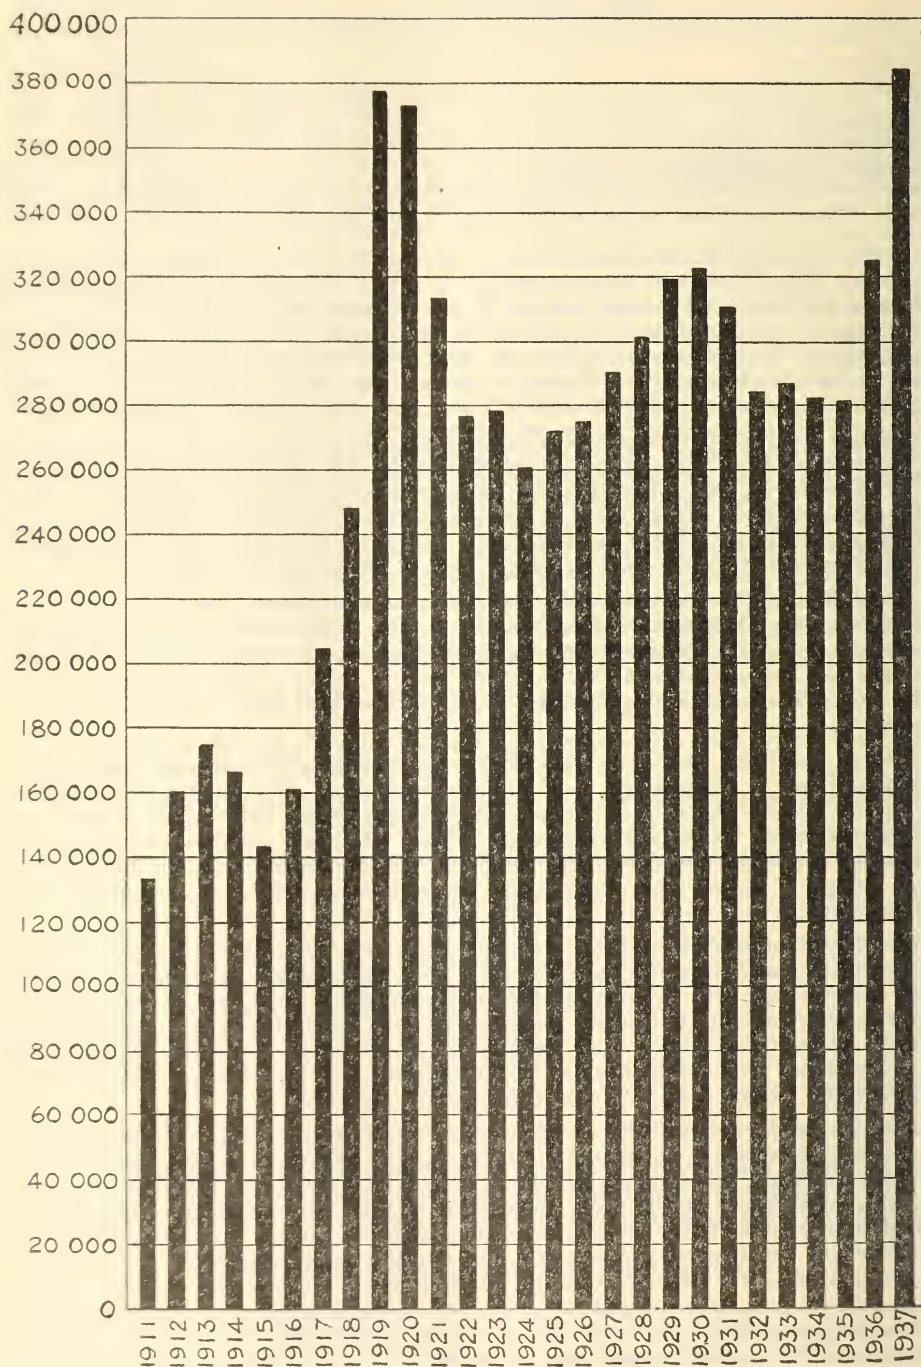

Printing and Paper Making Trades.—This group includes pulp and paper mill workers, as well as those in printing and publishing establishments. The carpenters, electricians, etc., as well as the engineers and firemen in pulp and paper mills belong, however, to the building, metal trades and engineering unions. The pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers had the largest membership in the group with over 9,500, while the typographical union, the paper makers and the printing pressmen accounted for over one-third the total membership.

Clothing, Boot and Shoe Trades.—In this group the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, with members in cloak, suit and dressmaking establishments, had the largest membership. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, composed of employees in men's and boys' ready-made clothing factories, and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union had considerable memberships. The Shoe Workers and Allied Crafts had over three thousand members, while the Fur Workers and Boot and Shoe Workers' Unions each had over one thousand members.

Railroad Employees.—Included in this group of organizations of steam railway employees are the four independent international unions, namely, the Locomotive Engineers, the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Railway Conductors and the Railroad Trainmen, with memberships ranging from about 2,400 to over eleven thousand. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees, composed of sectionmen and the mechanics in the bridge and building departments, had the second largest membership in this group, being over 12,000. The Railway Carmen, which includes car repairers and car building trades, such as carpenters, upholsterers, etc., had a membership of nearly 12,000. This organization and certain locals of the machinists, blacksmiths, boilermakers, electrical workers, moulders and sheet metal workers' unions which have members chiefly in railway shops together constitute Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees Department of the American Federation of Labor (Federated Shop Crafts), which represents these classes of employees in negotiations with the railway companies. The Railroad Telegraphers and the Railway and Steamship Clerks each had considerably over 4,000 members. The latter organization includes clerks, freight handlers and station employees not only on steam railways but also those employed by steamship companies; most of its members, however, are employed in the Canadian Pacific Railway.

In the group of wholly Canadian unions, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is outstanding, having, in fact, the second largest membership of any union in Canada. While membership in this organization is open to nearly all classes of railway employees, it consists chiefly of clerks, freight handlers, station employees, shop labourers, and dining and sleeping car employees on the Canadian National Railways and a majority of the employees of the Canadian National Express Company. It also has some members in car shops and among steamship clerks and freight handlers. This union is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

TRADE UNIONISM IN CANADA BY GROUPS OF INDUSTRIES, 1937

Other Transportation and Navigation Trades.—The Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, which is made up of motormen and conductors and miscellaneous classes of electric railway employees, as well as bus drivers, had the largest membership in this group. Usually, electrical workers, machinists, etc., belong to the unions of their respective crafts, but in a few instances, by arrangement with these unions, they belong to the street railway organization.

The Canadian Seamen's Union, the Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees and the International Longshoremen's Association each had over 4,000 members. Waterfront workers and longshoremen in various independent unions on the Pacific coast numbered over 2,000.

The National Association of Marine Engineers, affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, had members throughout the Dominion.

Public Employment, Personal Service and Amusement.—Federal Government employees who belong to trade unions numbered over 8,000. Included in this group are postal clerks, letter carriers and railway mail clerks, as well as the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership in which is open to all classes of federal Government employees. The International Association of Fire Fighters had a membership of over 2,300. In the category of personal service, the hotel and restaurant employees had approximately 2,500 members. In the amusement group the American Federation of Musicians had approximately 3,000 members, while the stage employees' organization, which includes moving picture machine operators, contained over nine hundred members.

All Other Trades and General Labour.—The largest organization in this group was the United Rubber Workers, with approximately three thousand members. The Commercial Telegraphers, Electrical and Radio Employees and the Operating Engineers had memberships ranging from about 1,000 to 1,800. The several unions of fishermen in British Columbia had a combined membership of approximately 3,000. The membership of the National Catholic unions in this group, including workers in various classes of employment, chiefly in factories, was over 28,000.

UNIONS HAVING LARGE MEMBERSHIPS IN CANADA

Of the 96 international organizations with branches or members in Canada, there were 16 with 5,000 or more members, 6 of these being composed of employees who are identified with railway operations. In the Canadian group, there was one body with over 5,000 members, being also a railway organization. The names of the 17 organizations appear in the following statement, being arranged according to numerical strength, and among them they represent a Canadian trade union membership of 156,173, comprised in 1,181 local branches; approximately 40 per cent of the total membership; and about 36 per cent of the total trade union branches.

DEVELOPMENT OF TRADE UNIONS IN CANADA

Until the middle of the nineteenth century only a small number of independent trade associations, usually consisting of workmen of a single craft in one locality, had been formed in Canada. Although it is known that there were unions in existence in this country, for example, in Nova Scotia, prior to 1827, the first of which the department has record, was a boot and shoe workers' union in Montreal in 1827. There also appear to have been "circles" of French printers in Quebec at this time. Printers also composed the first known union in Ontario which was formed in York (now Toronto) in 1832. Several other unions are known to have been established before 1850, among cigar-makers, stonecutters, masons and coopers, but up to that time the movement was not at all extensive.

From 1850 to 1870 unionism in Canada was still in the stage of unconcerted action, but during that period its sporadic growth was greatly stimulated by the marked progress of the trade union movement in Great Britain and in the United States. The Trade Unions Act of 1872, which removed from labour organizations the liability to criminal prosecution for conspiracy in restraint of trade, and the Criminal Law Amendment Act of the same year, which laid down the law on intimidation, picketing, etc., were patterned closely after the British statutes of the previous year. While the mother country was thus pointing the way in the field of labour legislation, it was the United States that in the main furnished the model for the actual machinery of labour organization in Canada. During the 'sixties Canadian local unions began to affiliate with American central organizations of their respective crafts. Printers and iron moulders appear to have taken the lead in the institution of the "international" trade union movement in Canada.

Organization developed rapidly, and the years immediately following 1870 were marked by unprecedented activity in the formation of unions. The first attempt to form a central labour body in Canada was made in 1873, when a convention called by the Toronto Trades Assembly was held in the city by delegates from twelve Toronto unions, three from St. Catharines, four from Hamilton, five from Ottawa, two from London, and one each from Seaforth, Bowmanville and Cobourg. The Canadian Labour Union was organized at this meeting. This body became dormant after a few years, mainly because of the severe depression of the late 'seventies, but during its brief existence it campaigned successfully for improved labour legislation, such as changes in the Dominion law on picketing and conspiracy as affecting trade unions and in the Ontario Masters and Servants Act, and established a tradition of unified effort on the part of the trade union movement in the Dominion.

Not for long, however, was Canada to be without a central labour organization. By 1880 the international crafts unions had become very active in the Dominion. In addition, in 1881 the first Canadian assembly of the Knights of Labour was formed. Founded in Philadelphia in 1869, the Knights of Labour was designed to amalgamate the forces of all classes of labour into a central general assembly, with local mixed and trade assemblies; the organization grew rapidly and reached the zenith of its power about 1885, when it had nearly a million members on the North American continent. In 1883 the Toronto Trades and Labour Council invited the trade unions and Knights of Labour assemblies of the Dominion to convene in Toronto, and at this convention the Canadian Trades and Labour Congress was set up. Three years later the Congress assembled again and was established on a permanent basis. From 1887 to 1892 it met under the name Dominion Trades and Labour Congress. The following year it assumed its present name, Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

In 1881 the American Federation of Labor, a federation of autonomous national and international unions, organized chiefly by crafts, but in some cases by related crafts (thus constituting semi-industrial unions), came into being. A fundamental breach on the issue of organization by crafts as opposed to centralized general organization soon developed between the Federation and the Knights of Labour and continued until the beginning of the twentieth century. The issue immediately became a primary concern of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which had affiliated with it both Knights of Labour assemblies and unions identified with the American Federation of Labor. In the beginning the Congress maintained a policy of strict neutrality and even assayed the role of peacemaker. In later years, however, when it became evident that the proponents of craft autonomy were winning the struggle in the United States, the Canadian body accepted the Federation as its model. Finally, in 1902 the Congress amended its constitution so as to exclude from affiliation certain national or independent unions, including Knights of Labour assemblies, conflicting in jurisdiction with existing international craft organizations. Henceforth the membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada has been drawn largely from international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. In the past several years the Congress also has had in affiliation the Canadian branches of some of the new international unions connected with the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The organizations excluded from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in 1902 immediately formed an independent body, known as the National Trades and Labour Congress. This body changed its name to the Canadian Federation of Labour in 1908 and continued to function as such until 1927, when it merged with certain other independent unions to form the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. In its early years the Canadian Federation of Labour included in its membership Knights of Labour assemblies, but most of these passed out of existence within a few years. Now the All-Canadian Congress of Labour is composed entirely of purely Canadian unions.

The Provincial Workmen's Association, established among Nova Scotia coal miners in 1879, for a time attempted to organize all classes of workmen in the province, but later became a purely coal miners' union. In 1917 it merged with the United Mine Workers of Nova Scotia to form the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, which in turn was absorbed two years later by the United Mine Workers of America, an international union with headquarters in the United States.

Since the latter years of the nineteenth century a prominent part in Canadian unionism has been taken by the four independent international railroad organizations, commonly known as the "Big Four" running trades, namely, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Beginning in 1901 a number of "national" unions, later known as National Catholic Unions, were organized in the province of Quebec, and in 1921 a central organization of these unions was established under the name Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada.

The Industrial Workers of the World, an organization designed to promote revolutionary industrial unionism and the abolition of the wage system, was formed in the United States in 1905 and subsequently extended into Canada.

The One Big Union was established in 1919 in opposition to the principle of organization along craft lines and in support of the principle that workers in all crafts and industries should be in one union.

In 1936 a disagreement among members of the executive of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour caused some unions, including the One Big Union, to withdraw from the Congress and form a new body under the name Canadian Federation of Labour.

TRADE UNION LEGISLATION IN CANADA

The registration of trade unions with the Secretary of State is provided for under the Trade Unions Act, enacted by Parliament in 1872. Registered unions are given power to buy and sell property in their own names and to take action in the courts with respect to their property. The Act declared registered trade unions not to be liable for criminal prosecution nor their trusts void or voidable merely on the ground of conspiracy in restraint of trade. The section regarding criminal prosecution was included in the Criminal Code in 1892 and, therefore, applies to all trade unions.

Provision for the registration of trade unions is also made in Quebec and Nova Scotia. The Quebec Professional Syndicates Act of 1924 gives to trade unions which are organized in accordance with the Act and the constitution and by-laws of which are approved by the Government the civil rights of a corporation. Two-thirds of the members of a syndicate and all its officers must be British subjects.

The Nova Scotia Trade Union Act, 1937, requires every trade union to file its constitution and by-laws with the Provincial Secretary and to make an annual report of its receipts and expenditures under penalty of not more than $100.

Other provincial legislation concerning trade unions deals with freedom of association and collective bargaining. The Nova Scotia Trade Union Act and the Alberta Freedom of Trade Union Association Act, 1937, declares the right of employees to join a trade union which is free from the undue influence or interference of any employer. Collective bargaining through a union or its officers is also declared lawful and the employment of any person on condition of refraining from joining or continuing membership in a trade union is declared unlawful. Penalties are provided for employers who intimidate or dismiss employees or threaten them with dismissal in order to prevent their belonging to a trade union.

The Manitoba Strikes and Lockouts Prevention Act, 1937, repeals the Industrial Conditions Act of 1919 but reproduces certain provisions of the latter statute recognizing the right of employers and employees to organize for any lawful purpose and to bargain individually or collectively. A new section renders liable to a fine any person who seeks by intimidation to compel any employee to join or refrain from joining any union.

The Fair Wage Act, 1937, of Quebec declares liable to a penalty any person who prevents an employee or tries to prevent him from joining a trade union by threatening dismissal or by other threats.

The British Columbia Trade Unions Act of 1902 declares a trade union not liable for the wrongful acts of its members in connection with a labour dispute unless such acts have been duly authorized or concurred in by the members or the executive committee. A union or its members may not be enjoined from or made liable in damages for communicating facts respecting employment or for persuading without unlawful threats or intimidation any person not to renew or not to enter into a contract of employment. Similar immunity is conferred with respect to the publishing of information concerning a strike or lockout.

LABOUR IN POLITICS

At the annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada held in Hamilton, September, 1887, a resolution was unanimously adopted declaring that "in the opinion of this Congress the working classes of Canada will never be properly represented in Parliament, or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class, and members of this Congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavours, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for the local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside." In the political activities which followed the adoption of the above resolution, the trades and labour councils, which usually took the lead, were responsible on a few occasions in having labour candidates nominated for office. Owing to the fact that this procedure disturbed the harmony among the members of these councils, the Trades and Labour Congress, at its annual convention at Ottawa in 1900, adopted a proposal for independent political action. At the succeeding conventions of the Congress an agitation was kept up by those who desired the Congress to become the head of a labour political party. To satisfy, in part, the wishes of these members, the Congress, in 1906, approved a policy of provincial autonomy in the establishment of labour political parties, but even this did not bring into being the political organization desired. In a further effort to meet the wishes of those who were urging further political action, the convention of the Congress in 1917 suggested that the organized workers in the Dominion should follow the British plan and organize a labour party on a basis which would permit united action on the part of trade unionists, socialists, fabians, co-operators and farmers. Acting on this suggestion the Canadian Labour Party was established in 1921. Some success was attained during the next few years in bringing together the various labour political parties, but in 1927 the secretary, who had held office since the inception of the party, resigned. No serious effort was made to secure a successor, and as a consequence the main section of the party ceased to function. Up to the present time the Alberta and Quebec sections have continued to operate. Independent labour parties have been organized from time to time in a number of the provinces but they have met with little success.

The Canadian Unionist, official organ of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, in the October, 1931, issue carried the announcement of the formation of a National Labour Party. In a manifesto the aim of the party was declared to be "to organize the workers politically for the purpose of establishing, by constitutional means, an equitable economic social order."

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was established on August 1, 1932, at a meeting held in Calgary, Alta., of delegates reported as representing labour, farmer and socialist groups in five provinces, viz., Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Among the purposes of the Federation is the establishment in Canada of a co-operative commonwealth in which production, distribution and exchange would be regulated to supply human needs and not for profit, and the taking over by the state of the public utilities and major industries, including mining, pulp and paper, etc. A dominion council was set up and provision made for a council for each province. The member organizations in the various provinces were to select the provincial council and were also to be represented on the Dominion council by one delegate from each body. Each member organization was to be required to pay $25 as an affiliation fee, and financial support was to be sought through voluntary subscriptions. The chief officers of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation are: President, J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., Winnipeg, Man.; National Chairman, M. J. Coldwell, M.P., Regina, Sask.

Federal Parliament: James S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg North Centre (Manitoba); Abraham A. Heaps, Winnipeg North (Manitoba); Angus MacInnis, Vancouver East (British Columbia); J. S. Taylor, Nanaimo (British Columbia); C. G. MacNeil, Vancouver North (British Columbia); M. J. Coldwell, Rosetown-Biggart (Saskatchewan); and Rev. T. C. Douglas, Weyburn (Saskatchewan).

Provincial legislatures: British Columbia—E. E. Winch, Burnaby; Colin Cameron, Comox; Samuel Guthrie, Cowichan-Newcastle; L. A. Shepherd, Delta; Mrs. D. G. Steeves, North Vancouver; Dr. Lyle Telford, Vancouver East; and Harold Winch, Vancouver East. Saskatchewan (election of June 8, 1938)—J. A. Young, Biggar; Myron E. Feeley, Canora; L. H. Hantleman Elrose; Joseph Burton, Humboldt; P. A. Howe, Kelvington; Jacob Benson, Last Mountain; O. W. Valteau, Melfort; P. L. Phelps, Saltcoats; J. H. Brockelbank, Tisdale; Tom. Johnston, Touchwood; and G. H. Williams, Wadena.

LABOUR MEMBERS

Labour candidates were elected as follows: British Columbia—Thomas A. Uphill. Fernie. Manitoba—James Aikens, Assiniboia; Joseph Wawrykow, Gimli; Harold F. Lawrence, St. Boniface; Herbert Sulkers, St. Clements; S. J. Farmer, Winnipeg; M. Hyman, Winnipeg; and John Queen, Winnipeg.

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS ENDORSING LABOUR CANDIDATES

In addition to the activities of the above-mentioned political parties, the election of labour candidates to municipal councils, school boards, etc., is promoted by these and other organizations, the candidature of such labour representatives being in many instances endorsed by trades and labour councils and similar non-political labour bodies.

In previous reports on Labour Organization in Canada reference has been made to the Communist Party of Canada, the political organization of the Communist movement. In the last provincial election in Manitoba, James Litterick was elected to the legislature as a representative of the Communist Party of Canada for the constituency of Winnipeg.

CANADIAN LABOUR DEFENCE LEAGUE

The Canadian Labour Defence League was formed in 1925, its objects, as stated, being to provide legal defence for all workers arrested and prosecuted for any form of working-class activity and to provide support for the families of prisoners, to stand for freedom of speech, assembly and organization for the working class, etc. The general secretary of the league is A. E. Smith, Room 102, 331 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ont.

THE WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

This organization, which has branches in various cities in the province, is an association of working men and others, established to provide higher non-technical education for workers such as that available to students at the universities. Financial assistance and other support is obtained from labour organizations and from universities. The officers of the association include workmen and university professors.

The movement originated in the Workers' Educational Association of Great Britain, established in 1903, and spread to various countries throughout the world. The first organization was established in Canada at Toronto in 1918. Classes are formed and lectures are given in the centres where branches are established on social and economic problems, literature, etc. Branches similar to the one in Toronto have been established in other cities of Ontario and also in other provinces.

An organization known as the Labour Educational Association of Ontario is referred to in Chapter IX, Federation of Trade Unions.

1. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA

American Federation of Labor is the Recognized Head of the International Labour Movement—Charters Central Organizations and Federal Labour Unions—Maintains a Staff of Organizers in the Dominion—Plan of Organization of the Federation—An Exponent of Organization on Trade Lines—Uniting of Certain Organizations to Form the Committee for Industrial Organization—Provision Made for the Establishment of Departments—International Organizations Maintain Resident Vice-presidents or Other Officials in the Dominion—American Federation of Labor Founded in 1881—Aims and Objects—Principles of the Federation—Revenue—Delegates to Annual Conventions—Departments of the Federation—International Craft Organizations.

In a report dealing with labour organizations in Canada it is considered appropriate that some reference should be made to the central body with which the majority of trade unionists in the Dominion are identified. The American Federation of Labor is the recognized head of the international craft labour movement on the North American continent, and in addition to issuing charters of affiliation to central organizing bodies, it issues certificates of membership to certain classes of wage-earners (federal labour unions) over whom no existing organization claims jurisdiction. When the membership of such a chartered body becomes sufficiently large a central organization may be established, the members of the craft concerned being directly transferred, and the new main body so formed becomes an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. Through its staff of organizers, three of whom are located in the Dominion, the Federation is constantly assisting in establishing new unions, either as branches of an affiliated central organization or as units under its own control. Of the latter, the Federation reported having 1,482 at the close of the year. The plan of organization of the American Federation of Labor, which is a voluntary grouping of self-governing organizations, all having complete autonomy over the craftsmen covered by their respective charters, is founded on a scale which its affiliates consider to be adequate to meet present requirements of organized workers. While the Federation is an exponent of organization on trade lines, it does not oppose the amalgamation of those unions composed of closely allied crafts, such action being given approval when the organizations concerned voluntarily agree to amalgamate. Following the 1935 convention of the Federation, certain organizations, which had favoured the chartering of industrial unions, united and formed the Committee for Industrial Organization, further reference to which will be found in chapter XVII.

Provision is made in the constitution of the American Federation of Labor for the establishment of departments, through which organizations of kindred trades are brought together to deal with matters pertaining to their respective industries. Charters are issued also to state federations and local trades and labour councils. The Federation has always been most active in promoting legislation intended for the improvement of working conditions of that part of its affiliated membership located in the United States, constituting a large number of organized workers, and has on many occasions rendered both moral and financial assistance to affiliated organizations in their efforts to secure improvement in trade conditions. The Federation and its various departments endeavour to adjust differences which arise from time to time between the affiliated organizations on questions of jurisdiction, and in most instances the decisions rendered are respected.

The American Federation of Labor exchanges fraternal convention delegates with the British Trades Union Congress and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and acknowledges the latter as head of the international trade union movement in Canada so far as legislative matters are concerned, paying a per capita tax to the Congress on the membership of its chartered federal and trade unions (those bodies over which no international craft organization claims jurisdiction) located in the Dominion. The authority of the American Federation of Labor to deal with trade matters as they affect international organizations on the North American continent is fully conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which generally accepts the decisions rendered by the Federation. The Congress has materially assisted in the implementation of such decisions by refusing to accept per capita tax or to seat at annual conventions delegates from organizations which had refused to obey the instructions of the Federation. The Congress has on occasion, however, permitted the affiliation of the Canadian membership of international organizations, notwithstanding that they had been suspended by the American Federation of Labor.

All of the more important international labour organizations, including the railroad brotherhoods, the members of which are employed in engine and train service, have local branch unions in Canada. The railroad brotherhoods, unlike the majority of the other organizations with branches in the Dominion, are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Most of the central bodies are craft unions, although some of them, such as the miners, brewery workers and street railway employees, are of an industrial character, embracing in their memberships, nearly, if not all, of the workmen employed in the respective industries. The most numerously represented of the international organizations maintain in the Dominion resident vice-presidents or other officials for the purpose of looking after the interests of their Canadian membership and of reporting to their respective headquarters on trade conditions and the operations of their local branch unions in Canada, besides having accounts with Canadian banks through which their financial transactions in the Dominion are conducted. These officials keep in close touch with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which renders assistance when required in promoting the cause of the various international labour bodies operating in the Dominion. Some of the international organizations have in Canada dues collecting agencies, the monies so collected being deposited in a bank in the locality where the agency is operating and disbursements made to the Canadian membership.

The American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburgh, Pa., on November 15, 1881, its original name being the Organized Trades and Labour Unions of the United States and Canada. At the annual convention held in Columbus, Ohio, in 1886, the present name was chosen.

The organization, as its name implies, is a federated body, and includes in its membership most of the important international unions. As stated previously, the Federation issues charters to national and international unions, trade departments, state federations, city central councils and such local trade and federal labour unions as do not fall within the jurisdiction of any existing international bodies.

AIMS AND OBJECTS

The aims and objects of the American Federation of Labor, are stated in the constitution as follows:—

1. The object of this federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local trade and labour unions, and closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labour unions in every city, and the further combinations of such bodies into state, territorial or provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.
2. The establishment of national and international trade unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.
3. The establishment of departments composed of national or international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry, and which departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.
4. PRINCIPLES OF THE FEDERATION

The platform of principles of the Federation contains the following declarations:—

1. The abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime.
2. Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.
3. Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of injunction process in labour disputes.
4. A work day of not more than eight hours in the twenty-four-hour day.

19. We favour a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the Government, with such regulations and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

The American Federation of Labor maintains a staff of regular organizers, three of whom are resident in Canada. It also has many volunteer organizers, a number of whom are located in the Dominion.

REVENUE OF THE FEDERATION

The revenue of the Federation is derived from a per capita tax upon the fully paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, as follows: from international or national trade unions, a per capita tax of one cent per member per month; from local trade unions and federal labour unions, thirty-five cents per member per month, twelve and one-half cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of a strike or lockout, unless otherwise ordered by the Executive Council; from all directly affiliated local unions, 25 per cent of the total initiation fee received by the local union from the individual (but in no case is the amount received by the American Federation of Labor to be less than $1); and from central and state bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly.

DELEGATES TO ANNUAL CONVENTIONS

Delegates are not entitled to a seat in the annual convention unless the tax of their organization, as provided for in section 1, Article X, has been paid in full to the August 31 preceding the Convention.

Any organization affiliated with the Federation not paying its per capita tax on or before the 15th of each month is notified of the fact by the Secretary-treasurer of the Federation, and if at the end of three months it is still in arrears it shall become suspended from membership by the Federation, and can be reinstated only by a vote of the convention when such arrearages are paid in full, as provided in section 2 of Article X.

COMMITTEE ON ADJUSTMENT

At each convention of the Federation a committee on adjustment is appointed for the purpose of investigating and endeavouring to bring about amicable settlements of jurisdictional disputes between unions.

CENTRAL ORGANIZATIONS CHARTERED

Under the constitution of the American Federation of Labor only one central organization of a particular trade or calling is granted a charter of affiliation, no recognition being given to dual national or international unions, i.e., bodies covering the same calling, without the written consent of the existing affiliated unions whose jurisdiction is involved.

DEPARTMENTS OF THE FEDERATION

In the development of its organization the American Federation of Labor has established departments covering four leading groups of industries, viz., building trades, metal trades, railroad employees and union label trades. Each department comprises organizations affiliated with the Federation, and has power to manage and finance its own business. These departments are charged with watching the interests of the industries represented, and may initiate or assist movements designed to promote the welfare of the workers. Local councils of these departments are in operation in various cities, and the union branches of the respective trades are thus brought together for joint action, their conduct, of course, to be in conformity with the general policy of the American Federation of Labor. Each department is entitled to send a delegate to the annual convention of the Federation.

The Building and Construction Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor is composed of nineteen organizations, the combined membership, according to individual returns received in the department, being 1,377,125, comprised in 10,502 local unions. There are nine state building trades councils and 416 local building trades councils, ten of which were operating in Canadian cities.

The combined membership of the fourteen international organizations included in the Metal Trades Department is 780,243, comprised in 6,303 local unions. This department has 53 local metal trades councils, one being located in the Dominion.

There are nine international organizations comprising the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor, with a combined membership of 599,196. The railway system federations under charter number 95, four of which are composed of employees on the following Canadian railways: Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Northern Alberta, and the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. Division No. 4, embracing the shop mechanics employed on all Canadian railway lines, also operates under charter from the Railway Employees' Department.

In the Union Label Trades Department there are 48 national or international organizations. Charters have been issued by this department to 223 union label leagues, of which six are located in the following Canadian cities: Cap de la Madeleine, P.Q.; Montreal, P.Q.; Toronto, Ont.; Kitchener, Ont.; Winnipeg, Man.; Vancouver, B.C.

Besides the American Federation of Labor and its 103 directly affiliated organizations, there are a number of other international labour organizations operating in North America. The most important of these are the railroad brotherhoods, which embrace workers employed in engine and train service and which comprise one of the strongest labour groups on the continent.

Twelve new names appear in the list of international organizations having locals or members in Canada, viz., American Federation of Actors, International Airline Pilots' Association, Committee for Industrial Organization, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, Laundry Workers' International Union, International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, American Newspaper Guild, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, Textile Workers' Organizing Committee of the C.I.O., and and International Woodworkers of America.

The names of the following organizations have been dropped from the present list, their local unions having either passed out of existence or amalgamated with other bodies: Building Service Employees' International Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, and United Textile Workers of America.

With the addition of these 12 bodies, the names of 155 organizations appear in chapter XX, table No. 3. In the list are included the names of unions chartered by the American Federation of Labor, as well as those of other central labour bodies, concerning which information was received in the department.

Apart from the organizations referred to in this chapter, there are a number of other labour bodies operating on the North American continent, but as they did not send in returns, and because they are not considered to be important factors in the labour movement, their activities being confined to a comparatively small area, their names are not included in this report. A large majority of the organizations listed in chapter XX are what are commonly known as craft unions, 103 of which are in direct affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Of the 155 organizations whose names appear in chapter XX, table No. 3, 95 have extended their jurisdiction into Canada by establishing one or more branches or having members resident in the Dominion. The American Federation of Labor has also granted charters to 12 local unions in Canada, there being no central organization covering the workpeople so organized, making 96 international unions with Canadian affiliation, 9 more than the number recorded in 1936. Of the international organizations operating in Canada five are not affiliated with the A.F. of L., and 9 others have been suspended by that body for failing to comply with its decisions.

The Industrial Workers of the World, an international industrial union, but with no connection with the labour movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor, has a number of local unions in Canada and is discussed in a subsequent chapter.

Fifty-five of the affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the Federation itself, have given recognition to the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (which is discussed in the following chapter) as head of the internationally organized labour movement of the Dominion by affiliating the whole of their Canadian memberships with that body. The Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen maintains its affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada for its Canadian members, although it was suspended from the A.F. of L. in 1928 over a question of jurisdiction. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, International Fur Workers' Union, the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, and the United Mine Workers of America are in a somewhat similar position, in that they maintain their affiliation with the Congress although they have been suspended from the American Federation of Labor. This makes a total of 62 international organizations identified with the Canadian body.

II. TRADES AND LABOUR CONGRESS OF CANADA

Trades and Labour Congress of Canada Dates its Origin from 1873—Functions—Constitution Changed in 1934—Objects of the Congress—Preamble to the Constitution—Platform of Principles—Representation and Membership—Revenue—Representatives at the International Labour Conference—Attendance at the 1937 Convention—Membership, Receipts and Expenditures for Past Twenty Years—Officers of the Congress—Provincial Executive Committees—Fraternal Delegates.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada dates its origin from 1873, when a convention of trade union representatives was held in Toronto. Although meetings were held during the next two years, it was not until 1883 that the first thoroughly representative congress of trade unions in the Dominion of Canada was held. This meeting was convened in Toronto, at the call of the Toronto Trades and Labour Council, and was attended by 47 delegates, representing twenty-seven labour bodies. There was a lapse of three years between the first and second meetings of the Congress but since 1885 conventions have been held regularly each year, the last convention, held in Ottawa, September 13-18, 1937, being recorded as the fifty-third. In 1902 Knights of Labour Assemblies were excluded from affiliation by the amending of the constitution. National unions were also excluded where there were internationals of the same craft in existence.

The main function of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is to protect the interest of the workers in legislative matters, but it has on occasion rendered both moral and financial assistance to organized workers identified with the international trade union movement. The Congress unconditionally accepts the prerogative of the American Federation of Labor in adjudicating upon trade union and jurisdictional disputes, and concedes, also, to the Federation the authority to charter federal labour unions in Canada other than those composed of public service employees and those for which there is no international craft organization.

At the convention of the Congress held at Toronto in 1934 the constitution was amended so as to permit the issuing of two classes of charters for local unions, viz.: (a) those issued as federal units covering employees engaged in industrial activities, such charters to be issued only when application for same has been approved by the local trades and labour council, if one is in existence, and (b) civic employees units.

OBJECTS OF THE CONGRESS

The objects of the Trades and Labour Congress, as adopted by the 1921 convention, are as follows:—

- (a) To encourage and form such organizations of workers as conform to its rules and regulations;
- (b) To establish city or district central councils based upon the strict recognition of the autonomy of each affiliated organization and the promotion and advancement of such bodies;
- (c) To establish and maintain a congress with suitable headquarters at Ottawa and subsidiary executive committees or federations of labour in each of the provinces of Canada for the purpose of assisting each other;
- (d) To aid and encourage the sale of union labelled goods;
- (e) To influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour and to secure legislation in the interests of the working people;
- (f) To further the spirit of international trade unionism; and
- (g) Generally for such purposes as may best advance the interests of working people.

PREAMBLE TO THE CONSTITUTION

Whereas it is expedient that an organization shall be effected for the purpose of promoting legislation in the interest of organized labour in the Dominion of Canada and to assist in safeguarding the social and economic standards of the workers; therefore, be it resolved that we, the representatives of organized labour in the Dominion of Canada, assembled in convention, form ourselves into a body to be known as "The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada" for the purpose above specified.

REPRESENTATION AND MEMBERSHIP

The basis of representation of affiliated bodies at annual or other conventions is: from local branch unions in Canada of international and national organizations and trade unions directly chartered by the Congress, one delegate for the first 100 members or less and one for each additional 100 members or the majority fraction thereof. International and national organizations which have affiliated their entire membership in the Dominion are each entitled to one additional delegate, who must be elected from their Canadian memberships. Trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour are entitled to three delegates each. Article III of the constitution of the Trades and Labour Congress, governing membership and charters, is as follows:—

Sec. 1.—The membership of the Trades and Labour Congress shall consist of such trades and labour bodies as are hereinafter defined and conform to its rules and regulations.

Sec. 2.—Any international union holding a charter from the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to affiliate its entire Canadian membership; and any local unit in Canada of an international union chartered by the American Federation of Labor which is not so affiliated shall be entitled to direct membership in this Congress.

Sec. 3.—Charters or certificates of affiliation, bearing the signatures of the president and secretary-treasurer of the Congress and its seal, may be granted by the executive council of the Congress to any body of workers in Canada who are not eligible for membership in a recognized international or national union.

Sec. 4.—The Congress shall form and charter Trades and Labour Councils and Provincial Federations of Labour, composed of such organizations as are entitled to membership in the Congress.

Sec. 5.—No international or national union other than those already enumerated in sections 2, 3 and 4 shall be admitted to membership except by two-thirds vote of the annual convention of this Congress, but in no case shall any organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with that of an international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.

Sec. 6.—The fee for a charter and supplies for Provincial Federations of Labour, Trades and Labour Councils and such labour unions as may be formed and chartered direct by this Congress shall be $10, and each organization so chartered shall be supplied with an official seal.

Sec. 7.—The executive council shall have power, apart from any other power enumerated in this constitution, by a majority vote of its members, given either at a meeting of the council or otherwise, to suspend from membership any affiliated or chartered body which in the opinion of the executive has violated either the letter or spirit of the constitution, or which has, or the officers of which have: (a) encouraged or advocated secession from international unions or assisted in forming independent or dual organizations; (b) refused to join or affiliate with an international union of its trade or calling when so ordered by the executive. Such suspension shall debar any organization from all rights and benefits of membership in this Congress until the next annual convention, when the suspension may be made permanent and the charter revoked or affiliation cancelled by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote. Any organization may also be suspended from membership or its charter revoked or its membership cancelled upon a motion introduced at any regular convention and adopted by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote.

REVENUE OF THE CONGRESS

The revenue of the Congress, apart from the fee charged for charters supplied to such bodies as are entitled to them, is derived from a tax of 18 cents per member per year from international and national organizations and from unions chartered direct by the Congress, 36 cents per member from trades and labour councils, and a lump payment of $10 per annum from provincial federations of labour. The Congress owns the building in Ottawa in which the head office is located, and which is valued at $40,000, the management being vested in a board of trustees composed of the executive council.

REPRESENTATIVES AT THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

On the nomination of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, Mr. R. J. Tallon, secretary-treasurer, and Mr. D. W. Morrison, vice-president, attended the twenty-first session of the International Labour Conference in Geneva, Switzerland, June 3-23, 1937, as delegate and technical adviser, respectively, representing the workers of Canada.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1937 CONVENTION

The fifty-third annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was held at Ottawa, Ont., September 13-18, 1937. Credentials were received from 477 delegates; 47 represented international and national unions which had affiliated the whole of their Canadian memberships with the Congress, 4 represented federations of labour and provincial associations, 38 represented trades and labour councils, 14 represented three divisions of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, 372 represented local unions and 2 were fraternal delegates, representing the British Trades Union Congress and the American Federation of Labor.

The report of the secretary-treasurer, which named the 62 international and 5 national unions, as well as the federations, trades and labour councils and local unions, which had paid per capita tax, showed that the total membership of the Congress at the close of the fiscal year (August 31, 1937) was 131,105, comprised in 1,735 local unions, indicating an increase in members of 18,133 over the year 1936 and an increase of 111 in the number of unions. The secretary pointed out that "this membership was based on the actual per capita tax received and does not include those who, while still active members of affiliated organizations, are relieved, because of unemployment or other causes, from payment of their regular contributions." The international and national bodies in affiliation with the Congress are indicated thus () in the tables in a subsequent chapter giving the membership of the respective organizations.

The figures for the membership of the Congress as compiled from the returns received from the affiliated bodies are 60,042 greater than those reported to the convention, the explanation being that not all the organizations supplied their paid-up memberships but included all members carried on their books, for some of whom no per capita tax was paid.

The total receipts for the fiscal year, including balance on hand, amounted to $33,232.68, while expenditures totalled $22,570.48, leaving a balance of $10,662.20. The secretary-treasurer also submitted a report of the trustees of the Congress headquarters, the figures for which were included in the above totals, which showed receipts of $2,777 and expenditures for equipment and maintenance of $2,044.16, leaving a surplus of $732.84.

The following table shows the total paid-up membership and receipts and expenditures of the Congress for the past twenty years:—

An affiliated membership of 191,147 was reported for the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Of the 1,828 local unions reported to be in affiliation with the Congress, all of which were circularized by the department, only 1,622 made returns, showing a combined membership of 204,966. The audit referred to on page 8, revealed a paid-up membership of 145,966 as at December 31, 1937. It is generally maintained that the percentage of membership in arrears usually runs to a considerable figure, in some instances as high as 25 per cent. This would appear to be borne out by the aforementioned audit.

III. ALL-CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

Established in March, 1927—Preliminary Meeting Held in Toronto, November 22-23, 1926—Eight Organizations Represented at Opening Session—Preamble to Constitution—Purposes of the Congress—Accepts Industrial Unionism—Membership and Representation—Attendance at 1937 Convention—Membership of the Congress—Officers of the Congress.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour was established in March, 1927, at a conference of representatives of national and independent unions which was held in Montreal. A preliminary meeting of those interested in the national movement took place in Toronto on November 22-23, 1926, at which gathering it was arranged to hold a convention in Montreal on March 16, 1927. At this meeting committees were appointed to call the convention and to draft a constitution. On February 4, 1927, an invitation over the signatures of C. J. Whitley, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour (an organization formed in 1902, when the Trades and Labour Congress by amending its constitution excluded from its membership Knights of Labour Assemblies and national unions where there were internationals of the same craft in existence), and M. M. MacLean, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

At the opening session of the Montreal convention there were 107 delegates present, representing the following eight organizations: Canadian Federation of Labour; Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; One Big Union; Mine Workers' Union of Canada; Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; Canadian Electrical Trades Union; Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada; and the Canadian Federation of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers. The organization meeting was presided over by D. Giroux (of the Canadian Federation of Labour) and A. R. Mosher (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees) as joint chairmen.

The conference adopted a resolution which is embodied in the preamble to the constitution, establishing the new organization under the title "All-Canadian Congress of Labour."

PREAMBLE TO CONSTITUTION

Whereas we, the representatives of national and independent unions in Canada, meeting in convention in the city of Montreal, P.Q., on the 16th to the 19th of March, 1937, are convinced that—

(a) the Canadian labour movement must be freed from the reactionary influence of United States-controlled unions;

(b) Canadian workers require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard;

(c) while the workers under the present system cannot obtain the full value of their labour, it is nevertheless necessary to strive at all times to procure higher real wages and better conditions of labour;

(d) it is necessary to promote among the workers a thorough understanding of working-class economics;

Therefore, be it resolved that a central body composed of the national and independent unions of Canada be here established to give expression to these aims and objects.

The Canadian Federation of Labour having decided to merge its identity with the new congress, a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs, and in due course it passed out of existence.

PURPOSES OF THE CONGRESS

The purposes of the All-Canadian Congress, as set forth in Article II of the constitution, are as follows:—

Article 11.—PURPOSES.—The Congress shall promote the interests of its affiliated organizations and strive to improve the economic and social conditions of the workers by:

(a) That organization of the workers in autonomous bodies for economic action, i.e., organization in the industrial field.

(b) Assisting the workers, through education, to realize the necessity of working-class political action.

(c) Furthering such legislation as shall be of immediate benefit to the workers, and which tends to increase their social and political power.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE CONGRESS

In 1930 the All-Canadian Congress of Labour opened new offices in the building owned by the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, located at 230 Laurier Ave. W., Ottawa.

ACCEPTS INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

The executive board of the Congress in its report to the delegates of the second convention recommended that an intensive campaign be conducted by affiliated bodies amongst the workers to organize them on an industrial or class basis, and that steps be taken to supplement industrial by political action with the ultimate object of the establishment of a national labour party. This recommendation was endorsed by the convention.

MEMBERSHIP AND REPRESENTATION

The membership of the Congress is derived from (a) affiliated national unions and (b) chartered independent local unions. Charters are also issued to central councils composed of delegates from national or independent unions identified with the Congress, but such bodies have no representation at conventions of the Congress, nor are they required to pay per capita tax. The representation at annual or special conventions is as follows: (a) affiliated national unions, two delegates representing the general executive board and one delegate from each local unit; (b) independent local unions, one delegate each.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour reported a total affiliated membership of 28,048. Of the 267 local unions reported to be in affiliation with the Congress, all of which were circularized by the department, only 240 made returns, showing a combined membership of 22,542. The audit referred to on page 8 revealed a paid-up membership of 19,335 as at December 31, 1937. It is generally maintained that the percentage of membership in arrears usually runs to a considerable figure, in some instances as high as 25 per cent. This would appear to be borne out by the aforementioned audit.

The Canadian Federation of Labour was established in October, 1936, following a disagreement among the executive officers of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. As a result, one group decided to sever relations with the Congress and set up a separate organization. The name selected for the new body was the Canadian Federation of Labour, which was the name of a national organization formed in 1902 but merged with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour when that body was formed in 1927. A provisional set of officers was appointed to direct the work of the Federation until a convention could be called.

PURPOSES OF THE FEDERATION

Per capita fees, and the portion of the initiation fee stipulated in section I hereof payable by local unions, shall be remitted to the secretary-treasurer of the Federation monthly, on forms supplied by the Federation.

3. Fifty per cent of the amount of per capita fees remitted for members of local unions directly chartered by the Federation shall be applied to the official magazine account, and each such member shall be entitled to receive a copy of each regular issue of the magazine.

V. ONE BIG UNION

Established in Calgary, Alta., in March, 1919—Events Leading up to Formation of One Big Union—Second Meeting Held on June 11, 1919—Constitution Amended—Preamble to Constitution—Affiliation—Membership of the O.B.U.—Officers.

The One Big Union, or, as it is more commonly known, the O.B.U., was established in Calgary, Alta., in March, 1919. In September of the previous year the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada held its annual convention in the city of Quebec. Several resolutions were submitted to this meeting by delegates from unions in Western Canada, but the proposals contained in these resolutions did not meet with the approval of a majority of the delegates present and were rejected. Subsequently it was decided by those who had submitted the resolutions that they would recommend to the labour unions of the four western provinces the desirability of holding a delegate conference previous to the next convention of the Congress for the purpose of giving the western membership an opportunity to formulate a progressive policy and by such united action on their part to secure the support of the eastern delegates. At the instigation of the British Columbia Federation of Labour (an organization which has since passed out of existence), a body working under a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, a conference of labour representatives was held at Calgary in March, 1919, at which there were present 237 delegates from western labour bodies and two from Ontario. Of various resolutions presented, one favoured the immediate formation of an industrial union. This proposal was adopted, as was also a recommendation that the existing branches of international organizations should sever their connection with such bodies. It was decided that a referendum on the question be submitted to the entire Canadian trade union membership, and also that a proposed plan of the new organization, which was named the "One Big Union," be presented at the same time. Coupled with the ballot on the One Big Union question was one asking for a vote on a general strike to take place on June 1, 1919, to establish a six-hour working day. On June 11, 1919, a second meeting was held at Calgary, at which it was announced that a large majority of the western membership had voted in favour of the One Big Union. The constitution which had been adopted at the March conference was amended at the June meeting. The preamble to the constitution, setting forth the desire "to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs," is as follows:—

Modern industrial society is divided into two classes, those who possess and not produce, and those who produce and not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity, there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible, and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labour power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labour power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.

As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands, as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labour power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self-defence, they are further compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether they seek it or not.

The One Big Union, therefore, seeks to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs and calls upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex, or craft into a workers' organization, so that they may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours of work, etc., and prepare themselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by production for use.

A more detailed account of the formation and early development of the One Big Union is to be found in the reports on Labour Organization in Canada for 1919 and 1920.

AFFILIATION

Delegates from the One Big Union took part in the formation of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927. The One Big Union remained an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour until 1929, when it was expelled by the executive of the latter body for non-payment of per capita tax. At the annual convention of the A.C.C.L. at Winnipeg in November of the same year the O.B.U. was re-admitted upon payment of a portion of the affiliation fees for the period in delinquency. It was again dropped from membership in the Congress in 1930, but re-admitted in 1932. Following a disagreement among the executive of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in September, 1936, the O.B.U. withdrew and later affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE ONE BIG UNION

At the close of 1919, the year the organization was established, the membership was reported at 41,150, comprised in 101 local units. In the intervening years the O.B.U. has lost a considerable number of members as well as locals, the membership at the close of 1937 as reported by the general secretary being 23,509, comprised in 40 local units.

The O.B.U. has one central council, located in Winnipeg, which is listed in Chapter XII (Trades and Labour Councils).

OFFICERS OF THE ONE BIG UNION

VI. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

Industrial Workers of the World Stands in Direct Contrast to the Trade Union Movement as Represented by the American Federation of Labor—An Advocate of Revolutionary Industrial Unionism—Its Objective is the Abolition of the Wage System—Originally Designed to be Political as Well as an Industrial Organization—Principles of the I.W.W.—The I.W.W. in Canada—First Canadian Administration Established—Powers—Membership—Officers of the Organization.

The Industrial Workers of the World, an organization which stands in direct contrast to the trade union movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor (referred to in an earlier chapter), was formed in 1905. At that time it proclaimed itself to be the advocate of what it termed "revolutionary industrial unionism" and had as its objective the abolition of the wage system. So far as Canada was concerned, it is understood that the last of the local branches of the I.W.W., as it is commonly called, passed out of existence in 1915, and that units of the organization were not re-established until 1922. Considerable publicity was given to the I.W.W. from 1917 to 1920 by reason of court proceedings instituted against various members in different parts of the United States. The charge was one of unlawful and felonious conspiracy to prevent and delay the execution of certain laws of the United States.

Originally the I.W.W. was designed to be a political as well as an industrial organization but in 1906 a split occurred over the selection of certain candidates in a Colorado election. In that year the president of the organization was voted out of office at a regular convention and the position was abolished. A second split occurred in 1908 when DeLeon, leader of the socialist wing, and his followers were expelled. These expelled members subsequently formed what for some years was known as the Detroit faction of the I.W.W., which adhered to the original platform of the parent body. In 1915 this faction became known as the Workers' International Industrial Union, but in 1924, by a vote of the members, the organization was dissolved.

PRINCIPLES OF THE I.W.W.

The principles of the I.W.W., as set forth in the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1908, are as follows:—

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among the millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interest of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto: "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system."

It is the historic mission of the working class to do away with capitalism. The army of production must be organized, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

The early history of the I.W.W. has been recorded in previous issues of this report.

THE I.W.W. IN CANADA

One of the first organizations in Canada to affiliate with the Industrial Workers of the World was the Western Federation of Miners but this organization withdrew in 1910 and was granted affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Other local branches of the I.W.W. continued to operate in Canada until 1915, when the last remaining branch ceased to function. For a short time nearing the close of the World War the I.W.W. was declared an unlawful organization by the Dominion Government but this ban was removed on April 2, 1919.

When the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an independent body, decided to affiliate with the Red International of Labour Unions, a certain number of the members objected; some of them subsequently joined the I.W.W. and these were responsible for the formation in 1922 of the Vancouver branch and the re-establishment of the organization in Canada. Since that time the I.W.W. has maintained a number of locals in the Dominion.

FIRST CANADIAN ADMINISTRATION ESTABLISHED

As the number of locals and membership of the I.W.W. in Canada increased an agitation was started for the setting-up of a Canadian administration. This agitation became so persistent that at a general meeting held in Port Arthur, Ont., on September 20, 1931, a resolution was adopted in favour of the establishment of a Canadian administration of the Industrial Workers of the World. The provisions of the plan were submitted to the general convention of the I.W.W., held in Chicago, November 8-19, 1931. The meeting decided to refer the subject to a referendum vote of the membership, which was held early in 1932. As a result of the vote a Canadian administration was established, the powers conferred upon it being as follows:—

(a) The officials of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W. shall be a secretary-treasurer, who shall be officially designated "Canadian secretary-treasurer," and an executive board which shall be officially designated "Canadian Executive Board." The duties and powers of the above-named officials shall bear the same relation to the Canadian membership as those of the present general officials of the I.W.W. under the present constitution, with such exceptions as may be hereafter designated or adopted by general conventions of the I.W.W. or emergency rulings of the general administration of the I.W.W.

(b) The Canadian administration shall have the power to determine all initiation fees, dues and assessments under its jurisdiction.

(c) The Canadian administration shall be empowered to publish literature and establish a press. All literature and press policies shall be sanctioned by the general administration of the I.W.W.

The Canadian administration is under the supervision of the general administration, whose head office is in Chicago, and from which the Canadian administration shall purchase all supplies, due books and due stamps and shall pay 2 cents per due stamp and 15 cents for cash due book, plus duty and shipping charges, but the general administration may at its discretion authorize the Canadian section to manufacture such supplies as are needed.

With the object of bringing back into the organization unemployed members and of retaining the present out-of-work members, it was decided to reduce the initiation fee to twenty cents and the monthly dues to five cents, those who were employed to pay the initiation fee of $1 and monthly dues of twenty-five cents. For the purpose of raising funds to conduct organization work, a twenty-five cent stamp was decided upon which could be sold to all persons whether or not they were members of the I.W.W.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE I.W.W.

The Industrial Workers of the World at the close of 1905, the year of its inception, claimed a membership of 400,000. For the last few years no particulars as to the number of locals or membership has been received from the main organization. However, returns have been received regularly from the Canadian administration, and at the close of 1937, the membership was reported as 1,156 comprised in 6 local unions.

OFFICERS OF THE ORGANIZATIONS

The chief officer of the Canadian administration, the headquarters of which are located at 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont., is Joseph Poulin, secretary-treasurer.

According to the last information received in the department, the general secretary of the central organization was Joseph Wagner, 2422 North Halstead St., Chicago, Ill.

VII. FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

One National Catholic Union in Existence Prior to 1902—Union Accepts Social Doctrine of Roman Catholic Church and Admits a Chaplain—Formation of Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada—Aim of the Federation—Constitution Amended in 1937—Chaplain for Each Catholic Body—Federations, Central Councils and Secretariats—Canada Only British Country Having Roman Catholic Unions—International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Convention of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada—Membership of the Federation—President Technical Adviser at Geneva—Officers of the Federation.

So far as the records of the department show, there was one Catholic union in existence prior to 1902, the year in which the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada amended its constitution, whereby Knights of Labour Assemblies and national unions were denied recognition where international organizations covering the same craft were in existence. This union was composed of shoe workers in Quebec city. In 1901, following the adjustment of a dispute in the shoe industry in which this Catholic union was involved, the members had accepted the social doctrine of the Roman Catholic church and admitted a chaplain (a member of the clergy). In subsequent years many other National Catholic unions were established in the province of Quebec, all of which accepted for their guidance the declaration of Pope Leo XIII, contained in an encyclical, Rerum Novarum, on "The Conditions of the Working Classes," dated May 15, 1891. This encyclical declared: "These workingmen's associations should be organized and governed as to furnish the best and most suitable means for attempting what they aimed at, that is to say, for helping each individual member to better his condition to the utmost in body, soul and property. It is clear that they must pay special and chief attention to the duties of religion and morality, and that their internal discipline must be guided very strictly by these weighty considerations; otherwise, they would lose wholly their special character, and end by becoming little better than those societies which take no account whatever of religion." The provisions of this encyclical were subsequently proclaimed by Pope Pius X as fundamental rules for workingmen's associations, and further amplified by Pope Pius XI in his encyclical Quadragesimo Anno, dated May 23, 1931.

FORMATION OF FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

As the National Catholic syndicate movement grew, there developed an agitation for a central organization in which the work of the various unions could be co-ordinated. Accordingly a meeting of representatives from National Catholic unions in the province of Quebec was held in Quebec city, September, 1918, there being 27 unions represented. A report submitted to this meeting showed that there were in existence 41 National Catholic unions (bodies to which none but adherents of the Roman Catholic faith are admitted) and seventeen other national unions which were termed neutral, membership being open to workers of all denominations. These latter unions, it is understood, are now non-existent, their disappearance possibly being accounted for in part by the fact that, though National Catholic unions are designed ostensibly for adherents of the Roman Catholic faith, provision is made for the admittance of non-Roman Catholics as associate members who may vote but are not eligible for office. It is further understood that when the non-Roman Catholic membership of a union reaches fifty the members may form a non-Roman Catholic section of the National Catholic body and elect their own officers. Following the first meeting in 1918, representatives of the National Catholic unions met regularly each year, and in 1921, at a convention held in Hull, with 220 delegates in attendance, a central organization was established under the name of Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, and a set of rules adopted. The full text of the principles and laws of the Federation, which became effective on January 1, 1922, were published in full in the report on Labour Organizations in Canada for 1921.

AIM OF THE FEDERATION

The aim of the Federation and the means to secure its fulfilment are set forth in the following sections of the constitution.

Article 3.—The Federation has for its aim to promote and safeguard the general interests of Catholic syndicalism in Canada.

In order to reach this end, the F.C.W.C. proposes:—

1. To definitely establish a general plan according to which Catholic syndicalism in Canada shall be developed, and to pursue the methodical application of the same;
2. To create and maintain in this country a concerted movement of Catholic syndicalism which, while allowing the various groups their autonomy, would bind them by federative bonds, permitting to defend and develop in common the professional, economic, patriotic and religious interests of Catholic workers in Canada;
3. To organize a general propaganda in favour of Catholic syndicalism. This propaganda will be made especially through labour newspapers, salaried organizers and workingmen's research clubs;
4. To work out the legislation asked for by the mass of Catholic workers in Canada;
5. To be used as an intermediate agent between the federated groups, whether it is a question of mutual aid or of dispute to be terminated;
6. To represent the federated organizations whenever and in whatever manner the general interest may demand it:
 - (a) before the public powers;
 - (b) before such institutions or organizations, whether Canadian or foreign, with which it may seem proper to maintain relations;
7. To create as they are needed all services recognized to be necessary to the federated organizations;
8. To organize or favour all institutions of general interest likely to defend the Catholic workers or to help them;
9. The F.C.W.C. can affiliate with no political party whatever.

CONSTITUTION AMENDED IN 1937

The constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada was amended at the annual meeting held at Jonquiere, P.Q., September 12-15, 1937. The amendment provided for the setting up of a bureau comprising the executive committee, which is made up of the president, vice-presidents, treasurer and secretary, and one representative of each of the federations and of each central council affiliated with the Federation. In future the bureau will direct the affairs of the Federation which power was formerly vested in the executive committee.

A CHAPLAIN FOR EACH CATHOLIC BODY

The constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers provides for the appointment of a general chaplain, to be selected by the religious authorities. The section governing the powers of the chaplain reads as follows:—

The general chaplain is by right a member of all congresses of the federation and of the federal bureau. He may attend the meeting of all committees formed by the federation or send a representative. He exercises, in deliberations, the same rights as those exercised by delegates or members belonging to the congress whereat such discussions take place, and is subject, like them, to the usual rules of procedure.

The chaplain does not vote. The general chaplain may attend the meetings and take part in the proceedings of any organization affiliated with the federation.

The chaplain depends solely, in the exercise of his functions, on the religious authorities by which he was appointed.

The general chaplain has the right to give his personal opinion on any question, like all delegates; but his proper function is to represent the church among the Catholic syndicated workmen. It is for him to state and recall, whenever it is needed, the Catholic principles and doctrines, and he only fills his mission when he asks the congress and the committee to make their resolutions and conduct conform to the Catholic principles and doctrine.

The general chaplain may demand that a resolution which, in his judgment, would affect Catholic morals or the teachings of the church be submitted to the religious authorities and approved by them before being put in force.

The general chaplain of the federation has charge of the superior interests of the souls, of society and of religion. He is entitled, on the part of the delegates, to all the consideration and respect which are due to the religious authorities which he represents.

Each delegate body and local national Catholic syndicate also has a chaplain, appointed by the religious authorities, whose powers are similar to those of the general chaplain for the Federation of Catholic Workers.

FEDERATIONS, CENTRAL COUNCILS AND SECRETARIATS

Like the non-sectarian trade unions, the National Catholic unions of closely allied and particular trades have established federations (delegate bodies referred to in a subsequent chapter of this report). Central councils, corresponding to the trades and labour councils of the non-sectarian movement, have been established in the larger centres of the province of Quebec. In 1920 there was formed in the city of Quebec the secretariat of National Catholic syndicates, which was designed to have charge of the various matters affecting the activities and development of the local organizations. Since that time other secretariats have been established in Montreal, Three Rivers, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke, St. Hyacinthe and the district of Ottawa. The Montreal secretariat publishes La Vie Syndicale, the official organ of the National Catholic unions in that jurisdiction.

CANADA ONLY BRITISH COUNTRY HAVING ROMAN CATHOLIC UNIONS

According to available information, Canada is the only British country in which there are trade unions or syndicates designed chiefly for adherents of the Roman Catholic church, and with two exceptions all such syndicates are in the province of Quebec. At one time there was in Great Britain an organization known as the Catholic Federation, which was composed of Roman Catholics generally for particular Catholic purposes, and included in its membership adherents of the faith who might be trade unionists. Besides this body there was also in England the National Conference of Catholic Trade Unionists, which was composed exclusively of Roman Catholic members of trade unions, but in both cases these trade unionists were supposed to confine their activities to defending Roman Catholic interests inside the existing non-sectarian trade unions. In 1930 information was received in the department to the effect that both of the organizations referred to above had made several attempts to function, but the Roman Catholics in Great Britain would not sever their connection with the regular trade unions and no religious difficulty was experienced. As a result of the stand taken by these trade unionists, it was reported, the two English organizations gradually died out.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

Through the efforts of Bishop Katteler, assisted by the clergy, Catholic trade unions (or Christian Unions, as they are called in Europe) were established in Germany about seventy years ago. Since that time the Christian trade union movement has spread to other European countries, there now being central federated bodies of such unions in Austria, Belgium, Spain, France, Hungary, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia. These various organizations are brought together in the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, which was established at The Hague in June, 1920. The Christian Trade Internationals operating in the various countries mentioned embrace the following classes of Workers: building workers; factory and transport workers; printers; woodworkers; clothing workers; agricultural workers; metal workers; miners; railway and tramway employees; postal employees; tobacco workers; textile workers; food and drink trades employees; public services employees; and general workers.

OBJECTS OF THE FEDERATION

The objects of the Federation are set forth in the by-laws as follows:—

- (a) Defend the workers' interest on the basis of the principles set forth in Article II, in the economic field, and specially in the field of international organizations of labour, wages, working conditions and labour legislation;
- (b) Favour the interests of the organization of affiliated confederations;
- (c) Carry on propaganda in favour of the Christian syndicalist movement in the various countries where it does not yet exist, and promote the affiliation on a Christian basis of organizations which are not yet affiliated;
- (d) Encourage mutual financial support between the affiliated confederations.

Article II of the statutes of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions sets forth that—"The confederation adopts as a basis Christian principles. It therefore affirms that economic and social life implies the collaboration of all children of the same people. It therefore repudiates violence and class strife on the part of the employers as well as on that of the workers. The confederation reckons the present economical and social order is on essential points in contradiction with the Christian spirit. It endeavours to thoroughly modify society in accordance with these principles by following a process of evolution, organic and legal. The confederation has above all for its objects the defence of the interests of the workers and employees from a viewpoint of the economic, social and public order conditions through general collaboration."

In addition to the syndicates of Catholic workpeople identified with the Christian Federation of Trade Unions there are also in affiliation unions composed of Protestants.

In Switzerland the Christian Syndicates are in great part composed of Protestant workers jointly with Catholic workers. In the Netherlands there are two federations, one composed of Catholic syndicates and the other of Protestant unions, and both are in affiliation with the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions.

CONVENTION OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

The seventh convention of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions was held in Paris, France, September 6-8, 1937, under the chairmanship of Mr. Henri Pauwels (Belgium). According to the report of the general secretary, Mr. P. J. S. Serrarens, the total membership of the Federation was 1,508,237.

The table following, as presented in the secretary's report, shows (1) the country; (2) the name of organization; and (3) the membership:—

OFFICERS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The chief officers of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions are: President, J. Zirnheld, Paris, France; general secretary, P. J. S. Serrarens, Utrecht, Holland.

CONVENTION OF FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

The Federation held its sixteenth annual convention at Jonquiere, P.Q., September 12-15, 1937. According to the report of the general secretary, there were in attendance 153 official delegates, representing 50,000 members organized in syndicates affiliated with 11 federations. The delegates decided to establish a federation of study circles for the training of new leaders.

A resolution calling for affiliation with the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions was again laid over until the next meeting.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada reported a total membership of 52,000, comprised in 285 local unions. Of the 285 local unions reported to be in affiliation with the Federation, all of which were circularized by the department, only 166 made returns, showing a combined membership of 36,801. As mentioned on page 8, it is not possible to give audited figures of paid-up membership for the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada.

At the close of the year the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada had in affiliation 23 trade federations and 11 central councils, bodies similar to those operating under the auspices of the non-sectarian unions, which are discussed in a subsequent chapter of this report. Nearly all of the local bodies are also identified with the Federation, either by direct affiliation or through their connection with the trade federations or central councils. The list following indicates the bodies which are understood to be directly or indirectly identified with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada.

During the year 5 federations, 3 central councils and 108 syndicates were organized, while 3 federations, 1 central council and 13 syndicates were dissolved.

VIII. CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

Group of Canadian Labour Bodies, the Jurisdiction of Each Being Confined to the Dominion of Canada—Thirty-one Organizations Included in This Group—Six Central Bodies Listed for the First Time, While Three Have Been Removed—Particulars Regarding the Formation and Objects of Each of the Canadian Central Organizations.

In this chapter is discussed another important group of Canadian labour bodies, the jurisdiction of each being confined to the Dominion of Canada. There are 31 organizations included in this group, 3 more than the number recorded in 1936. Of the total number four are composed of employees in the service of the Dominion Government and one comprises provincial government employees. The latter and two of the former, as well as the National Association of Marine Engineers and the Canadian Seamen's Union, are affiliates of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (discussed in an earlier chapter). Of the remaining bodies in this group 4 are affiliates of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and 7 are affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour, while 12 are not identified with any organization.

The names of six Canadian central bodies are listed for the first time, viz.: Alberta Beet Workers' Union; National Union of Operating Engineers of Canada; New Brunswick Farmer-Labour Union; Fishermen's Federation of Nova Scotia; Pacific Coast Fishermen's Union; Canadian Seamen's Union.

The name of the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters has been removed from the list, all the local unions composing the Federation having decided to join the International Association of Fire Fighters. The Provincial Federation is shown in a subsequent chapter under the heading "Federations."

The names of the National Union of Operating Engineers of Canada and the Canadian Victuallers and Caterers' Union have also been dropped from the list, the former organization now appearing as a directly chartered union of the Canadian Federation of Labour while the unions of the latter body have ceased to function.

The paragraphs following give certain particulars in regard to the formation and the object of each of the Canadian central bodies which have not been referred to in earlier chapters.

The Alberta Beet Workers' Union, although reported to the department for the first time in 1937, was organized in 1934. The organization consists of a number of local branches linked together through a central executive board composed of representatives from each branch. The union is not affiliated with any central body.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada was established in Montreal on March 17, 1929, by representatives of national and local unions of building construction workers affiliated with or chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. The conference declared that (a) the Canadian workers in the building construction industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standards; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; and (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry. This organization is now an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association came into existence in November, 1919, as a result of the desire of the Brussels carpet weavers in Guelph, Peterborough and Toronto to have a uniform scale of wages for the trade in Canada. The Guelph weavers were the only ones then organized, being Local No. 277 of the United Textile Workers of America. As it was claimed that there was no other method by which the trade in Canada could be organized, the Guelph weavers severed their connection with the United Textile Workers and joined with the weavers in Peterborough and Toronto to form the Canadian association.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants developed from the Amalgamated Postal Workers, which came into existence in September, 1918, as a result of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the strike of the postal employees in July of that year was conducted in the east and the settlement accepted by the general officers. The original jurisdiction of the Postal Workers, membership in which was open to all post office employees under the rating of a first-class clerk, was from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to Victoria, B.C., and the intention of its promoters was to amalgamate the associations of postal clerks, railway mail clerks and letter carriers in that territory. An application for a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress was not entertained by the latter body because the organization admitted to membership certain local branches of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, an organization already affiliated with the Congress. At the annual convention of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, held in August, 1921, the name was changed to Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership being extended to all employees of the Dominion Government.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta, which is composed of employees of the provincial Government, was formed on March 19, 1919, being designed, among other things, "to bring about united action and to act on any matter or issue of common interest to the members of the association." In 1923 a vote was taken on the question of the association's affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but the proposal was defeated by a vote of 316 in favour to 426 against. In 1925 another vote was taken on the same proposition, with the result that 227 were in favour and 214 against—not a sufficient majority, however, to permit affiliation. In October, 1927, the question of affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress was again submitted to the membership, with the following result: for affiliation, 396; against, 142; spoiled ballots, 2; giving a majority of 36 in excess of the required two-thirds. The convention of the Civil Service Association held subsequently ratified the decision and a charter was duly issued by the Trades Congress. The association also decided to affiliate with the Alberta Federation of Labour.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada was organized in Toronto on January 4, 1926. The organization, which declared its jurisdiction to cover all land telegraph, radiotelegraph, telephone and allied workers in Canada and Newfoundland, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. On February 1, 1928, at a meeting in Toronto, the commercial telegraphers of the Canadian National Telegraphs decided to go over in a body to the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees. Later the same class of telegraphers in the employ of the Canadian Pacific did likewise. Subsequently a reorganization of the Electrical Communication Workers took place, the former Broker and Leased Wire Divisions forming an independent association, which ceased to function in 1931. The Electrical Communication Workers is also affiliated with the International Federation of Radiotelegraphists (London, England). In October, 1936, this organization withdrew from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and became an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour. Owing to recent reorganization of services and redistribution of personnel, local units have been temporarily suspended. All members of the organization are now members at large.

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union developed from a branch of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers located in Toronto, which in 1920 seceded because it was alleged (a) that the per capita tax was excessive in comparison with benefits received; (b) that a closer form of organization in the electrical industry was necessary; and (c) that the International Brotherhood had been lax in its efforts to organize the trade in the Dominion. Included in the objects of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union are: (1) to organize all workers in the electrical industry; (2) by mutual effort to place the members on a foundation sufficiently strong to prevent any encroachment on trade rights and privileges; (3) to establish an apprentice system and a higher standard of skill; (4) to encourage the formation of schools of instruction for teaching the practical application of electricity and trade education generally; (5) to cultivate feelings of friendship among the men of the craft; (6) to settle all disputes and grievances between employers and employees by arbitration or otherwise; (7) to assist each other in sickness and distress and to secure employment and adequate pay; (8) to regulate the relations between employers and employed; and (9) to promote friendly relations with all electrical workers of the world, and by legal and proper means to elevate the moral, intellectual and social conditions of all members. The organization is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The National Union of Operating Engineers of Canada was formerly a directly chartered local of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. During the year a new charter was issued by the Congress giving the union the status of a central body with power to charter local branches.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers is a craft organization, the object of which is mainly educational. The name of the association appeared in earlier issues of this report, but in 1926 it was changed to Mutual Engineers' Beneficial Fund, the new body retaining in the constitution some of the features of the former organization. In 1927 the name was omitted from the report, it being stated that the association was then a purely mutual benefit organization. Some of the former branches of the original association which did not become a part of the beneficial scheme, at a conference in London, Ont., on June 28-29, 1929, revived the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers and adopted an amended constitution. The objects of the association, which was incorporated in May, 1887, are "the elevation and maintenance of the rights of stationary engineers and the recognition of the other business matters in which the engineers in its jurisdiction may be interested or involved." In 1931 the association affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, but withdrew from that body during 1936.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees was formed in Toronto under the title "Brotherhood of Canadian Pacific Express Employees," on March 25, 1918, by a number of the employees of the Dominion Express Company. The Brotherhood was registered on May 23, 1918, by the Department of the Secretary of State, under the provisions of the Trade Unions Act. The object of the Brotherhood is contained in the following section of the rules:—

The object of the Brotherhood shall be to unite in one body, for their mutual protection and benefit, all employees of the Canadian Pacific Express Company, and the membership shall include no one but males of good moral character, 18 years of age and over, exclusively employed by the Canadian Pacific Express Company, except officials. Provided that no general foreman or chief clerk, although eligible for membership, shall hold office. An agent or master of transportation shall be classed as an official.

The New Brunswick Farmer-Labour Union is an independent central organization established in 1937. The central body is composed of county organizations which have control over the local branches within their respective jurisdictions.

Appearing for the first time in this group is the name of the Fishermen's Federation of Nova Scotia. The Federation is an independent body the objects of which are: (a) to procure information respecting the latest improvements in boats and fishing gear of all kinds, methods of curing and preparing fish for markets, and the transportation and marketing of fish and fish products; (b) to co-operate in the matter of purchases of fish, fishing supplies and accessories and in the canning, curing, storage, preservation, selling, marketing and export of fish; (c) mutual communication between the stations of such information; (d) to take action upon matters arising in respect to the fisheries and to make representations and furnish information to the proper authorities; (e) generally to improve and elevate the material, intellectual and social welfare and standing of the members.

Another fishermen's organization to have its name listed for the first time is the Pacific Coast Fishermen's Union. The organization, which is not connected with any other body, had in affiliation at the end of the year eleven local branches.

The Federated Association of Letter Carriers, which was formed on September 15, 1891, is an organization designed to protect the interests of its members in regard to salaries and working conditions, etc. Until the summer of 1918 the jurisdiction of the association over letter carriers had not been interfered with, but certain members of the association in the west who were not in accord with the settlement of the strike of the letter carriers which took place in July, 1918, launched a new body of postal employees, reference to which has already been made. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers is registered under the Friendly Societies' Act of Ontario for the transaction of life insurance in the province and is also affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The National Association of Marine Engineers of Canada is composed of marine engineers holding certificates granted by either the Dominion Government or the British Board of Trade and was established in 1893 to promote the interests of those employed as marine engineers in the Dominion. The association claims authority to establish subordinate councils and to make regulations for their governance. The preface to the constitution sets forth that it is essential for the progress of marine engineers that they should combine for the purpose of raising their status and to guard their certificates of qualification. In 1922 the association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and on August 27, 1926, was incorporated under the Companies Act of the Dominion.

The Canadian Federation of Musicians, a provisional national organization, was formed in May, 1936, with headquarters in Montreal. The objects of the Federation are: (1) to unite all independent or other eligible musicians' locals throughout the Dominion; (2) to incorporate into its ranks every eligible musician in Canada; (3) to eliminate all unfair wages and competition and every form of discrimination and to improve working conditions; (4) to promote a better understanding in the economics of the profession; (5) to exert every effort in attaining 100 per cent co-operation, good faith and fair dealing between each other; (6) to include the principles of justice and equity between the employer and the employee; (7) to avoid all "Isms" and anything and everything of a political nature, through which there may be a tendency to bring the national labour movement as represented by the Canadian Federation of Labour more or less into disrepute and which may possibly be harmful to its individual members; and (8) to secure legislation for the benefit and protection of all its members. The Canadian Federation of Musicians is an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which is composed of Indian fishermen, came into existence at a conference held in Port Simpson, B.C., on December 15-18, 1931. The organization was formed for the betterment of the conditions of the Indians socially, mentally and physically, and is designed to be legislative, executive and judicial, and may establish branches in all native villages. Conventions are to be held annually and delegates are to be appointed from each branch. The officers of the brotherhood consist of the president, vice-president, general secretary, general treasurer, general recording secretary and an executive committee consisting of two representatives from each village branch of the brotherhood.

The United Postal Employees of Canada was formerly known as the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association and came into existence in 1913 at a convention of representatives of a number of scattered independent lodges and postal workers. The unauthorized strike in the postal service west of the Great Lakes in 1918 resulted in the secession of a number of clerks in the western offices who, together with dissatisfied letter carriers, subsequently became members of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, now known as the Amalgamated Civil Servants. In May, 1920, the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress, but the affiliation was not maintained. The aim of the association is to secure by co-operation with the Post Office Department the classification of post office clerks with a view to getting more equitable salary rates, regulation of hours of labour, the improvement of the public service and such other objects as may arise. The new name was chosen at the convention held in September, 1928, when a reorganization of the society was effected, the Dominion Mail Porters and Chauffeurs' Association being merged with the postal clerks under the name of United Postal Employees of Canada. At the convention held in Toronto in September, 1934, the name of the organization was changed to the Canadian Postal Employees. In September, 1936, this organization became an affiliate of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The Canadian Printers' Union came into existence during 1930 and, according to the former secretary, who is now general secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, this body "was formed in response to a demand from a number of individual printers at several points in the Dominion for a union of their crafts not under alien control." Later the name of the organization was changed to the Canadian National Printing Trades Union. This body is affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which under its charter of incorporation is an international organization, at one time had branches in Newfoundland and the United States, as well as in Canada, but in 1926 it was reported that the last remaining local division outside of the Dominion had passed out of existence. In 1920 the name of the brotherhood, with the consent of the chief officers, appeared in the international group of labour organizations, but at their request the name was in 1927 reinserted in the list of Canadian unions. The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees was formed in October, 1908, was registered under the Trade Unions Act in July, 1909, and in 1923 effected affiliation with the International Transport Workers' Federation, an organization with headquarters in Holland, which embraces many European bodies of transport workers. The Canadian Brotherhood was originally designed to include such railway employees as clerks in all departments, freight handlers, foremen, checkers and porters, car checkers, baggage masters, parlour, sleeping and dining car service employees, locomotive wipers, ash pitmen, cranemen, labourers and express company employees, but in December, 1925, it was announced that the brotherhood was definitely in the field to accept into membership all railway shopmen, both skilled and unskilled. In November, 1917, the brotherhood became affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but was expelled from membership by the 1921 convention over a question of jurisdiction between the Canadian Brotherhood and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, an organization with headquarters in the United States which claims jurisdiction over certain of the classes of workers comprising the membership of the Canadian body. Previous to the expulsion of the Canadian Brotherhood the Trades Congress had endeavoured to bring about an amalgamation of the two organizations involved, but the efforts proved futile. The executive of the Congress, whose action was upheld by the 1921 convention, took the attitude that a continuance of the dual operation of the two bodies claiming jurisdiction over the same class of workers and being in affiliation with the Congress was not in the best interests of the men directly involved, nor of the international trade union movement as represented by the Congress. The Brotherhood is now an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Association of Railwaymen (formerly the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Operators and Dispatchers) was formed during the summer of 1921 in opposition to the old-established Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, an international organization with headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio, with which the organized locomotive engineers in Canada have for many years been identified. During 1920 a number of the Canadian lodges of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers were suspended for violation by their members of what was termed the Chicago joint agreement, a pact entered into on May 17, 1913, with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for the purpose of jointly regulating the mileage of locomotive engineers and firemen in order to benefit the spare men. (In 1927 the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers by an almost unanimous vote decided to abrogate the agreement.) At the 1921 convention of the brotherhood the charters of three lodges, viz., No. 516 at Humboldt, Sask., No. 825 at Kamsack, Sask., and No. 837 at Trenton, Ont., which persisted in ignoring the joint agreement, were cancelled. Subsequently the new Canadian organization of enginemen came into existence. Another reason advanced for the organization of a purely Canadian body was the small return received by the members in proportion to the money sent as dues and assessments to the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in the United States. The Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen established branches in the localities where the charters were cancelled by the international organization as well as at some other points. On March 1, 1923, the Canadian Association was registered under the Trade Unions Act of Canada, in 1927 it became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and in 1931, when the association absorbed the Canadian Association of Operators and Dispatchers, it extended its jurisdiction to conductors, trainmen, yardmen, telegraphers and dispatchers and changed its name accordingly. In 1934 the name was again changed to Canadian Association of Railwaymen. According to a statement issued over the signature of the president, this organization is strictly independent.

The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is a body composed of employees of a branch of the postal service, which its promoters claim to be in all intents and purposes a labour organization. Among the objects of the Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is the advancement of the service and the interests of its members.

The Canadian Seamen's Union has complete autonomy for the Dominion of Canada and the right to set up and issue charters to local branches. The first national convention of this body was held in Toronto, March 27-28, 1937. It is an affiliate of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees was organized at Montreal in March 1936, and had in affiliation the following groups: National Seamen's Association of Canada; the Canadian Brotherhood of Marine Engineers; and the Mercantile Marine Officers' Guild. The Brotherhood is composed of delegates from each council within the various groups. In addition to the organizations mentioned above, there has been added the Steamships' Stewards, Cooks and Helpers Group, the latter having been formed as a subdivision of the National Seamen's Association of Canada. At the close of the year the Canadian Brotherhood of Ships' Employees was affiliated with the Canadian Federation of Labour.

The Canadian Shoe Workers' Union and Allied Crafts, which until 1936 was shown as an independent unit, has since developed into a central organization, with 11 local unions in affiliation at the close of the year.

The Algoma Steel Workers' National Union, which was originally brought into being by the employees of the Algoma Steel Corporation, was formed on June 4, 1935. The objects of the union are set forth in the following section of the constitution: Section 1, Article 11—(a) better wages; (b) shorter hours; (c) better working conditions. Any employee not on a weekly or monthly salary is eligible for membership in the union. The Algoma Steel Workers' National Union is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Transport and General Workers of Canada was formed in 1936. The organization, which has its headquarters in Toronto, is an affiliate of the Canadian Federation of Labour.

IX. FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

Efforts of Local Unions of Closely Allied Trades Consolidated through Establishment of Federations—Affiliated Branch Unions Pay Per Capita Tax for Upkeep—Extent of Jurisdiction—Composition of Provincial Federations—Present Legislative Programs to Provincial Governments—Other Federated Bodies—Synopsis of Their Functions—Division by Groups—List of Federations with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In order to consolidate the efforts of local unions of closely allied trades on matters which come within the purview of such organizations, federations of trade unions have been established. The affiliated branch unions, which are represented at the meetings of the respective federations by elected delegates, are required to pay a per capita tax for the upkeep of the federated organizations with which they are identified. While the jurisdiction of most of these delegate bodies is confined to a particular locality, some of them include the shop mechanics on a railway system, others cover all organized workers of kindred trades in a whole province, and in three instances they are formed on a Dominion-wide basis, these being Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, A. F. of L., Canadian National System Federation No. 11 and C.P.R. System Federation No. 125, all of which embrace railway shop mechanics.

Working under charters issued by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, there are two provincial federations of labour, one with jurisdiction covering the province of Alberta and the other the province of New Brunswick. Membership in these provincial federations include: (1) trades and labour councils; (2) international and national local branch unions; and (3) federal labour unions, bodies usually representing trades over which no existing central organizing union claims jurisdiction. The legislative program and other matters of concern to wage-earners are considered at the annual meetings. These legislative demands which have been adopted at the conventions are presented to the respective provincial Governments by the executive officers, who are generally accompanied by representatives of affiliated local unions. A federation somewhat similar to the two referred to above has been chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour to cover the province of New Brunswick.

Other groups of delegate bodies representing kindred occupations include organizations among the building trades, printing and paper making trades, clothing trades, and employees of public authorities.

All of the building trades councils, except that in Niagara Falls, are affiliates of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor. These councils have full autonomy over matters affecting all organized workmen in their respective localities engaged in the building industry, when in conformity with the laws and decisions of the Building Trades Department. Before any local council may enter into an agreement with an association of employers, such agreement must be submitted to and approved by the majority of the membership in a referendum vote.

Local allied printing trades councils are provided for in the agreement made between the five printing trade organizations (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Printing Pressmen's Union, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Typographical Union) under date of March 7, 1911, under which there was established the International Allied Printing Trades Association. In some of the federations, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America is also included. Local councils may adopt rules for their governance, provided that they are in accord with the general laws of the Printing Trades Association, and are designed in part to be the agents through which the allied printing trades union label may be issued to printing firms conforming to the necessary conditions.

The Quebec Provincial Council of Paper Mill Unions, which was organized September 16, 1934, is a voluntary federation of international local unions holding charters from the International Brotherhood of Papermakers and the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers. The council has no defined jurisdiction, all local unions of the two international bodies which are considered to be closely enough situated geographically to come within the limits of the province of Quebec and vicinity are eligible for membership. In addition to those in the province of Quebec there are two local unions from New Brunswick and four from Ontario connected with the council. The objects of the provincial council are: (1) to promote goodwill and harmony between the men employed in the paper mills in the province of Quebec; (2) to promote goodwill between employees and employers in the province and a better understanding of the problems confronting both; (3) to assist in raising the living standards of the men employed in the paper mills in the province; (4) to aid in bringing about greater uniformity of wages and working conditions; (5) to work for provincial laws that will advance and protect the interests of the workers of the province; (6) to educate ourselves to a better understanding of the fundamental principles of unionism; (7) to promote higher standards of business ethics in the local unions affiliated with the two divisions and a greater sense of responsibility in the local officers and members; and (8) to assist in influencing individuals employed in the paper industry to associate themselves with the council to promote the interests of labour.

Metal trades councils are formed for the purpose of securing closer co-operation among the various organizations in the metal industry. The representatives of the following fourteen international and national bodies are eligible for membership: blacksmiths, boilermakers, technical engineers, electrical workers, operating engineers, firemen and oilers, hod carriers, bridge, structural and ornamental iron workers, machinists, metal polishers, moulders, pattern makers, plumbers, and sheet metal workers. These councils have the right to negotiate agreements with employers, thereby bringing all the members of local unions affiliated with the council working for an employer under one agreement. They also assist in organization campaigns instituted by affiliated bodies. At the close of 1937 there was only one metal trades council and its jurisdiction covered the city of Toronto.

The Winnipeg Needle Trades Council, which is the first to be established in the clothing trades, was organized on October 21, 1937. This council is composed of representatives from locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, International Fur Workers' Union, United Garment Workers of America and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, and has for its object the carrying on of organizational, educational and recreational work.

Division No. 4, which came into existence on February 27, 1918, and works under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the A. F. of L., is the most important delegate body in the railway employees' group. It is also the largest of the federations, having jurisdiction over the organized shop workers on all Canadian railway lines, including machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electrical workers, sheet metal workers, etc. These workers are in the first place members of their respective local unions and then are brought together in a system federation covering the particular railway line on which they are employed. Delegates from these system federations and crafts make up the representation at the conventions of the division, which meets biennially, although special sessions may be called. The purposes of the division are: (1) to promote harmony and enhance the welfare of all railroad employees; (2) to aid in organizing all such workers and to consider and decide jurisdictional disputes; (3) to discourage piece work and to confer jointly in regard to schedules and to approve same before presentation to the railway officials; (4) to encourage railroad organizations to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor; and (5) to further the interests of employees by means of legislation and to take such action as may be agreed upon to protect the interests of all concerned. The division also seeks: (a) to bring all railway employees within the organization; (b) to shorten the hours of labour to eight per day; (c) to establish a minimum wage scale for all employees in all branches of railway service; (d) to bring about a national agreement on all railroads in Canada which may if necessary be divided into sections; and (e) to prevent strikes and lockouts.

The composition of the federations of employees of public authorities is in some instances more diversified than that of the others mentioned, their memberships including not only ordinary civic employees but also street railway and telephone employees, where such services are publicly owned. Besides the three local organizations, which meet at frequent intervals to deal with local conditions concerning the various trades making up the respective federations, there is one provincial body of such workers, viz., the British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees, which is registered under the Societies' Act of the province and is authorized to issue charters to local branch associations.

The Labour Educational Association of Western Ontario was formed in Woodstock in 1903 as a voluntary unaffiliated body. In 1907 the word "Western" was dropped from the name, the annual meetings of the organization having been attended by a number of delegates from eastern cities. The representatives at the annual conventions of the association include those from such recognized labour bodies in Ontario as contribute a prescribed annual fee, $1 being the minimum and $5 the maximum, according to membership. The functions of the Labour Educational Association having developed along somewhat similar lines as a provincial federation, the name of the organization is given a place in this section. Its object is to advance the principles of the labour movement and aid the work of organization through the dissemination of information, the holding of public meetings and lectures, the distribution of educational literature, etc.

During the year the following federations were formed: Metal Trades Council of Toronto; Quebec Provincial Council of Paper Mill Unions, Quebec, P.Q.; Hull District Council of Paper Mill Unions; Needle Trades Council, Winnipeg, Man.; and Transport Federation, Montreal, P.Q.

The names of the federations removed from the list during the year are: Ottawa and District Printing Trades Federation; and the Federation of Wood Workers, which is now an international central organization.

There were in the Dominion at the close of the year 52 non-sectarian trade union federations, three more than the number recorded in 1936.

The federations recorded in the appended list are divided into the following groups: provincial federations, 3; building trade councils, 11; metal trades council, 1; printing trades councils, 14; clothing trades council, 1; railway employees' federations, including three regions of C.N. Railways, 16; other transportation and navigation federation, 1; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; and miscellaneous, 1.

X. DISTRICT COUNCILS

Many Labour Organizations Make Provision for the Formation of District Councils or Conference Boards—Chief Functions of These Councils—Jurisdiction—Per Capita Tax Levied on Affiliated Branches to Meet Expenses—Outline of the Objects and Other Particulars Concerning These Delegate Bodies—Names of Councils with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

For the purpose of bringing about a closer affiliation of local branches of a particular trade, and of co-ordinating their activities, many of the labour organizations make provision for the formation of what are termed "district councils" or "conference boards", a number of which are operating in the Dominion. The chief function of these organizations is to consider trade and other matters deemed to be of common interest to the affiliated membership, and which it is believed can be dealt with more satisfactorily in a conference of representatives reflecting the opinions of their respective constituents than by individual branches. The jurisdiction of these councils varies, being in some instances confined to a locality where two or more local branches of the same craft exist, in other instances including all local branches of a given trade within a stated area and occasionally extending to a whole province or even to cover a given class of workers throughout the Dominion. A per capita tax is levied on the branches in affiliation to meet the expenses of these district councils. The number of delegates to represent each unit is generally agreed upon when the council is established. Where the councils are purely local, meetings are held at frequent intervals, but in the case of provincial and Dominion-wide bodies meetings are held annually. Some of the more important functions of the district councils in Canada are briefly outlined below.

The conference board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union is chartered by the central organization, and has power to make its own constitution and by-laws and to collect (in order to meet its expenses) a per capita tax from the local branches of which it is constituted. The object of this board is to endeavour to establish and maintain a uniform work-day and rate of wages in the territory under its jurisdiction, and also to regulate apprentice laws, procure favourable legislation for the craft and obtain for its members information regarding conditions of employment.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada has managing committees in Toronto and Vancouver, with functions similar to those of the district councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners. The Toronto committee was originally established in 1913, the Vancouver committee being formed at a later date.

Provision is made under the scheme of organization of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners for the establishment of district and provincial councils, the former, which are local in character, meeting at short intervals, and the latter annually. These delegate organizations have power to frame working and trade rules in their respective jurisdictions. They must also provide for and hold trial of all infractions of trade rules, and can enforce penalties, subject, of course, to an appeal to the general president of the brotherhood.

The British Columbia District Council of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union, International Woodworkers of America, also has functions similar to the councils of the carpenters.

The Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers has only one district council in Canada, namely, No. 5, comprising the local branches of the brotherhood operating in the city of Montreal. Among the objects of the council are the creation of harmony and unity between the local unions of the craft; the establishment of a minimum wage in the district; and the enforcement of a code of working rules governing hours, wages, etc. Council No. 5 has legislative and executive power on all matters relating to the common interest of the locals under its jurisdiction, including the ordering of strikes, subject to the sanction of the general executive board of the brotherhood. A per capita tax is levied on the local unions to defray the necessary expenses of the council.

The Ontario Provincial Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters was formerly known as the Ontario Pipe Trades Council, but in December, 1926, the present name was chosen and a charter for the organization was issued by the head office of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. This provincial association, the membership of which is made up of plumbers employed in the building trade, seeks to improve organization among the craft and to secure better working conditions in the trade. In matters involving members of local branches in the province the association has power to make decisions. Special efforts are made to keep the members of the Ontario branches employed by prompt advice to each other of changes in local conditions and also by the transference of members from one city to another for special large jobs.

At the present time there is only one provincial conference of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association in Canada under charter from the central organization. It is designed to establish the minimum rate of pay and the maximum number of hours for all locals under its jurisdiction. The conference has full power to make laws to govern itself and to levy such assessments upon its members for financial support as it may deem necessary, so long as such laws do not conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the main association.

The International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Welders and Helpers has under charter district council No. 30, covering all Canadian lodges of the craft having members working on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada. This council is represented on the executive board of the brotherhood by an international vice-president. It has power to form its own by-laws and to call strikes, provided that the approval of the international executive board has been secured, but may arbitrate and close strikes on its own volition.

The Hamilton Joint Board of Steel Lodges is a co-ordinating body for the four local branches of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers in the city. The purpose of the board is to assist and centralize the organizing efforts of the various groups.

There are three district lodges of the International Association of Machinists. District No. 2 has jurisdiction over all locals embracing members of the craft employed on Canadian railways, subject to the general laws of the Grand Lodge. The members comprising the district determine the proportion and method of representation and also the amount and method of collection of revenue. Assessments may be levied within its jurisdiction with the approval of the affiliated members. The district is divided into seven sections corresponding to the territory of the respective general managers of the main trunk roads, as follows: No. 1, comprising the western lines of the C.P.R.; No. 2, the eastern lines of the C.P.R.; No. 3, the western region of the C.N.R.; No. 4, the central region of the C.N.R.; No. 5, the Atlantic region of the C.N.R.; No. 6, the T. H. & B. Railroad; and No. 7, the T. & N.O. Railroad. The officers of the district are the president and secretary-treasurer, who, with the seven section chairmen, comprise the district executive board. District Lodges Nos. 46 and 82 are local bodies, composed of the lodges in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, respectively, and the surrounding districts. These district lodges deal with matters affecting the interests of the members of the association in the localities mentioned.

Under charter from the International Moulders' Union is the Conference Board of Ontario, which has jurisdiction over all locals in the province. It makes its own laws, subject to the approval of the general president, and elects a business agent for the territory under its control. The necessary expenses of the conference board are covered by a per capita levy on each local union in affiliation, the money so raised being received through the international headquarters.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America has two district councils in the Dominion, one in Montreal and the other in Toronto. These councils have power to transact business pertaining to the welfare of the members of the various local branches, such as the prevention of strikes, the organization of label agitations and the adjustment, where possible, of all local differences before they are referred to headquarters. Authority is given to these councils to investigate the financial standing of affiliated local branches, the reports being forwarded to the general executive board. At the general convention the councils are each entitled to be represented by one delegate.

The Toronto Joint Board of the International Fur Workers' Union is the only district council of this organization operating in Canada, and has power to adopt its own by-laws, provided, of course, that there is no objection by its affiliates. The board may assess the members of affiliated locals to meet the necessary expenses.

The primary object of the joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of which there are two, located at Montreal and Toronto, respectively, is to call, conduct and settle strikes and lockouts affecting the local branches under their jurisdiction. The decision of such boards in all disputes is binding upon the local unions.

The United Garment Workers of America has established one district council in the Dominion. This council has jurisdiction over the locals in the city of Toronto, and its functions are similar to those of councils in the other branches of the clothing group.

The Ontario Provincial Council of the Canadian Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers' Association was formed on May 2, 1937, with jurisdiction covering the province of Ontario. Each local union is entitled to send three delegates from each mill organized in the local. The council is empowered to make recommendations for ratification by the locals. The object of the organization is to codify the activities of the local unions in order that the industry may be placed on a sound and profitable basis, thereby enabling the workers to secure shorter hours and higher wages.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and Allied Crafts has under charter one council, with jurisdiction over its locals in the province of Ontario. Among the objects of the Ontario Provincial Council is the promotion of improvements in working conditions for its members.

The National Textile Council of United Textile Workers' Federal Unions was formed in Ottawa on July 24, 1937. The council, as its name implies, covers the whole Dominion but at the close of 1937 only the locals in Ontario and Quebec were affiliated. Each of the locals comprising the council holds a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada but the council itself is not so chartered. Proportional representation determines the number of delegates from each local union.

The Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union has its own by-laws. Matters having to do with the sanitary conditions of printing offices, the securing of legislation in the interest of the printing industry and the promotion of harmonious relations among the various branches on matters affecting the trade engage the attention of the delegates at the annual meetings. A per capita tax, which is paid direct to the board, is levied to defray the general expenses of the conference.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees has five district councils under charter. These councils, which meet monthly, are designed to promote the welfare of the brotherhood and to bring about a larger measure of co-operation between the local lodges in the respective districts, each lodge being entitled to representation.

Of the three district councils of the International Longshoremen's Association listed in the accompanying table, only one is composed entirely of Canadian locals, viz., that at Saint John, N.B. This council may make rulings and decisions affecting members of the local branches within its jurisdiction, but such rulings and decisions are subject to the approval of the district branch, while the final decision rests with the executive council of the international association. The Atlantic Coast District Council has jurisdiction over the entire north Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports in the territory, and a clause in its constitution stipulates that one of the vice-presidents must be located in Canada. There is also a similar district body on the Pacific coast, the laws of which require that one of the vice-presidents must reside in British Columbia. A function of these district councils is to investigate the conduct of local branches and members under their jurisdiction, and they also have the power to inflict penalties and fines for violation of the rules of the association.

There are two councils of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, one in Toronto and the other in Vancouver. The objects of these councils are to bring together the representatives of the various locals in the locality for the purpose of discussing such subjects as are of common concern to the membership and the co-ordinating of organizational activities.

The United Mine Workers of America has two district organizations, viz., District 26, with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and District 18, covering the coal mining areas of Alberta and British Columbia. District unions of the United Mine Workers have power to adopt rules for their own governance, provided that these rules do not conflict with the laws of the international union or with the joint agreements in effect at the time. The districts also have control over the affiliated locals, and have power to collect a per capita tax and to levy assessments on their own members, such assessments not to exceed $1 per month. The district unions are not permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of the members without the sanction of an international convention or the international executive board, but the unions may order local strikes within their own territory on their own responsibility; provided, however, that where such strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international executive board.

The local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union in Ontario are brought together in a provincial federation. The objects of the federation are: (1) the education of the members by means of an exchange of ideas at annual conventions; (2) the advocacy of higher wages and shorter hours; (3) the universal closing of all barber shops on Sunday; and (4) provincial licensing and examination as to qualifications of all barbers, and also more adequate sanitary regulations for barber shops and rigid enforcement of the law pertaining thereto.

There are three districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators. No. 1 comprises the states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana and the province of British Columbia; No. 11, the Maritime Provinces, Quebec and Ontario; and No. 12, the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. These districts have power to enact laws for their own governance, so long as such laws do not conflict with the international constitution and have been approved by the affiliated units. Among the purposes of these district bodies is the standardization of working conditions and rates of pay and the securing of legislation for the better protection of those engaged in the theatrical trades.

The objects of the Local Joint Executive Board of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' International Alliance and Bartenders' International League of America are to organize all persons working in the allied trades and to better their conditions morally, socially and financially.

The International Association of Fire Fighters has a provincial federation and two district councils. The provincial federation was formerly listed as a Canadian central body but as all the locals comprising the organization have joined the International Association of Fire Fighters, the name of the provincial body has been transferred to this chapter. The revenue of the federation is derived from a monthly per capita tax. The objects of these bodies are: (1) to organize all permanent fire fighters in the provinces mentioned; (2) to foster the encouragement of a higher degree of skill and efficiency on the part of fire fighters; (3) the cultivation of friendship among the members; (4) proper remuneration for duty performed; (5) a pension law that will provide ample funds for those dependent upon pension; (6) to have legislation enacted where necessary to make the fire fighters' position more efficient and humane; and (7) the establishment of sick and death benefit funds.

The Ontario Provincial Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers is authorized to adjudicate on all grievances that may arise between the local branches comprising the board. It is a legislative and advisory body, and its actions are subject to the constitution of the central organization. The board meets annually on the second Monday in January, but may be convened for special sessions.

There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, No. 7 having jurisdiction over all lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway east of Port Arthur, while No. 8 covers the same lines west from Fort William. The object of these district councils is to centralize the work in the respective localities. The chairman of a district body handles any grievances which cannot be settled at the local point by meeting with the higher officials at the main centre and endeavouring to effect an adjustment.

The Canadian Furniture Council, with headquarters in Toronto, was formed in August, 1937. The aim of the council is to bring the membership of the various locals more closely together, so as to form a strong organization through which to extend the scope of their organizing activities.

The list of district councils which follows is arranged in trade groups and gives the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries.

XI. BROTHERHOOD COMMITTEES

In the Structure of the Several Railroad Employees' Organizations Provision is Made for Another Important Group of Delegate Bodies—These Bodies Include Committees Known by the Name of "Adjustment", "Grievance", "Protective", "Legislative", etc.—Functions Include Consideration of Matters Affecting Conditions of Employment of Their Members and Adjustment of Local Complaints—Certain Brotherhoods Have Legislative Boards and Maintain Legislative Representatives at Ottawa—Provincial Legislative Boards Have Similar Duties—List of Delegate Bodies with Chief Officers.

In the structure of the several railroad employees' organizations, the memberships of which comprise a considerable portion of the organized workers of Canada, provision is made for another important group of delegate bodies. These delegate bodies of railroad workers include committees known by the name of "adjustment", "grievance", "protective", "legislative", etc., the objects of which are discussed in considerable detail in previous issues of this report. The functions of the first three named committees, which are composed of representatives from the various local lodges comprising the employees of a particular railroad, include the consideration of matters affecting the conditions of employment of their members. Through the efforts of these bodies many adjustments of local complaints have been effected, and on occasion they have made satisfactory settlement of disputes involving the whole membership on a given railway system. Among the brotherhoods to establish these delegate bodies are those the memberships of which are engaged in engine and train service, their lodges being located at the various terminal points of the different railway lines. These railroad brotherhoods have established bodies known as legislative boards, and maintain representatives at Ottawa. Such bodies are designed to protect the interest of railwaymen in laws which may be proposed in connection with railroad operation and also in respect to decisions made by the Board of Railway Commissioners. The provincial legislative boards have similar duties as regards their respective provinces and may co-operate with other organizations in securing uniformity in laws concerning labour. Some other railroad employees' organizations send representatives to Ottawa to look after the welfare of their members when such a procedure is considered necessary.

The list of delegate bodies for each railway employees' organization is given separately below, the names of the railroads over which the respective committees have jurisdiction being arranged in alphabetical order. In each case the name and address of the chairman and secretary (where obtainable) are given:—

XII. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

Trades and Labour Councils Are Another Form of Delegate Body Developed by Labour Organizations—Have No Power to Issue Charters—Designed Principally to Give Expression to the Opinion of the Member Units on Certain Public Questions—Number of Councils Operating in the Dominion—Those under Dual Charters—Five Formed during 1937—Division by Provinces—Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

Labour organizations have developed trades and labour councils or central labour councils, another form of delegate body in addition to the federations and district councils which are discussed in preceding chapters. Usually these councils are formed in localities where a number of local branch unions are operating, and delegates from these locals constitute the membership of the councils. Being voluntary bodies, not all the unions in the city or district belong to the council, but many international organizations impress upon their local branches the desirability of affiliating with the trades and labour councils in their respective localities.

The general expenses of trades and labour councils are defrayed by a per capita tax paid by the affiliated organizations. These councils have no power to issue charters but are formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of common interest, and are designed, principally, to give expression to the opinion of the member units on certain public questions. On occasion they have endorsed the demands of certain affiliated bodies for improved working conditions, and not only have they given their moral support but have been the medium through which appeals for funds to support strikes were made. Some trade councils have gone further and issued strike orders, thereby usurping the functions of international organizations of which the local unions comprising the council were affiliates. To end this practice the American Federation of Labor, which has under charter 738 councils, some of which are located in Canada, in 1919 amended its constitution, prohibiting chartered trades councils to order any affiliated branch union to go on strike or take a vote on the question of a strike until the proper authorities have agreed to such action. At its 1920 convention the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada took action to deal summarily with councils which violated the constitution of that body or encouraged secession movements in the ranks of organized labour.

Similar organizations have been chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and these are termed "national labour councils." There are 14 councils connected with this organization, operating in Halifax, Moncton, Saint John, Montreal, Quebec, London, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Prince Rupert and Vancouver.

The councils identified with the Canadian Federation of Labour are shown with the full name preceded by the locality and are reported to be operating in the following cities: Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Edmonton, Calgary and Vancouver.

Those affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada are called "central councils," their location being shown in chapter VII.

The single council of the One Big Union is located in Winnipeg and is termed "central labour council."

The American Federation of Labor has granted a charter to a council in Hamilton, separate and distinct from the one chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The remaining 38 councils are chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and 14 of these also hold charters from the American Federation of Labor. Those under dual charters are located as follows: Edmonton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, St. Thomas, Toronto, Vancouver, Windsor and Winnipeg.

Twenty-four of the councils are located in Ontario cities, the remaining 37 being divided among the other provinces as follows: Alberta, 8; Quebec, 7; Saskatchewan and British Columbia, 6 each; Manitoba and New Brunswick, 4 each; and Nova Scotia, 2.

During 1937, five councils have been chartered, viz., Saint John National Labour Council (A.C.C.L.); St. Hyacinthe Trades and Labour Council; Cornwall Trades and Labour Council; Hamilton Trades and Labour Council (A.F. of L.); and Drumheller Trades and Labour Council.

The councils chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are designated by the letters "A.C.C.L.", those identified with the Canadian Federation of Labour are shown with the full name preceded by the location, the one council chartered by the American Federation of Labor is designated by the letters "A. F. of L.", while the one connected with the One Big Union is followed by the letters "O.B.U."

The following list gives the location of the trades and labour councils in the Dominion, arranged in provincial groups (those operating under dual charters being marked with an asterisk), with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries:—

XIII. TRADE UNION LOCAL UNITS

The Local Branch Unions Are the Foundation of All Central Organizations and Delegate Bodies—The Local Units Provide the Finances Necessary for the Maintenance of Central Bodies—Number of Local Branch Unions of All Classes Operating in Canada—Independent Units Formed or Dissolved During 1937—Numerical Standing of the Nine Provinces as to Local Branches—Cities Having Not Less than Twenty Local Branch Unions—List of Union Branches with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries Where Obtainable—Unions Formed During the Early Part of 1938.

The local branch unions are the foundation of all central organizations and delegate bodies which have been discussed in preceding chapters. The name of every international and non-international local branch, exclusive of those connected with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, as well as all independent units in the Dominion, so far as the department has been able to secure information, is given in this chapter.

The local units provide the finances necessary for the maintenance of all central bodies in the form of a per capita tax established from time to time. Each unit usually consists of workers engaged in a particular trade or calling in a given locality, and the charter received from the central organization generally covers a stated area. In a few instances a local branch in a locality bordering on the international boundary line has members living in both Canada and the United States, some officials in such cases being located on one side and some on the other side of the boundary. In localities where two or more local branches receive their charters from the same central body district councils are sometimes formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of common concern to the members of the organization. Similarly, local branches of certain kindred trades form federations, and trades and labour councils are established where the local branches are sufficiently numerous to maintain them. The local units enumerated in this chapter, some of which are identified with each of the three classes of delegate bodies mentioned above, contribute the finances necessary to support these several adjuncts in the scheme of labour organization.

The branches of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America are known as "system" divisions, which include the membership employed on a certain class of work over a whole telegraph system. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers, besides having local lodges, also has "system" divisions, which cover the operations on a whole railroad system. In the present publication, the names of the "system" divisions are printed under the heading of the locality in which the respective secretaries reside.

As in the case of previous reports, application was made to the secretaries of all central organizing bodies for a list of their local branches in Canada, as well as to the officers of local units of which the department had a record. Of the 96 international organizations with branches in Canada only a few failed to furnish a list of their local unions in the Dominion, although in a number of cases it was necessary to make several requests, and of the 31 Canadian organizations only one failed to supply the necessary information. In all cases where the local officers failed to furnish particulars on the first application a second request was made, with the result that out of a total of 3,258 branches of all classes of unions in the Dominion direct replies were received from 2,743. Where the information was not received from the local secretary, the names and addresses furnished by the general secretaries have been used.

An analysis of the returns received in the department indicates that at the close of the year 1937 there were 2,048 local branch unions connected with 96 international organizations. The Industrial Workers of the World, an international industrial union, had 6 affiliated branches. The Canadian central organizations had 853 local branches and the independent units numbered 72. In addition there were 285 National Catholic syndicates and study circles. These figures indicate, as previously mentioned, that there were in Canada at the close of the year 3,258 local branch unions of all classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, a gain of 372 for the year, with a total membership of 384,619, an increase of 62,146.

As usual, the province of Ontario occupied first place as to the number of local branch unions of international organizations, having 871 of the total of 2,048; Quebec stood second, with 305; British Columbia third, with 206; and Alberta fourth, with 199. The remaining five provinces ranked as follows: Saskatchewan, 137; Nova Scotia, 122; Manitoba, 114;

New Brunswick, 90; and Prince Edward Island, 4. Ontario also stood first in the number of local branches of Canadian organizations, there being 325 in the province out of a total of 853; Quebec occupied second place, with 98; British Columbia was third, with 97; and Alberta was fourth, with 93. The other five provinces stood as follows: Manitoba, 74; Saskatchewan, 59; Nova Scotia, 51; New Brunswick, 49; and Prince Edward Island, 7.

The six local units of civic employees in Winnipeg, which are united in the Civic Employees' Federation, have their own constitution and by-laws, the federation, to which each unit sends three delegates and pays a per capita tax, being the executive of the consenting units.

Independent units formed during the year were: Fredericton Labour Council, Fredericton, N.B.; Miramichi Mine Workers' Union, Minto, N.B.; Rothwell Mine Workers' Union, Rothwell, N.B.; Association of Employees of Acton Vale Silk Mills, Acton Vale, P.Q.; Barber Employees of the county of Missisquoi, Farnham, P.Q.; Labour Association, Longueuil, P.Q.; Cement Masons' Union of Canada, Montreal, P.Q.; Protective Association of Employees of Barbers and Hair Dressers, Montreal, P.Q.; Montreal and District Shoe Repair Employees' Union, Montreal, P.Q.; Ladies' Hairdressers of Montreal, Montreal, P.Q.; National Union of Longshoremen of the Port of Quebec, Quebec, P.Q.; Dairymen's Union of Riviere du Loup, Riviere du Loup, P.Q.; Barbers and Hairdressers' Professional Union, Salaberry de Valleyfield, P.Q.; Muskoka Workers' Union, Gravenhurst, Ont.; Association of Cine Technicians, Toronto, Ont.; Greater Winnipeg Woodcutters' Association, Winnipeg, Man.; Medicine Hat Automotive Association, Medicine Hat, Alta.; Pacific Coast Native Fishermen's Association, Alert Bay, B.C.; Chemainus and District Longshoremen's Association, Chemainus, B.C.; Fire Fighters' Union, No. 3, North Vancouver, B.C.; Fishermen's Co-operative Association, Prince Rupert, B.C.; Electric Employees' Organization, Vancouver, B.C.; Consolidated Cod Fishermen's Association, Vancouver, B.C.; Burrard Coastwise Longshoremen's Association, Vancouver, B.C.; Federation of Canadian Transportation Employees, Vancouver, B.C.; British Columbia Provincial Association of Fire Fighters, Victoria, B.C.; and British Columbia Trollers' Association, Victoria, B.C.

The following fifteen independent units either were dissolved or became identified with some other organization: Labour Association, Chatham, N.B.; National Union of Asbestos Miners, Asbestos, P.Q.; Grocery Clerks, Montreal, P.Q.; Syndicated Longshoremen's Association, Montreal, P.Q.; National Independent Longshoremen's Union, Montreal, P.Q.; National Independent Coal Handlers' Association, Montreal, P.Q.; Labour Association of St. Michel Ward, Montreal, P.Q.; Wood, Wire and Metal Lathers, Montreal, P.Q.; Tanners and Curriers' Union, St. Hyacinthe, P.Q.; Labour Union, Cobourg, Ont.; Amalgamated Workers' Association, Kenora, Ont.; Machinists' Union, Kingston, Ont.; Railway and Steamship Clerks, Ottawa, Ont.; Shoe Workers, Toronto, Ont.; Canadian Printers' Union, Calgary, Alta.

The numerical standing of the nine provinces of the Dominion as to local branches of all classes of labour organizations, including the unions of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, was as follows: Ontario, 1,205, a gain of 112; Quebec, 707, a gain of 134; British Columbia, 328, a gain of 33; Alberta, 294, a gain of 16; Saskatchewan, 196, a gain of 3; Manitoba, 195, a gain of 7; Nova Scotia, 178, a gain of 40; New Brunswick, 143, a gain of 27; and Prince Edward Island, 12, no change.

There were 34 cities in the Dominion having not less than 20 local branch unions of all classes, 4 more than the number recorded in this group in 1936. The four cities which qualified for inclusion in this class in 1937 were Kitchener, Peterborough, Chicoutimi and New Westminster. Montreal again stood first, with 248 (61 of which were National Catholic syndicates); Toronto was second, with 211; Winnipeg was third, with 126; and Vancouver was fourth, with 117, this being the same order in which these cities appeared the previous year. The other 30 cities ranked as follows: Quebec, 102 (58 National Catholic syndicates); Edmonton, 85; Hamilton and Ottawa, 70 each; Calgary, 65; London, 64; Three Rivers, 55 (37 National Catholic syndicates); Halifax, 49; Sherbrooke, 48 (30 National Catholic syndicates); Victoria, 48; Regina, 46; Saint John, 45; Windsor, 43; Fort William and Saskatoon, 38 each; Moose Jaw, 30; St. Hyacinthe, 30 (22 National Catholic syndicates); Moncton and Port Arthur, 29 each; North Bay, 28; St. Thomas, 27; Stratford, 26; Kitchener and Peterborough, 24 each; St. Catharines, 23; Brandon, 22; Chicoutimi, 21 (13 National Catholic syndicates); Brandon, Lethbridge and New Westminster, 21 each.

During the interval between the receipt of the reports from the central organizations and the publication of this review a large number of local branch unions have been established, the names of those for which information was received in the department being published in a separate list, following the directory of local unions.

The list here printed is arranged by provinces, proceeding from east to west, with cities and towns arranged in alphabetical order. Local unions under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are designated by the letters "T. and L.C." following the names; unions in Canada under charters direct from the American Federation of Labor have the letters "A.F. of L." as an affix; branches of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are denoted by the letters "A.C.C.L."; branches of the Canadian Federation of Labour are shown by the letters "C.F. of L."; and the independent units are so described. When the information could be obtained, the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, as revised up to date of publication, are given, the post office address of the respective officers being the same as the heading under which their names appear, unless otherwise specified.

XIV. BUSINESS AGENTS

Another Important Trade Union Position—Matters Formerly Entrusted to Committees Now Referred to the Business Agent—Synopsis of Duties—Method of Maintenance—Increase in the Number of Business Agents for the Year 1937—List of Localities and Trades Having Business Agents, With Their Names and Addresses.

As a result of the rapid growth of the trade union movement another important position, that of business agent, has come into existence. Matters formerly entrusted to committees, and frequently entailing a loss of time on the part of the members, are now as a rule referred to the business agent. At the inception of this position the business agent was often referred to as the "walking delegate" and the duty assigned him is to visit, when permissible, the various jobs on which members of his craft are employed in order to ascertain if all are in good standing with the organization and to endeavour to secure applications for membership if there are any non-members working. The agent is also required to see that the fair wage clauses on government and municipal contracts (when there are such provisions) are observed, and where supposed violations are detected he has the authority of his organization to take the necessary steps to bring them to the attention of the proper authorities. Complaints concerning conditions of employment are referred by the employees to the business agent, it being his duty to adjust difficulties, provided the union considers them of sufficient importance to warrant such action being taken. The receiving of applications for labour from employers and furnishing the men required so far as possible is another important feature of the business agent's duties. Business agents are usually elected annually by the local branches concerned, their salaries being paid from local funds, either from the regular dues or by a weekly or monthly assessment, but in a few instances different methods prevail. In some localities, where a single union is not strong enough to maintain a business agent, two or more local unions of kindred trades sometimes combine to support such an official.

The list following contains the names of 241 business agents, 33 more than the number reported in 1936. When the position of business agent is combined with the secretaryship, as it is in many instances, the name of the business agent is omitted from the following list, but is published in the directory of secretaries of local unions. The arrangement of the list printed below shows the localities, proceeding from east to west, in which business agents are at present maintained, together with the names of the trades, the business agents and their addresses.

XV. REVOLUTIONARY LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS

Third (Communist) International Formed in Moscow, March 6, 1919—International Council of Trade Unions Organized in August, 1920—Establishment of Red International of Labour Unions at First Council Meeting—Preamble to Constitution—Original Affiliate in Canada of the Communist International Was the Workers' Party—Name Changed to Communist Party of Canada—Working Class Unity—Communist Party of Canada Holds Eighth Convention—Young Communist League—Young Pioneers.

In August, 1920, about a year after the re-establishment of the International Federation of Trade Unions (referred to in a subsequent chapter), the Third (Communist) International, an organization formed in Moscow, March 6, 1919, organized the International Council of Trade Unions, with the object of grouping together the labour bodies adhering to the Moscow International. At the first meeting of this council, which was held in Moscow, July, 1921, there were 380 delegates present, reported to represent a membership of 16,400,000 in 41 countries. At this meeting there was established the Red International of Labour Unions, a body designed to be the medium through which to propagate the doctrine of the Third (Communist) International. This body proclaimed itself to be an international, which, together with the Communist International, would organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the setting up of the dictatorship of the proletariat, an international which would seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth.

The first of the revolutionary adjuncts of the Communist International to be discussed in this chapter is the Red International of Labour Unions, which, as stated above, was formed as a result of a conference of Russian trade union officials and members of the Third (Communist) International held on July 15, 1920. At this conference a provisional committee, known as the International Council of Trade and Industrial Unions, was appointed for the purpose of calling a world congress of trade union representatives in the following year. This meeting was arranged in accordance with instructions received from the Third (Communist) International, and representatives of various organizations throughout the world met at Moscow in July, 1921.

At this conference a permanent international organization under the name of Red International of Labour Unions was formed. A constitution was adopted, the preamble of which was as follows:—

The class struggle has now reached such a degree of development and acuteness that the working class, in order to successfully conduct and complete its struggle for emancipation, must fight as a solid, revolutionary class power, not only on a national but also on an international scale, against the bourgeoisie which despite the severe competition on the world market, is closely united in its hatred of the proletarian revolution and solidly welded against the slightest attempt of the proletariat to free itself from exploitation. Since the exploitation is international, the fight against it must have an international character. All internationals of labour unions, which existed up to the present moment, at best were but international statistical bureaus for mutual information. The International Secretariat of Labour Unions before the war was merely an information agency; it did not pursue any militant class aims. The Amsterdam International of Labour Unions is even less fit to deal with the issues at hand than its predecessor. The first was but an information office, the latter occupies itself with politics of the worst kind, with anti-proletarian, bourgeois politics. It sets forth the idea of class co-operation, social peace and peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism. In its essence it is an international of counteraction to the struggle for emancipation of the working class. Against this international of impotence, confusion, subservience to the bourgeoisie, such as the Amsterdam International is, we must oppose an international of revolutionary vigour, of class activity—an international which together with the Communist International will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat; an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth.

Such a militant labour union international can be built up only by revolutionary class unions, conscious of the purpose and methods of the defensive and offensive struggle against the class enemy. The problem history has put before the revolutionary unions requires the utmost concentration of power, unexampled intensity and the greatest self-sacrifice of the conscious vanguard elements of the working class.

The following are the aims and purposes of the Red International of Labour Unions:—

(1) To organize the large working mass in the whole world for the overthrow of capitalism, the emancipation of the toilers from oppression and exploitation and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth.

(2) To carry on a wide agitation and propaganda of the principles of revolutionary class struggle, social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat and revolutionary mass action for the purpose of overthrowing the capitalist system and the bourgeois state.

(3) To fight against the corruptive ulcer, gnawing at the vitals of the world labour union movement, of compromising with the bourgeoisie against the ideals of class co-operation and social peace and the absurd hopes for a peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism.

(4) To unite the revolutionary class elements of the world labour union movement and carry on decisive battle against the International Bureau of Labour attached to the League of Nations and against the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, which by their programs and tactics are but the bulwark of the world bourgeoisie.

(5) To co-ordinate and regulate the struggle of the working class in all countries and organize international demonstrations each time when the situation demands them.

(6) To take the initiative of international campaigns about prominent events of class struggle, to open subscription lists for the benefit of strikers in great social conflicts, etc.

Membership in the Red International is open to any revolutionary economic class organization if it accepts the following conditions:—

(1) Endorsement of the principles of revolutionary class struggle.

(2) Application of these principles in its daily struggle with capitalism and the bourgeois state.

(3) Recognition of the necessity of the overthrow of capitalism through the social revolution and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat for the transition period.

(4) Recognition and submission to the international proletarian discipline.

(5) Recognition and application of the decisions of the constituent congress of the Red International of Labour Unions.

(6) The rupture with the Amsterdam yellow international.

(7) United action with all the revolutionary organizations and the Communist Party of the country in all defensive and offensive activities against the bourgeoisie.

The original affiliate in Canada of the Communist International was the Workers' Party, the name being subsequently changed to the Communist Party of Canada, with headquarters in Toronto, an organization which recognized the Moscow body as the only real centre of world revolutionary activities. As an aid to the propagation of the communist doctrine among the youth of Canada, there was set up by the Communist International the Young Communists' League, a body which is affiliated with the Young Communist International at Moscow. For the younger children an organization known as the "Young Pioneers" was established. The official representative on the North American continent of the Red International of Labour Unions is the Trade Union Educational League. One of the objects of the League is the changing of the old-established plan of craft labour organization to what is known as industrial unionism, similar to the system in operation in the U.S.S.R.—one union for each industry. Adherents of the League, who are also members of trade unions, have endeavoured by a system called "boring from within" to secure support for the proposed plan of labour reorganization, following the accomplishment of which the organized workers on this continent are to be affiliated with the Red International.

WORKING CLASS UNITY

In accordance with the decision of the seventh congress of the International Federation of Trade Unions held in London, July, 1936, the National Centre of Russia, among others, was listed by name and urged to affiliate with the Federation. On October 28, 1936, a letter was sent to the Russian National Centre proposing direct negotiations for affiliation and later on this proposal was again sent by registered letter. Although the Russian Council met from April 28 to May 15, no immediate reply was received. In the address of Walter M. Citrine, president of the I.F.T.U., at the General Council meeting held in Warsaw, Poland, June 30 to July 3, he stated that "experience in the field of previous attempts at rapprochement with the Russian Trade Unions unfortunately led to the impression that the establishment of international trade union unity was not the earnest desire of the Russian unions, but that, as far as they were concerned, it was purely a political manoeuvre."

Notwithstanding the fact that the Russian trade unions had not replied to previous letters, the General Council of the I.F.T.U. decided on the continuation of its efforts to bring about unity and on July 8, 1937, despatched a letter to the Russian National Trade Union Centre inviting it to open negotiations and affiliate with the Federation.

During the sessions of the sixty-ninth annual meeting of the British Trades Union Congress, held in Norwich, September 6-10, 1937, a resolution was introduced which in part instructed the "General Council to take immediate steps to secure the widest possible measure of collaboration between all working class bodies, both nationally and internationally" and regarded "an immediate national conference of all parties to consider a short program, on the lines adopted by the Labour Party, as being the first step to implement this decision." In speaking on the resolution, the mover, as reported in the Congress proceedings, declared, "The Communist desires to go forward from capitalism to a democracy that will crush the power of the capitalist to exploit, and will give full freedom to the worker to live without any capitalist class over him whatever. But the Communists are sufficiently serious students of history to know that as a step towards that goal they have to join forces with all who are prepared to put up a fight to stop the capitalist onslaught on the democratic liberties, limited as they are, which we have managed to force out of the capitalist class up to the present time." The seconder of the resolution in closing his address stated, "Let us not forget that we want to bring in a policy that will lead to Socialism. I believe unity can bring that improvement in the working class immediately, and at the same time it can help us on the road to the socialism that we need."

When the vote was taken, the president of the Congress, on a show of hands, declared the resolution defeated by a large majority.

RUSSIAN UNIONS PREPARED TO NEGOTIATE AFFILIATION

When the executive of the International Federation of Trade Unions met in Paris, France, September 15-16, 1937, it had before it the reply of the Central Council of Russian Trade Unions to requests that the Council open negotiations for affiliation. In the letter the Central Council of the Russian Unions expressed its preparedness to negotiate with the I.F.T.U. regarding affiliation. The general secretary of the Federation was instructed to inform the Central Council that the I.F.T.U. executive was also prepared to open negotiations. To meet the representatives of the Central Council of the Russian Trade Unions the executive of the Federation appointed the following delegation: Leon Jouhaux (France), vice-president; Walter Schevenels, general secretary; and G. Stolz, assistant secretary to accompany the delegation).

On November 23, 1937, a meeting of the two delegations (the Russian delegation being composed of M. M. Shvernik, P. G. Moskatov and K. I. Nikolaieva) took place in Moscow, at the headquarters of the Central Council of the Trade Unions of the U.S.S.R. in the Palace of Labour. After an exchange of views the delegations accepted the fundamental conditions of unity and each delegation immediately undertook to submit the essential clauses arising from these conversations to the Presidium of the Central Council of the Trade Unions of the U.S.S.R. and the executive and General Council of the International Federation of Trade Unions.

COMMUNIST PARTY OF CANADA HOLDS EIGHTH CONVENTION

The eighth convention of the Communist Party of Canada was held in Toronto, October 8-12, 1937. This was the first convention of the party since the courts declared it an unlawful association in 1931, and, according to press reports, was attended by approximately 450 delegates. The feature of the convention was the address of Tim Buck, general secretary of the Communist Party of Canada, who termed as reactionaries some of the leaders in the industrial and political life of Canada. Others to address the delegates were Earl Browder, secretary of the Communist Party of the United States, and Alfred Costes, one of the leaders of the Communist Party in France.

Recommendations contained in some of the resolutions adopted were: (1) enactment of legislation providing for the right to organize; (2) opposition to the granting of injunctions in industrial disputes; (3) publication of the names of manufacturers of war material, together with the profit made and also the sources and destinations of all armaments and war materials; (4) assistance to the Spanish government and people; (5) support of the Chinese people; (6) the declaration of profound sympathy with the fight of the people of Alberta for increased purchasing power and a lower cost of living; (7) the immediate and adequate relief assistance by the federal Government to those in the drought area in Western Canada, a comprehensive program of irrigation, water conservation, tree planting and re-grassing; (8) endorsement of the request of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada for an investigation of Nazi activities in the Dominion; (9) the development and strengthening of the Young Communist League; (10) intensive organization work among women; (11) the maintaining, strengthening and improving of the daily and weekly Clarion; (12) utilization of radio to reach the masses; (13) publication in the Clarion Weekly and in the Saturday edition of the Daily Clarion of an educational corner which will provide a weekly lesson with suggested reading in Marxist-Leninist theory for beginners; and (14) strengthening the personnel for educational and publicity activities.

TIM BUCK RE-ELECTED GENERAL SECRETARY

Tim Buck, who has been connected with the Communist Party since it was organized in 1920, was re-elected general secretary. The duties of leadership of the party falls on the general secretary, as there is no chairman.

YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE

The Young Communist League, which was instituted on July 22, 1922, was organized for the purpose of inculcating communist doctrine in the minds of the youth of the Dominion. Subsequently the League became an affiliate of the Young Communist International, the headquarters of which are in Moscow. The platform of the Young Communist League is as follows:—

1. To penetrate the mass of the working class youth with communist agitation and education and to draw them away from the youth organizations established by the capitalists, such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, church clubs, Y.M.C.A., etc.

2. To conduct a militant campaign against capitalist militarism among the youth who form the bulk of the capitalist armies.

3. To link up with the militant section of the working class in the unions and work for the conversion of the weak craft unions into strong industrial unions capable of defending the workers against the offensive of the capitalists on their standard of living and for the overthrow of capitalism. To pay attention to the economic needs of the working class youth by demanding: (a) prohibition of all children from engaging in any kind of labour until they have reached the age of sixteen; (b) young workers to receive the same wages as adult workers for the same work.

The chief officer of the League is William Kashtan, national secretary, 8 Wellington St E., Toronto, Ont.

YOUNG PIONEERS

For the purpose of teaching Communism to the younger children of the Dominion, an organization called the Young Pioneers has been established. This body, being under the jurisdiction of the Young Communist League, has no national officers.

XVI. ORGANIZED WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Information Concerning Organized Wage-Earners throughout the World—International Federation of Trade Unions—Objects of the I.F.T.U.—Executive Meeting of the Federation—General Council Meeting in Warsaw—Affiliation of the American Federation of Labor with the I.F.T.U.—International Trade Federations—Membership of the I.F.T.U.—International Trade Secretariats—Chief Officers of the Federation—Other International Organizations—Sixty-ninth British Trades Union Congress—Chief Officers of the Congress—American Federation of Labor—Membership of the Federation—Affiliated Organizations—Officers of the Federation—Secretaries of Departments—Canadian Organizers.

In this chapter the Department desires to present such reliable information as it was possible to secure concerning organized wage-earners throughout the world. The figures in the accompanying table were supplied by the General Secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, with the exception of membership for Canada and the United States, which was taken from departmental records, and represent the number of organized workers at the latest date for which particulars were available. The total number of all classes of organized workers for the 70 countries appearing in the appended table was 54,367,375.

As has been mentioned in earlier issues of this report, there is in the United States, Great Britain, Canada and other English-speaking countries, a more clearly defined limitation to the scope of trade union organization than that which prevails in some other countries, where there are organized bodies operating along other than purely industrial lines, the membership of which is not confined strictly to wage-earners.

With this exception being borne in mind, the figures for the various countries are given as follows:—

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The International Federation of Trade Unions, which had its origin in 1901, ceased to function for the duration of the World War. The convention scheduled to be held in San Francisco, Calif., in 1914, was cancelled. The American Federation of Labor, believing that it was incompatible with the then United States policy of neutrality to send per capita tax to Berlin, headquarters of the Federation, discontinued paying its contributions. Subsequently efforts were made by the national trade union centres of Great Britain, United States and France to have the office of the I.F.T.U. transferred to a neutral country, but without success. In July, 1919, following the conclusion of the war, there was convened in Amsterdam, Holland, a representative international meeting at which delegates were present from eleven countries, including the United States. As a result of this conference, a new federation, with the same name as the previous organization, was established, the affairs of the old federation having been closed out. The American Federation of Labor, although represented at the inaugural meeting in Amsterdam, did not continue in affiliation, claiming that the rate of per capita tax was too high, and also objecting to the issuance by the executive officers of declarations of policy with which the American Federation was at variance. The Canadian organized labour movement, as represented by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, is in affiliation with the International Federation, having been admitted to membership in June, 1920, since which time officers of the Congress have been on the general council. In support of its policies and program the International Federation of Trade Unions maintains a press service, in which the activities of organized labour throughout the world are recorded.

OBJECTS OF THE I.F.T.U.

The objects of the International Federation of Trade Unions, as revised at the meeting in June, 1924, are as follows:—

- (a) To bring about the unity of the international working class by developing closer relations between the trade unions in all countries.
- (b) The development of International Trade Secretariats accepting the International Federation of Trade Union's platform.
- (c) To promote the interests and activities of the trade union movement nationally and internationally.
- (d) To carry on any activities of common interest to the trade unions.
- (e) To promote the development of international social legislation.
- (f) To promote workers' education.
- (g) To avert war and combat reaction.

The methods by which the Federation seeks to achieve its objects are:—

- (a) Close co-operation with the affiliated national centres and the International Trade Secretariats.
- (b) Co-operation with other organizations, in so far as such co-operation appears useful, in the interests of the trade union movement.
- (c) Giving support to trade union activities in the affiliated countries, when requested by the national centres concerned.
- (d) Giving support to trade union activities in countries not yet affiliated.
- (e) Mediation in any cases of dispute within the trade union movement.
- (f) The compilation of statistics.
- (g) The collection and compilation of information concerning the trade union movement and social legislation.
- (h) The issuance of a periodical and other publications of interest to the trade union movement.
- (i) The protection of the workers' interests in immigration and emigration.
- (j) Propaganda in favour of arbitration and disarmament.

EXECUTIVE MEETINGS OF INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The first executive meeting of the I.F.T.U. at which all members were present, was held in Paris, France, February 17-18, 1937. The report on activities for presentation to the general council meeting was discussed and, after slight amendments, was adopted. That part of the agenda dealing with the 40-hour week was agreed to by the executive. It was decided to convene a meeting of economic experts delegated from all national centres to deal inter alia, with the problem of raw materials, and that upon receipt of their report the general council would decide on further action in this field.

At a meeting held in Paris, France, on April 14-16, 1937, the experts presented their reports on the three following subjects: (1) the practical application hitherto of the national labour plans and demands for economic planning in the different countries, and whether any contradiction exists between them and the I.F.T.U. demands for economic planning; (2) slump prevention; (3) raw materials.

At the same time detailed reports on all three points were submitted by the I.F.T.U., in addition to which some national centres had supplied reports which also served as a basis for discussion. Concrete proposals were made for the future treatment of the different aspects of the questions and the practical measures to be taken for continuous study and the solution of international problems.

A meeting of the executive was held in Paris, France, on April 29-30, 1937, at which strong protest was made against the alleged atrocities committed by the Spanish rebels in the Basque provinces. Final arrangements were made for the holding of the meeting of the general council in Warsaw, Poland, June 30 to July 3, 1937.

As has been stated in a previous chapter, the meeting of the executive in Paris, France, September 15-16, 1937, dealt with the reply from the Russian unions expressing preparedness to negotiate with the I.F.T.U. regarding affiliation. Economic questions and the situation in Spain took up considerable time of the meeting.

The executive, at its meeting held in Paris, France, November 17-18, 1937, dealt with the question of differences in the Spanish trade union movement and it was decided to hold a special executive meeting in Paris at the beginning of December to consider the Spanish situation. Consideration was also given to the situation in China. The date of the next general council meeting was set for May 16-21, 1938, at Oslo, Norway. A second meeting of experts on economic planning was agreed upon, to be held during the latter part of January, 1938.

The special meeting of the executive, as previously arranged, was held in Paris, France, December 7-8, 1937. After hearing representatives from both sides in the dispute in the Spanish trade union movement, it was decided to send a delegation to Spain in order to bring to a successful conclusion the conciliation action which had been started.

GENERAL COUNCIL MEETING OF THE I.F.T.U.

The general council of the I.F.T.U. met in Warsaw, Poland, on June, 1937, with 43 delegates present, representing sixteen affiliated national centres. In addition there were eighteen delegates representing thirteen International Trade Secretariats, while fraternal delegates were present representing the Labour and Socialist International, Danzig, Estonia and the American Federation of Labor.

In his address the president, Sir Walter M. Citrine, referred to the progress made by the Federation and to the large increase in membership, there being sixteen million members as against fourteen million in the previous year. He stated that "two fundamental demands to-day determined the activities of the international trade union movement, these being the demands for the 40-hour week and for holidays with pay". On the question of affiliation of the American Federation of Labor, Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation gave a comprehensive account of the position within the American trade union movement. The affiliation of the American Federation of Labor was decided upon by the unanimous adoption of a resolution stating that "the I.F.T.U. was not in any way judging the internal differences in the United States trade union movement and expressing the hope that the affiliation of the American Federation of Labor would help forward the re-unification of all sections of the trade union movement of the United States". The I.F.T.U. also offered its co-operation to settle the conflict in a spirit of conciliation. The affiliation of the American Federation of Labor to the International Federation of Trade Unions is to be entirely without prejudice to the affiliation of United States unions to International Trade Secretariats recognized by the I.F.T.U.

On behalf of the American Federation of Labor, Matthew Woll expressed thanks for the decision as regards affiliation.

After a lengthy discussion it was agreed that the energies of the trade unions in the individual countries, and particularly within the International Labour Office, should be especially directed toward obtaining an all-round forty-hour week convention.

On the invitation of the Norwegian National Trade Union Centre the delegates decided to hold the next I.F.T.U. general council meeting in Oslo, Norway, in 1938.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE FEDERATIONS

The International Federation of Trade Unions has among its many affiliated organizations a number of International trade federations of labour unions, each of which comprises the members of a particular craft or class of labour. Twenty-eight out of the existing twenty-nine federations are affiliates of the I.F.T.U. All of these federations have their headquarters in Europe, and include in their affiliations the trade unions of many countries, the combined memberships in some instances being over a million. Nine of these international trade federations, according to the latest information, have in affiliation labour organizations which have local branches in Canada, their names and those of the affiliates with Canadian branches being: (1) International Federation of Radio-telegraphists, affiliate, Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; (2) International Clothing Workers' Federation, affiliates, International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, International Fur Workers' Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; (3) International Miners' Federation, affiliate, United Mine Workers of America; (4) International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliate, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; (5) International Union of Federations of Workers in the Food and Drink Trades, affiliate, Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union; (6) International Federation of Building and Woodworkers, affiliate, the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; (7) International Secretariat of Painters and Kindred Trades, affiliate, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America; (8) International Metal Workers' Federation, affiliate, International Association of Machinists; and (9) Postal Employees' International, affiliate, Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada. There is one international federation which has in affiliation an organization operating in the United States, but which has no branches in Canada, viz., the Universal Alliance of Diamond Workers, affiliate, Diamond Workers' Protective Union of America. All of the above-mentioned affiliates of the respective international trade federations, except the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, are identified with the American Federation of Labor. The names of the remaining eighteen International Trade Secretariats are as follows: International Federation of Bookbinders and Kindred Trades; International Typographical Secretariat; International Federation of General Factory Workers; International Union of Hairdressers; International Federation of Glassworkers; International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers; International Landworkers' Federation; International Federation of Lithographers and Kindred Trades; International Federation of Workers in Public Services; International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees; International Secretariat of Stone Workers; International Secretariat of Tobacco Workers; International Federation of Textile Workers' Associations; International Federation of Pottery Workers; International Federation of Teachers; International Federation of Boot and Shoe Operatives and Leather Workers; International Federation of Hatters; International Federation of Civil Servants; and International Federation of Enginemen and Firemen.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE I.F.T.U.

In 1904, the earliest year for which figures are available, the International Federation of Trades Unions comprised the national centres (chief labour organizations) of 14 countries, with a combined membership of 2,372,975. Following the Amsterdam Congress in 1919, the membership of the Federation was given at 17,633,000, comprised in 14 national centres. In 1936 the membership was shown at 13,638,887, and the affiliated national centres 28.

At the close of the year the membership of the International Federation of Trades Unions was approximately 19,500,000, an increase of 6,500,000 as compared with the membership in December, 1936. This membership is somewhat higher than the total shown by the accompanying table but the figures for all the countries were not available as at December 31, 1937.

The exceptional increase in the membership of the I.F.T.U. is the result of a general upward trend in trade unionism, which has occurred without exception in every country.

Where later figures were not available, those shown for 1936 are repeated in the following table:—

Argentina	280,000	Luxemburg	11,800

Schevenels; and assistant secretary, G. Stolz.

The headquarters of the Federation are located at 9 d'Orsay Ave., Paris, VII, France.

OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

There are certain other international organizations of socialist and labour parties in various countries throughout the world having for their objects the improvement of social and labour conditions through political action. The present organizations developed out of the movement which originated in the organization of the International Workingmen's Association, known as the First International, founded in 1864 and dissolved in 1876. In addition to the International Federation of Trade Unions, which is discussed in the present chapter, there are six other important international organizations, as follows: Christian, concentrated in the Christian International of Utrecht (referred to in chapter VII, National Catholic Unions); Labour and Socialist International, which works in close co-operation with the I.F.T.U., there being joint committees on various subjects; Communist, concentrated in the Red International of Labour Unions, of Moscow; Anarchist, concentrated in the International Working Men's Association, Madrid (formerly Berlin); Independent, concentrated in the International Federation of Neutral Trade Unions, Utrecht; and the trade unions of the two Americas, concentrated in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, Washington, D.C.

SIXTY-NINTH BRITISH TRADES UNION CONGRESS

The sixty-ninth British Trades Union Congress was held at Norwich, September 6-10, 1937, and was attended by 623 delegates, representing 4,008,647 members, comprised in 214 local unions.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was represented by Carl Berg, secretary, Alberta Federation of Labour. The representatives of the American Federation of Labor were W. C. Birthright (Journeyman Barbers' International Union) and John B. Haggerty (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders). The British Trades Union Congress was represented by F. J. Hancock (Mineworkers' Federation) at the Trades and Labour Congress convention, held in Ottawa, September, 1937, and by J. C. Little (Amalgamated Engineering Union) and W. Kean (Gold, Silver and Allied Trades) at the 1937 convention of the American Federation of Labor at Denver, Colo.

CHIEF OFFICERS OF THE CONGRESS

Tewson, Smith Square, London, S.W.1.

CANADIAN BRANCHES NOT NOW CONNECTED WITH THE B.T.U.C.

For many years there were in Canada branches of organizations with headquarters in the United Kingdom affiliated with the British Trades Union Congress. The connection of the last of these branches with British organizations was severed in 1925 when the Canadian locals of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners were granted complete self-government, becoming the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, which organization is now merged with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The American Federation of Labor held its fifty-seventh annual convention in Denver, Colo., October 4-15, 1937. According to the report of the credentials committee, there were in attendance 466 accredited delegates, representing 83 international and national unions, 4 departments, 34 state branches, 101 central bodies and 68 local trade and federal labour unions, and 3 fraternal delegates, one representing the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and two representing the British Trades Union Congress.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

The membership of the American Federation in 1881, the year in which it was formed, was less than 5,000. In presenting his report to the 1937 convention the secretary-treasurer gave the average paid-up membership of the Federation at the close of its fiscal year, August 31, 1937, as 2,860,933. The membership of the suspended national and international unions or of the two which withdrew during the year is not included in the total for 1937. The average paid-up memberships for the past forty-one years have been as follows:—

1912.....	1,770,145	1933.....	2,126,796

1917.....	2,371,434

In reporting on the membership of the Federation, the secretary-treasurer, as in the past, pointed out that national and international unions are required to pay per capita tax upon their fully paid-up memberships and that therefore the membership does not include all members who were unemployed during the fiscal year.

AFFILIATED ORGANIZATIONS

The total number of affiliates of the American Federation at the close of the last fiscal year (August 31, 1937) included 100 national and international unions, representing 27,236 local branch unions and 1,406 local trade and federal labour unions, making in all 28,642 branches. Four departments, 49 state federations and 738 city central bodies were also under charter from the Federation.

The local branches which constitute the national and international organizations are the source from which nearly all funds are secured to carry on every activity in the labour movement. They also supply the finances for and constitute the state federations, city central bodies and local department councils. There were 712 of these councils, the charters for which are derived from the federation departments.

XVII. COMMITTEE FOR INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATION

Standing at Beginning of 1937—Additional Affiliations and Organizational Progress Recorded During the Year—Developments in Controversy with American Federation of Labor—Canadian Membership of C.I.O. Unions.

STANDING AT BEGINNING OF 1937

Reference has been made in previous issues of this report to the formation in November, 1935, of the Committee for Industrial Organization. The unions originally represented on the Committee included the United Mine Workers of America, the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America, the United Textile Workers of America and the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. In addition, officials of the International Typographical Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, acting in their individual capacities and not as representatives of their unions, co-operated from the outset in the C.I.O. campaign to organize the unorganized workers in the mass production industries. During 1936, as stated in last year's report, six more unions affiliated with the C.I.O., as follows: Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America; Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America; United Rubber Workers of America; International Union United Automobile Workers of America; Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; and United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America. Thus, at the beginning of 1937 the Committee for Industrial Organization was composed of twelve affiliated national and international unions and two co-operating international unions.

ADDITIONAL AFFILIATIONS AND ORGANIZATIONAL PROGRESS RECORDED DURING THE YEAR

During 1937 the following twenty-four national and international unions, some of which were newly-organized and others of which had already been in existence for some time, affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization: United Shoe Workers of America; American Communications Association; Steel Workers' Organizing Committee; American Newspaper Guild; Textile Workers' Organizing Committee; Aluminum Workers of America; Transport Workers' Union of America; Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians; National Leather Workers' Association; United Retail and Wholesale Employees of America; United Office and Professional Workers of America; International Fur Workers' Union; United Federal Workers of America; National Association of Die Casting Workers; State, County and Municipal Workers of America; United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America; International Woodworkers of America; International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union; National Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association; Toy and Novelty Workers' Organizing Committee; Optical Workers' Organizing Committee; Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee; United Furniture Workers of America; National Maritime Union. Throughout the year the C.I.O. was extremely active in organizing unorganized workers and its affiliated unions signed a large number of contracts with employers. According to a report received from the headquarters of the Committee for Industrial Organization in Washington, D.C., on March 8, 1938, there were in affiliation with the C.I.O., apart from the two co-operating international unions, a total of 38 national and international unions, with a combined membership of approximately 4,000,000.

DEVELOPMENTS IN CONTROVERSY WITH AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

As stated in last year's report, the following ten unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization were suspended in September, 1936, by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor: United Mine Workers of America; Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers of America; United Textile Workers of America; International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America; Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America; International Union United Automobile Workers of America; and United Rubber Workers of America.

On March 9, 1937, following a meeting of representatives of fifteen unions affiliated with the C.I.O., it was announced that the C.I.O. executive officers had been authorized "to issue certificates of affiliation to national, international, state, regional, city central bodies and local groups whenever it is deemed such action is advisable."

Meeting in special conference on May 25 at Cincinnati, Ohio, three hundred delegates of unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor adopted the following recommendations of the Federation's executive council: that an assessment of one cent per month per member, effective June 1, be levied upon all unions affiliated with the Federation, such levy to be on a voluntary basis pending formal ratification by the regular convention of the Federation in October; that unions be chartered by the Federation in the fields of the ten suspended C.I.O. affiliates; that all national and international unions affiliated with the Federation require their local branches to become affiliated with state federations of labour and city central bodies; that all local branches of unions affiliated with the C.I.O. be expelled from state federations of labour and city central bodies.

The Committee for Industrial Organization replied on May 30 with a declaration that the C.I.O. soon would move into every industry "which has no labour organization or where existing unions are not taking care of their members." The C.I.O., it was added, had no intention of seeking a foothold in fields occupied by the building crafts unions or the railroad brotherhoods.

At its annual convention, held in Denver, Colo., the American Federation of Labor on October 11 authorized its executive council to expel any of the suspended C.I.O. unions "which may refuse to return to the ranks" of the Federation. At the same time the Federation's standing committee was authorized to continue in readiness to confer with the C.I.O.

On October 12 the Committee for Industrial Organization, assembled in conference at Atlantic City, N.J., in a telegram to the A.F. of L. convention proposed that 100 representatives of each body meet at once to consider "the methods and means whereby a unified labour movement can be brought about in America." The telegram said in part: "The C.I.O. states as its very definite policy that it is entirely in favour of a unified labour movement. However, the C.I.O. has proven conclusively during the past two years that its basic policies of industrial unionism are essential for the organization of labour. Any compromise of the principles of the C.I.O. would in effect be compromising the very existence of organized labour. The C.I.O. has added over 4,000,000 workers to the organized labour movement. A unified labour movement in this country, with the present combined strength of approximately 8,000,000 workers, offers vast possibilities for the future strength and position of labour."

The A.F. of L. replied to the C.I.O. proposal with an offer to enlarge its three-man standing committee to a "reasonable" size for the purpose of meeting a C.I.O. committee of similar size. Finally, however, the C.I.O. named a negotiating committee of ten to meet the Federation's standing committee of three.

The joint conference began on October 25 in Washington, D.C. The C.I.O. made the following proposals as a basis for peace: (1) that the A.F. of L. adopt a basic policy that workers in mass production, marine, public utilities, service and basic fabricating industries be organized on an industrial basis; (2) that the C.I.O. become a new and completely autonomous department of the A.F. of L., with a constitution of its own and sole jurisdiction over the aforementioned workers; (3) that a convention attended by representatives of all A.F. of L. and C.I.O. unions be called in the near future to ratify such an agreement and adopt regulations designed to put the proposal into effect. The A.F. of L. countered with an offer to reinstate the ten suspended C.I.O. affiliates and to arrange conferences between the new C.I.O. unions and A.F. of L. affiliates to adjust jurisdictional disputes. While reaffirming its refusal to issue industrial union charters in the basic and mass-production industries, the Federation went on to propose that organization and administrative policies not mutually agreed upon be referred to the next A.F. of L. convention for final decision and that in the meantime both groups unite in an aggressive organizing campaign among unorganized workers along craft and industrial lines "as circumstances and conditions may warrant." These proposals were rejected by the C.I.O. committee on the grounds that their acceptance would force the ten suspended unions to "desert and betray" the 22 new affiliates of the C.I.O. It was agreed, however, that negotiations should be resumed on November 4.

When the committees resumed negotiations, it became apparent that each side was willing to make concessions in order that peace should be restored. At the conclusion of the third day of conferences it was announced that progress had been made but that, owing to previous engagements of some members of the committees, negotiations would have to be temporarily postponed.

On November 29 the committees again resumed negotiations and it was decided to discuss the principal points at issue under the following headings: (1) the C.I.O. contention that all the workers in each large industry should belong to one industry-wide union without regard to traditional A.F. of L. craft lines; (2) the C.I.O.'s insistence that it remain a semi-independent agency under the A.F. of L. if unity should be achieved and, on the other hand, the A.F. of L. demand that the C.I.O. be dissolved; (3) the C.I.O.'s request that the powers of the A.F. of L. executive council be curbed by amendment to the Federation constitution if peace be made; (4) the machinery to be set up to make an agreement effective; (5) the number of votes to which the C.I.O. unions would be entitled in a joint convention that would be called to ratify any agreement that might be reached. It was finally decided that President Green of the A.F. of L. and Chairman Lewis of the C.I.O. should take personal charge of negotiations.

The two negotiators met first on December 2. In subsequent conversations they failed to reach an understanding. Their failure was reported to the joint committee on December 21, and the committee adjourned without plans for further meetings.

CANADIAN MEMBERSHIP OF C.I.O. UNIONS

During 1937 there was extensive activity on the part of the Committee for Industrial Organization in the organization of unorganized Canadian workers in the mass-production industries. At the end of the year the Canadian membership of international unions affiliated with the C.I.O. was as follows: United Mine Workers of America, 19,000; International Union United Automobile Workers of America, 10,000; Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, 8,929; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 8,014; Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 6,505; International Typographical Union (co-operating), 4,388; International Woodworkers of America, 3,000; United Rubber Workers of America, 2,938; International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, 2,500; United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union (co-operating), 2,035; International Fur Workers' Union, 1,831; United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, 1,500; American Newspaper Guild, 400; International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, 160. A return showing a Canadian membership of 36, comprised in 2 local unions, was made on behalf of the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee, but in the main the newly-organized Canadian textile workers have been recorded as members of local unions directly chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, there being at the end of 1937 a total of 9 such directly chartered local unions of textile workers, with a combined membership of 4,479. During the year a conference had been held between representatives of Canadian locals of the T.W.O.C. and the executive of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada with a view to having the Canadian local unions of textile workers directly chartered by the Congress. This procedure was approved by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor and by Chairman Sidney Hillman of the Textile Workers' Organizing Committee, and after the conference President P. M. Draper of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada issued a statement to the effect that the executive committee of the Congress had decided to issue direct charters covering textile workers domiciled in any part of Canada. In addition the C.I.O. had 2 directly chartered unions with a combined membership of 206.

XVIII. INCIDENTS OF INTEREST TO ORGANIZED WORKERS

Hamilton Trades and Labour Council (A. F. of L.) Charter Removed—Right to Organize and Collective Bargaining—Fred Bancroft Named Labour's Representative on Ontario Industry and Labour Board—No Closed Shop in the Province of Quebec—Printers Observe Diamond Jubilee—Canadian Pacific Railway Company and Its Railway and Steamship Clerks Have Joint Committee to Dispose of Disputes.—Compulsory Incorporation Opposed—Deceased Trade Union Officials.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR CHARTER TO HAMILTON TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCIL REMOVED

On May 7, 1937, John Noble, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, visited Hamilton, Ont., and removed the Federation's charter, granted in 1909, from the hall of the Hamilton Trades and Labour Council, while that body was in session. Questioned as to his authority for removing the charter, Mr. Noble produced a telegram which he stated was from the president of the American Federation of Labor and was the authority for his action. Before he removed the warrant a lengthy debate occurred, and when all efforts failed to have this drastic action delayed until the delegates could get specific instructions from their locals, opponents of the procedure demanded a roll call vote. The result of this vote was 51 for retaining the status of the old organization and 22 in support of Mr. Noble. Replying to a question of one of the delegates, Mr. Noble named as unions suspended by the executive of the A.F. of L. because of their C.I.O. affiliations the following: Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union; United Textile Workers of America; United Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers; International Typographical Union; International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Steel Workers' Organizing Committee; United Automobile Workers; and United Rubber Workers. The delegate from the hatters' organization drew attention to the fact that while his union had been sympathetic toward the C.I.O., it had not officially affiliated with that body. After a long discussion, Mr. Noble withdrew from the meeting, taking the A.F. of L. warrant with him and accompanied by those who had supported his action. A new council was immediately instituted, with Mr. Noble presiding. Those who remained continued in session under the warrant received from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. (Fourteen other trades and labour councils in Canada hold warrants from both the Trades and Labour Congress and the American Federation of Labor.) According to a statement given to the press under date of May 10, 1937, by the secretary of the continuing group, President Draper of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada had been invited to attend the next regular meeting to be held on May 21. The purpose of Mr. Draper's visit was to find a solution to the situation which would be satisfactory to all.

The labour situation in Hamilton was further complicated when the president of the continuing section of the council was automatically eliminated from that office by the withdrawal of the Hamilton Civic General Staff Association, of which body he was a delegate.

On May 14 a conference of labour leaders met in Toronto and after a lengthy discussion dealing with the split in the Hamilton Trades and Labour Council, it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of P. M. Draper and R. J. Tallon, president and secretary, respectively, of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

President Draper met the executives of both groups in Hamilton on May 23, and after considerable discussion a recommendation for a joint executive was adopted. This recommendation was later approved by a general meeting of accredited delegates. The officers elected at the later session were to hold office until July, when the annual meeting would be held. All unions were ordered to submit new credentials to the chairman of the executive committee on or before June 3, and these credentials were to be approved by the executive before any delegate would be permitted to take a seat as a member of the council. This latter action, however, was the undoing of the agreement which was approved two weeks previously. Instead of a regular meeting of the council, there were two separate meetings, with the executive of the council which had been approved on May 23 assembled in one room and the prospective delegates, who were refused seats in the council meeting, gathered in another room.

From press accounts of the meeting, it was revealed that delegates from a number of locals of A.F. of L. affiliates were refused seats, as well as the delegates from all the clothing workers' and steel workers' locals, the latter organizations being under suspension of the A.F. of L. Another meeting was arranged for July 9, but again the delegates formed into two groups. One group, led by the president of the reorganized council, left the meeting in protest against the alleged unauthorized seating of delegates. The other group adopted a resolution sponsored by Sam Lawrence, member of the Ontario Legislature for Hamilton East, asking P. M. Draper, president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, to come again to Hamilton and seek to reunite the two groups.

The Secretary-treasurer of the Congress informed all delegates of the Hamilton Trades and Labour Council that a special meeting would be held on August 6 for the purpose of reaching a settlement of labour differences in the council. In the absence of President Draper, the secretary-treasurer of the Congress, R. J. Tallon, attended this special meeting in Hamilton, but failed to settle the differences. On September 3 President Draper of the Trades and Labour Congress again visited Hamilton but was unable to unite the two factions, which had split on the C.I.O.-A.F. of L. controversy. Sam Lawrence was named president of the Congress council.

At the end of the year the two councils were still functioning.

LABOUR'S RIGHT TO ORGANIZE AND BARGAIN COLLECTIVELY

Hon. Norman McL. Rogers, federal Minister of Labour, recently made the following declaration regarding labour's right to organize:—

"To deny the right of workmen to combine in any lawful organization they desire, for the promotion of their common welfare, is an open invitation to extremists to preach the futility of collective bargaining as an alternative to direct action.

"The right of association for legitimate purposes should be respected in the national interest and labour should not be denied the means of organizing for collective bargaining.

"The right of employers to organize for all lawful purposes is not questioned in any quarter.

"Employers are not entitled in the same breath to protest against governmental regulation of industry and to deny to labour its right to resort to legitimate measures of self-help through voluntary associations."

The minister added that the services of his department are available at all times to adjust disputes "which are not resolved directly by the method of conference."

In replying to the presentation of legislative requests by the Quebec Provincial Executive of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada on February 17, 1937, Premier Maurice Duplessis made the following observations: (1) prevention of workers from organizing associations to protect their legitimate interests must cease; (2) employers, either individually or collectively, must not hinder unionization of their workers; and (3) the payment of lower wages in this province to men employed in the same industries and doing the same work as their fellow-workers in other sections of the Dominion must cease.

Addressing the delegates to the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America meeting in Montreal, Hon. Thomas J. Coonan, Minister without Portfolio in the cabinet of premier Duplessis, asserted that the workers' right to organize was fully recognized by the Quebec provincial Government. He further stated that "the social welfare of the working classes is the greatest problem of all governments to-day and their best protection has been the main desire of the administration headed by Premier Maurice Duplessis."

Shortly after his appointment as chairman of the Ontario Labour and Industry Board, Mr. E. J. Young made the following statement on the right of collective bargaining: "I recognize the right of labour to bargain collectively through their own representatives, whether they belong to a union or not."

FRED BANCROFT NAMED LABOUR'S REPRESENTATIVE ON ONTARIO INDUSTRY AND LABOUR BOARD

During the 1937 session of the Ontario Legislature, legislation was enacted making provision for the setting up of an Industry and Labour Board for the province. The board was established early in May, 1937, with E. J. Young, Weyburn, Sask., as chairman, and Fred Bancroft, a member of the Toronto local of the Pattern Makers' League of North America, as labour representative. The new board is empowered, with the consent of the Lieutenant-Governor in Council, to make regulations governing its proceedings and has full powers to hold public inquiries in order to obtain any information required by the department concerning wages, hours of labour or other conditions of employment in any industry when so authorized by the Minister of Labour. The board is to administer such statutes as may be assigned to it. These will include the Minimum Wage Act, Industrial Standards Act, One Day's Rest in Seven Act, etc.

NO CLOSED SHOP IN THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

On July 19, 1937, Premier Maurice Duplessis declared that there would be "no closed shop for the province of Quebec. Workmen have the right to organize, but neither the international unions nor the Catholic unions will be permitted to establish a closed shop in this province."

"I pointed out to those who came to see us in regard to the strike in the newsprint industry that the present government, though in office only ten months, had passed two important pieces of labour legislation at the last session of the legislature. The two laws are for the protection of workmen. We wish workmen to receive reasonable conditions as to work, and reasonable wages, which should be established with regard to conditions in other provinces.

"I further pointed out to them that, for the first time since Confederation, we adopted legislation at the demand of the Minister of Labour, Hon. William Tremblay, and prepared by him, to recognize the right of workmen to unite, and we imposed severe sanctions against those employers who wish to deprive the workmen of the exercise of those rights. The workmen have a right to unite, but union should be based on liberty within order, on order and respect for order, and of laws. The union should never be superior to the rights of workmen to work and consequently in the province of Quebec there will be no closed shop, neither for the international unions nor for the Catholic unions."

The Premier added: "The closed shop is the cause of trouble, it is an attack upon the rights which our workmen have to work freely. It is an attempt to deny to workmen rights of freedom of action as to whether or not they wish to belong to a union. Furthermore, to seek to create a closed shop is to create a State within a State, and the present Government will not endure that condition. It is for the representatives of the people and Government officers to direct the administration of affairs of the province, and not others. In this labour question, it seems to us that partizanship of a political nature should disappear, and all should unite to re-establish a reign of justice, within the limits of the law, order and a democratic regime."

PRINTERS OBSERVE DIAMOND JUBILEE

Montreal local No. 176 of the International Typographical Union celebrated its diamond jubilee at a dinner held in the Mount Royal Hotel on December 4, 1937, at which approximately five hundred members and friends were present. The chairman of the joint committee of the printing industry took this occasion to announce that the new collective labour agreement, which would become effective about January 3, 1938, would benefit printers in the Montreal zone to the extent of $177,000 in increased wages. Toasts to both His Majesty the King and the President of the United States were proposed, signifying the international character of the union. A message of greeting and goodwill was received from Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union. Among those who addressed the gathering were: His Worship Mayor Adhemar Raynault of Montreal; Raoul Trepanier, president of the Montreal Trades and Labour Council; John Bassett, president of the Gazette; C. L. Sibley, president of the Herald; and S. Morgan-Powell, of the Star. A cordial message of congratulations was brought to the gathering by J. W. Blaquiere on behalf of the French-speaking printers.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY COMPANY AND ITS RAILWAY AND STEAMSHIP CLERKS HAVE JOINT COMMITTEE TO DISPOSE OF DISPUTES

A joint committee composed of representatives of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company and its railway and steamship clerks, members of the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, was set up on December 19, 1935. Provision is now made whereby this committee will meet every three months and there is also provision for the appointment of a "referee."

In a general way the functions and purposes of this board are somewhat similar to those of Canadian Railway Board of Adjustment No. 1, which has been in operation for some considerable time between the railway companies and certain of their employees, among which are those engaged in engine and train service.

COMPULSORY INCORPORATION OPPOSED

A sub-committee on labour unions of the City Club of New York made public a report in which it suggested ways of curing abuses in unions. The first need was stated to be the election of good officers and the second, internal changes.

The report opposed compulsory incorporation of labour unions, since, under present Supreme Court decisions and statutes, a union may be sued and its funds, as well as those of its members, subjected to liability.

During the year 1937 a number of trade union officers passed away, among whom were some long associated with the trade union movement in Canada.

Harry Kempster, secretary-treasurer, District Lodge No. 2 of the International Association of Machinists and chairman of the Manitoba executive of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, died in Winnipeg, February 14, 1937, at the age of 64.

As a result of an automobile accident, Colin McDonald, formerly a vice-president of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America, died on June 2, 1937.

One of the best-known labour leaders in Canada a decade or so ago, J. B. MacLachlan died at his home in Glace Bay, N.S., on November 3, 1937, at the age of 68. The deceased was born in Scotland in the same house as Thomas Carlyle, coming to Nova Scotia in 1902. He settled in the colliery district in 1909 and immediately became prominent in labour circles, being elected secretary-treasurer of District 26 of the United Mine Workers of America, a position he held until 1923. The late J. B. MacLachlan was editor of the Labour Herald and the Nova Scotia Miner, and was an unsuccessful candidate for the federal and provincial houses. In 1930 he was elected president of the Workers' Unity League of Canada and held that position until the League disbanded in 1936. Several years ago he took over a dairy farm near Glace Bay and lived there until the time of his death.

James E. Tighe of Saint John, N.B., first vice-president of the International Longshoremen's Union since 1919, died on November 8, 1937, as a result of a head-on collision between the automobile he was driving and a street car. The late Mr. Tighe was a former president of the New Brunswick Federation of Labour, and active in Saint John labour circles for a long period of years.

On November 14, 1937, David Livingstone, a former president of District 26, United Mine Workers of America, died at Westville, N.S., little more than a week following the death of his fellow-labour worker James B. MacLachlan, whose death is previously recorded. David Livingstone was president of District 26, U.M.W.A., at the time J. B. MacLachlan was secretary-treasurer, and of late years concerned himself more particularly with the Workmen's Compensation Act, pleading many cases for fellow-workers before the board with outstanding success.

Stricken with a heart attack, Fred Bancroft, labour's representative on the Ontario Industry and Labour Board and a member of Toronto local of the Pattern Makers' League of North America, died on November 29, 1937, in his 58th year. During the many years of his labour activities, he served on three royal commissions and numerous boards of conciliation. He represented the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at two conventions of the American Federation of Labor, served five years as vice-president of the Congress, and was at one time chairman of the Ontario executive of that body. At the time of the establishment of the Ontario Workmen's Compensation Board the late Mr. Bancroft was one of two representatives acting as counsel for labour. Earlier in the year he was appointed by Premier Hepburn to the Ontario Industry and Labour Board, mention of which has been made previously in this chapter.

William J. R. Hibbits, general chairman of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen for eastern lines of the Canadian National Railways, passed away on December 15, 1937. He was 55 years of age. Previous to his election as chairman, he served as yardmaster for the Canadian National Railways at their Rockingham yards, outside of Halifax.

Other trade union officers who died during 1937 were: (1) James O'Connell, president, Metal Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, died October 30, 1936; (2) A. Gordon, member of the Executive Board, United Garment Workers of America, died January 1, 1937; (3) E. N. Nockels, secretary, Chicago Federation of Labor, died February 27, 1937; (4) William H. Johnston, former president, International Association of Machinists, died March 26, 1937; (5) Jerry Horan, president, Building Service Employees' International Union, died April 28, 1937; (6) Jeremiah Ryan, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, Binghamton, New York, died June 2, 1937; (7) Adolph Hirschberg, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, Philadelphia, Pa., died July 10, 1937; (8) George J. Bowen, acting general vice-president, International Association of Machinists, died August 10, 1937; (9) Fred J. Dempsey, secretary-treasurer, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada, died August 15, 1937; (10) James Bradford, member General Executive Board, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, died September, 1937; (11) Allan Burt, General Executive Board Member, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, died May, 1937; (12) Louis Beuloin, general vice-president, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, died September 2, 1937; (13) Edmon K. Hogan, general vice-president, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, died December 30, 1936.

XIX. REGISTRATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND UNION LABELS

The Federal Parliament Passed the Trade Unions Act in 1872—Few Labour Bodies Have Sought Registration—Unions Registered in 1937—Existing Registered Unions—Registrations Under the Professional Syndicates Act—Registration of Union Labels.

In order that labour unions should not be liable for criminal prosecution for being in restraint of trade, the federal Parliament passed the Trade Unions Act in 1872. The Act not being compulsory, few labour bodies have sought registration, the total number to the end of 1937 being 48, of which 25 have either dissolved or amalgamated with other unions. During 1937 the following seven unions were registered: (1) Canadian Seafarers' Association, Vancouver, B.C.; (2) Cement Masons' Union of Canada, Montreal, P.Q.; (3) Chemainus and District Longshoremen's Association, Vancouver, B.C.; (4) Federation of Canadian Transportation Employees, Vancouver, B.C.; (5) Manitoba Fur Employees' Association, Winnipeg, Man.; (6) New Westminster Paper Workers' Association, New Westminster, B.C.; and (7) United Hotel and Restaurant Employees of Canada, Vancouver, B.C.

The following list gives the names of the existing registered unions, including four central organizations, sixteen independent unions, two National Catholic unions and one local branch of an international organization, and indicates the respective dates of registration:—

REGISTRATIONS UNDER THE PROFESSIONAL SYNDICATES ACT

The Quebec Legislature in 1924 passed the Professional Syndicates Act, under which statute, after the performance of certain formalities, a union is constituted a corporation enjoying civil rights, and which, inter alia, authorizes the registered unions to "enter into contracts or agreements with all other syndicates, societies or persons respecting the attainment of their objects, particularly such as relate to the collective conditions of labour". Up to the close of 1936 twelve delegate bodies and 133 local syndicates had been registered under the Act, and during 1937 five delegate bodies and 71 syndicates were registered, making a total of 221 registrations of trade union organizations. The list of National Catholic delegate bodies and local syndicates which have registered under the Professional Syndicates Act during 1937, in order of registration, is as follows:—

XX. STATISTICS OF TRADE UNIONISTS IN CANADA

Source of Statistical Information—Increase in Membership and Branches of International Organizations—Central Bodies with Large Memberships—Canadian Group Shows a Gain—Standing of Independent Units—Membership of Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada Increased—Grand Total of Trade Unionists in the Dominion—Reported Female Membership—International and Canadian Central Bodies Operating in Canada—Trade Union Branches by Provinces—Federations—District Councils—Trades and Labour Councils—Trade Union Membership by Localities.

The numerical strength of the international and Canadian organizations and their affiliates as indicated by the figures published in this chapter, has been obtained from information which was, in the main, supplied early in 1938 by officials of the central bodies, the particulars furnished giving the standing as at December 31, 1937. Every known international and Canadian organization was requested to furnish the Department of Labour with the necessary data, and in the great majority of cases the particulars solicited were promptly supplied. The figures recorded for the organizations which did not report, or sent in only partial returns, have been secured from departmental records or other reliable sources, but where it has been necessary to use the same information as appeared in the previous report, such figures are printed in italics.

In table No. 1, giving the number of local unions and membership of international organizations in Canada, the figures have been arranged to show, respectively, (1) the number of branches and (2) the membership of each organization in Canada and elsewhere. Defining the term "elsewhere," it may be mentioned that several international organizations have local branches in countries other than the United States and Canada. Among these are the following: (1) the American Federation of Labor and the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, with branches in the Philippine Islands and Panama; (2) the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers and the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters, with branches in the Panama Canal Zone; (3) the Cigarmakers' International Union and the Leather Workers' International Union, with branches in the Philippine Islands; (4) the Order of Railway Conductors, with a division in Mexico; (5) the International Seamen's Union, the Operative Plasterers' International Association and the American Federation of Musicians, with branches in the Hawaiian Islands; (6) the International Typographical Union, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (7) the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and Panama; (8) the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with branches in Panama and Newfoundland; (9) the International Association of Machinists, with branches in Panama, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (10) the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with branches in Newfoundland; and the International Moulders' Union of North America, with branches in Hawaii and Panama.

The Building Service Employees' International Union having lost its one local branch in Canada, its name is omitted from the accompanying table. The name of the Journeymen Tailors' Union of America is also omitted, the organization having amalgamated with the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Likewise, the locals of the United Textile Workers of America having been taken over by the Textile Workers Organizing Committee of the C.I.O., the name of the former organization is not shown in the list. The American Federation of Actors, International Air Line Pilots' Association, Committee for Industrial Organization, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, United Fishermen's Union of the Pacific, Laundry Workers' International Union, International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, American Newspaper Guild, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, Textile Workers Organizing Committee of the C.I.O. and the International Woodworkers of America all established local branches or secured members in the Dominion during the year.

At the close of 1937 there were 92 international organizations with one or more local branches in Canada, as well as 4 which had one or more members, making a total of 96 international bodies operating in Canada, nine more than the number recorded in 1936.

The figures in the accompanying table show that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,048 local branches of international organizations, an increase of 152 over the number reported in 1936. The membership reported or secured from other reliable sources gives the international organizations a total of 217,465, a gain of 42,696. In 1936 the number of branches reported for this group was 1,896, with a combined membership of 174,769. The largest membership in Canada of international organizations was recorded in 1920, when it stood at 267,247, comprised in 2,455 local branches.

The 96 international organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table represent a total of 38,774 branches under their respective jurisdictions in the United States and Canada, with a combined membership of 6,519,341. Twenty-two of the 96 international organizations having branches or members in the Dominion are not in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and among them they had 11,357 subordinate branches, with a combined membership of 3,122,953, of which 567 branches and 90,463 members are located in the Dominion. Of the remaining 3,396,388 members, comprised in 27,417 branches identified with the 74 international organizations, 127,902 belong to 1,481 Canadian branches.

The average paid-up membership of the American Federation of Labor, with its 100 affiliated national and international organizations and 1,406 local trade and federal labour unions, was reported to be 3,271,726 for the fiscal year ending August 31, 1937, but the general secretary explained to the convention that "national and international unions are required to pay per capita tax upon their full paid-up membership and, therefore, the membership does not include all members who were unemployed during the fiscal year."

An analysis of the returns received from the 96 international organizations shows that in Canada 53 made gains, 20 showed losses and 11 had no change in their standing. The remaining 12 organizations reported for the first time.

The United Mine Workers of America occupies first place as to number of members in Canada, having reported a membership for 1937 of 19,000, comprised in 72 local branches, a gain in members of 2,400 and in branches of 6. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees ranked second with 13,000 members, a gain of 891, comprised in 196 branches, an increase of 2. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen stood in third place with a reported membership of 11,733, an increase of 791, the number of local branches being the same, 112. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen was close behind the carmen, with 11,456 members, a gain of 527, comprised in 92 locals, no change. The International Union United Automobile Workers of America, with 7 local branches, a gain of 5, reported 10,000 members, an increase of 4,000. Other international organizations reporting large Canadian memberships for 1937 included: (1) International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, 9,600; (2) Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, 8,929; International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, 8,014; International Association of Machinists, 7,600; Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, 7,056; Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, 6,932; Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, 6,505; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, 6,287; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, 5,271; American Federation of Musicians, 5,000; and Order of Railroad Telegraphers, 5,000.

In table No. 1A, in which is recorded the number of local branches and membership of the Canadian organizations, the directly chartered branches and membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are enumerated, the greater part of the affiliated membership of the Congress, however, being drawn from the international organizations which have local branches in the Dominion. At the close of the year 1937 the Congress had 119 local unions under direct charters, an increase of 21 as compared with the number recorded in 1936, with a combined membership of 10,861, a gain of 2,637. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, the membership of which is comprised in Canadian organizations, had 83 local unions under direct charters, a gain of 41, with an increase in membership of 4,531, it now having 8,425. The Canadian Federation of Labour had 2 directly chartered unions, with a membership of 387, a loss of 3 locals but an increase of 387 members. The remaining organizations in this group had among them 649 local branch unions, with a combined membership of 78,960. These figures indicate that there were 54 more branch unions and 7,237 more members in this group than were recorded in 1936.

Besides the local branches affiliated with either the international or Canadian organizations, there were 72 independent trade union units in the Dominion, an increase of 12, the membership reported by 67 being 16,521. In 1936, 54 independent units out of 60 such bodies reported a membership of 18,863.

The membership of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, as reported by the general secretary, was 52,000, an increase of 7,000, comprised in 285 local syndicates, 8 of which are designated as study circles, a gain of 95.

The information furnished the Department by officers of labour organizations and that secured from other reliable sources indicates that there were in Canada at the close of the year 3,258 local branch unions of all classes, a gain of 372, divided as follows: International, 2,048; Canadian, 853; National Catholic, 285; and independent, 72. There was a gain in membership of 62,146, the total for 1937 being 384,619, apportioned among the various groups as follows: International, 217,465; Canadian, 98,633; National Catholic, 52,000; and independent, 16,521.

As in the past, the department has endeavoured to secure particulars as to what proportion of trade union membership is made up of female workers. These particulars are difficult to obtain, many of the organizations not keeping separate records of male and female members. Of the 96 organizations the names of which appear in the appended table, only 13 furnished the desired information, the total number of female members reported in their respective jurisdictions (outside Canada), in which they have a combined membership among both sexes of 6,301,876, being 68,545. This female membership is known to be far short of the actual number of women workers identified with organized labour, there being many other unions besides those reporting which admit female members, but, as stated above, they keep no separate records of male and female members, and consequently made no report. The Canadian female membership of trade unions at the close of 1937, as reported by 397 of the local branch unions of all classes in the Dominion, was 20,512, divided by provinces as follows: Ontario, 9,157; Quebec, 6,621; British Columbia, 1,606; Manitoba, 1,507; Nova Scotia, 677; Alberta, 586; New Brunswick 209; and Saskatchewan, 149.

The National Women's Trade Union League, which has the endorsement of the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, is a body designed to assist in the organization of women workers. The League, which has head offices in Washington, D.C., does not issue charters to trade unions of women, its efforts being directed towards encouraging the female workers to enter the existing labour organizations. The platform of the League embraces: (1) organization of workers into trade unions; (2) equal pay for equal work; (3) eight-hour day and 44-hour week; (4) an American standard of living; (5) full citizenship for women; (6) the outlawry of war; and (7) closer affiliation of women workers of all countries. Miss Rose Schneiderman is the president and Miss Elizabeth Christman the secretary, their office being located at 306 Machinists' Building, Ninth St. and Mt. Vernon Place, N.W., Washington, D.C.

The appended table gives the reported membership of the 31 Canadian central bodies. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, besides the affiliated membership of 62 international and 5 Canadian organizations, had 119 directly chartered local unions, a gain of 21. The membership of the unions in direct affiliation which is recorded in the accompanying table, and not taken into account elsewhere, was 10,861, an increase of 2,637. At the close of 1937 the membership as reported by the various affiliated organizations stood at 191,147, comprised in 1,826 local branch unions. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour reported 83 local branch unions in direct affiliation, a gain of 41, with a combined membership of 8,425, an increase of 4,531. The total membership of the Congress, comprised in the 4 affiliated central bodies and the 83 directly chartered unions, was 28,048, a loss of 3,335, which is more than accounted for by the withdrawal of 2 central organizations, reporting a combined membership of 5,120.

Two directly chartered local branch unions out of 12 reported by the general secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Federation of Labour gave a combined membership of 387. Four central organizations in affiliation with the Canadian Federation of Labour, one being the One Big Union, which claims 23,509 members, reported a combined membership of 28,362, while the returns from the local unions of three other central bodies showed an aggregate membership of 2,643, making a grand total for the Federation of 31,392.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

The composition and functions of trades and labour councils have been discussed in an earlier chapter. The purpose of the appended table is to show the extent to which these bodies represent the organized workers in the localities where they have been established. Generally trades and labour councils are confined to a particular city or town, but in some instances they have jurisdiction over a number of adjacent localities. Fourteen of the councils are operating under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and are designated by the word "national" and the affix "A.C.C.L."; seven councils have been reported by the general secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, the name of the organization, preceded by the locality, being shown in each case; the one council chartered by the American Federation of Labor is indicated by the affix "A. F. of L."; and one, identified with the One Big Union, is indicated by the letters "O.B.U." The remaining 38 councils are operating under charters derived from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Thirteen of the latter councils are also chartered by the American Federation of Labor, a procedure to which the Canadian body does not object. The number of unions given for each locality includes the branches of all classes of organizations named in the report.

There were two councils in the province of Nova Scotia, both being located in Halifax, one of which is chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; it reported 30 affiliates out of 49 in the locality, with a combined membership of 4,365. The other council is under charter from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and had 8 local branches in affiliation, with 830 members.

Of the four councils in New Brunswick, two in Moncton and two in Saint John, the one in the latter city representing the international labour movement was the largest, having reported 30 affiliates out of a total of 45 in the city, with a membership of 3,500. The Moncton council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was second, with 1,100 members, comprised in 8 local branch unions out of 29 in the locality. In third place was the new council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in Saint John, which reported 6 affiliates and 769 members.

In the province of Quebec the Montreal council of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, as usual, ranked first, with 114 of the 248 unions in the city in affiliation, and a membership of 51,275. Occupying second place was the Montreal council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, with 39 affiliates and a membership of 11,053. The Quebec and Levis council of the international movement was third, having in affiliation 27 of the 109 local unions in the locality, with 3,800 members. The Three Rivers council of the same class followed with 3,623 members, comprised in 24 out of 55 local unions in the city.

Of the 24 councils in Ontario that in Toronto representing the international organizations occupied first place, having 110 of the 216 unions in affiliation, with a combined membership of 45,000. The Cornwall council, which was formed in 1937, and the Port Arthur council shared second place, with a membership of 5,000 each. The former council had 10 of the 15 local unions in the city, while the latter reported 22 affiliates out of a total of 29 unions in the locality. The national council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in Toronto occupied fourth place, with 3,569 members, comprised in 10 local unions, followed by the Ottawa Allied Trades and Labour Association, which had 33 out of 82 local unions in the district, with a combined membership of 3,500. Essex County Trades and Labour Council and London council shared the next position, with 2,500 members each. The London council had 27 out of 46 unions in the city in affiliation, while the Essex council had 22 affiliates out of 43 in the locality.

There were four councils in Manitoba, all located in Winnipeg. The council representing the international trade union movement reported the largest membership, viz., 9,120, comprised in 52 of the 126 local unions in the city. The council representing the Canadian Federation of Labour was second, with 25 affiliates and 4,000 members. The national council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour had 11 affiliates, with a combined membership of 1,551. No return was received from the council of the One Big Union.

Of the six councils in Saskatchewan the one in Saskatoon representing the internationally organized workers was the largest of those reporting, having 959 members, comprised in 14 of the 38 local branch unions in the city. Moose Jaw council of the same movement was second, with 20 of the 30 unions in the city and a membership of 740. The national union of the A.C.C.L. in Saskatoon was third, with 205 members, comprised in 5 local branch unions.

There were eight councils in Alberta, four representing the international trade union movement, the largest of those reporting being the Calgary council, which had 21 unions in affiliation out of 65 in the locality, with 1,528 members. The Drumheller council of the same movement, a new organization, occupied second place, with 1,400 members, comprised in 14 local branch unions. In third position was the Edmonton national council, which reported 12 affiliates out of 85 in the locality and a membership of 957.

The largest of the six councils in British Columbia was the one in Vancouver representing the international organized workers, which reported a membership of 15,000, comprised in 70 local branch unions out of 140 in the locality. Occupying second place was the Vancouver council of the Canadian Federation of Labour, with 10 affiliates and 2,700 members. The Victoria council, connected with the Trades and Labour Congress, stood third, reporting 1,500 members, comprised in 24 out of 48 local branch unions in the city.

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada reported eleven councils in affiliation but only five of these gave their membership. Three Rivers council had the largest following, reporting 6,516 members, comprised in 37 out of 55 local branch unions in the locality. Occupying second place was Sherbrooke council, with 27 out of 48 local unions in the city and a membership of 4,000. The District of Ottawa council reported 1,850 members, comprised in 14 local unions.

The names of the councils operating under dual charters are preceded with an asterisk, the table appended showing the returns, where reported, for both 1936 and 1937, and indicating (1) the number of branch unions in affiliation, (2) the membership represented and (3) the total number of branch unions operating in the locality.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP BY LOCALITIES

In this section is listed every locality in the Dominion in which exists one or more branches of the various classes of trade unions operating in Canada. Two tables are presented herewith, showing (1) the localities which have local branches of international (including the Industrial Workers of the World), Canadian and independent units and (2) the localities which have unions affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada. The names of the cities, towns, etc., are arranged alphabetically and in order of provinces, proceeding from east to west. The number of branches reporting membership and the membership reported are also shown in this statement.

There were 3,258 trade union branches of all classes in Canada, 2,048 of which were affiliates of international organizations, including 6 branches of the Industrial Workers of the World; 853 were branches of Canadian bodies; 285 were unions affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada; and 72 were independent units. Reports as to membership, etc., were received from 2,743 local unions, 280 more than for the year 1936.

The membership reported from the head offices of all organizations with branches or members in Canada, or secured from other reliable sources, totalled 384,619, comprised, as stated above, in 3,258 branches. The membership given by the 2,743 reporting local branches was 346,422, or an average of approximately 126 for each reporting branch. The remaining membership of 38,197, divided among the 515 non-reporting branches, gives an average of 74 members. The membership of the system divisions of telegraphers cannot be recorded in any particular locality and is therefore included under localities not specified. The 2,577 reporting branches of those classed as international, Canadian and independent units showed a membership of 309,621, an average of 120; the total membership of 396 non-reporting branches was 22,998, an average of 58. The 166 reporting unions of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, out of a total of 285, reported a membership of 36,801, an average of approximately 222; the remaining membership of 15,199 divided among the 119 non-reporting unions gives an average of about 128.

Where a local union has a large membership, or where a skilled craft is highly organized, reports of numerical strength are invariably furnished. There are instances, however, where officers of local unions are not permitted to supply any information concerning the organization without first obtaining the sanction of the members, and this permission, it is known, has been refused at times, it being considered that the publication of such information might be injurious to their interests. The apathy of the local officers is very often responsible for the failure to furnish particulars, but for the present report the response to requests for membership was rather generous, the reporting unions representing 84 per cent of the total.

There were 45 branch unions in Canada which reported a membership of 1,000 or over, 15 more than the number in this class in 1936. Of these, thirty were identified with international organizations, six with Canadian bodies, six with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada and three with independent units.

The union with jurisdiction confined to a particular city which had the largest membership was Montreal local No. 262, International Ladies Garment Workers, which reported 4,695 members. Occupying second place was Oshawa local No. 222, United Automobile Workers of America, with 4,000 members. Standing third was the Montreal local of the National Seamen's Association, with 3,352 members, Sydney local No. 1064, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America, ranked fourth with 3,180 members, followed by Montreal local No. 375, International Longshoremen's Association, with 2,500 members. Other branch unions with strong memberships were: Windsor local No. 195, United Automobile Workers of America, 2,485 members; Sault Ste. Marie local of the Algoma Steel Workers' National Union, 2,281 members; Drummondville National Catholic Union of Textile Workers, 2,030 members; Montreal branch No. 1, National Union of Operating Engineers, 1,852 members; Toronto branch No. 113, Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees, 1,830 members; Cornwall Branch No. 3, United Textile Workers' Federal Labour Union, 1,785 members; Cornwall branch No. 2, Cotton Workers' Federal Labour Union, 1,650 members; St. Catharines local No. 199, United Automobile Workers of America, 1,600 members; St. Gregoire de Montmorency National Catholic Union of Textile Workers, 1,587 members; Trenton local No. 1231, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, 1,572 members; Montreal local No. 373, International Longshoremen's Association and Three Rivers National Catholic Union of Textile Workers, 1,500 each; Montreal local No. 790, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, 1,479 members; Toronto local No. 149, American Federation of Musicians and New Aberdeen local No. 4529, United Mine Workers of America, 1,450 each; Springhill local No. 4514, United Mine Workers of America and Vancouver local No. 101, Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America, 1,400 each; Saint John local No. 273, International Longshoremen's Association, 1,325 members; Toronto local No. 2, Canadian Seamen's Union, Montreal local No. 234, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, and Montreal National Catholic Union of Hospital Employees, 1,260 members each; Fort Frances local No. 2560, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Halifax local No. 269, International Longshoremen's Association, Stellarton local No. 4481, United Mine Workers of America, Montreal local No. 49, United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, and Thetford Mines National Catholic Union of Miners, 1,200 members each; Toronto local No. 91, International Typographical Union, 1,153 members; New Waterford local No. 4527, United Mine Workers of America, 1,140 members; Workers Group of Chicoutimi (Independent), 1,125 members; Nanaimo local No. 7355, United Mine Workers of America, 1,100 members; Vancouver local No. 71, International Woodworkers of America, 1,050 members; Steveston Japanese Association (Independent), 1,033 members; Powell River local No. 76, International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, 1,030 members; Montreal local No. 606, Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, 1,025 members; Sydney Mines local No. 13, Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia and Montreal National Catholic Union of Postal Employees, 1,000 members each.

XXI. DISBURSEMENTS FOR TRADE UNION BENEFITS

An Important Feature of Labour Organization is the Provision Made for the Payment of Certain Classes of Benefits—Six Canadian Bodies Reported Expenditures for Benefits—Disbursements by This Group Show a Decrease—Fifty-eight International Organizations with Branches in Canada Reported Disbursements to Members—Old Age Pensions Paid by Ten Organizations—Benefits Paid by International Organizations Greater than in 1936—Death Benefits Account for More than one-half of the Total Disbursements—Large Expenditures for Benefits by Four Railroad Brotherhoods—International Benefits in Detail—Amounts Paid by Canadian Local Branch Unions to Their Own Members.

An important feature of labour organization is the provision made by the majority of the trade unions for the payment to their members of certain classes of benefits. Large sums are disbursed annually by some of the older and stronger labour bodies, especially by the railroad brotherhoods. Of the 31 Canadian central organizations, 6 reported expenditures for benefits—4 paid death benefits (some of which is paid by insurance companies with which the organizations have group insurance policies), strike benefits were paid by 2, and sick benefits by 1. The total amount disbursed was reported to be $47,657.78, a decrease of $20,331.39 as compared with the figures furnished by five organizations in 1936. The following table gives the names of the central bodies reporting payments for benefits, together with the amounts disbursed for the classes of benefits mentioned.

(a) Includes disability benefits.

Of the 96 international organizations operating in Canada, 58 reported from headquarters as to disbursements for benefits to members. The expenditures reported are for a one-year period, and while in some instances they cover the fiscal year of the respective organizations, in the main they are for the calendar year 1937.

Of the 58 organizations the names of which appear in the accompanying table, death benefits were paid by 53, unemployed and travelling benefits by 5, strike benefits by 26, sick and accident benefits by 17, and old age pensions by 10 (International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America; Quarry Workers' International Union of North America; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America; Order of Railway Conductors; and International Typographical Union), with the remaining amounts recorded in the column being for other purposes. Of the remaining 38 organizations with Canadian affiliations, some have benefit features the administration of which in a few instances is under the control of the local branches. This is mainly accounted for by the fact that many local unions existed independently prior to their affiliation with the international "central" and some of these locals provided for death, sick and other benefits, for which a fund had been created. In this manner the benefit features have often become identified with the local branches, and their jurisdiction in this respect has been recognized. In other instances there is a division of control, sick benefits being administered by local branches, while death, strike and pension funds are governed by the international body. The returns as to benefit payments furnished by the international organizations are for the whole membership. It is in very rare cases that separate reports are received as to disbursements made by international organizations to their Canadian members, the general officers stating that to prepare such a statement would entail more work than they are in a position to undertake.

The department has endeavoured as usual to ascertain what benefits in addition to those disbursed by the central bodies were paid during 1937 to their own members from the funds under the immediate control of the various Canadian branches of international organizations. Application for this information was forwarded to every known local union, and of these 618 reported having made payments on account of benefits, the aggregate of such disbursements being given in a separate table.

One hundred and sixty-nine local branches of Canadian organizations, including 38 National Catholic unions and 24 independent units, reported disbursements for benefits to their own members.

The following statement shows the total reported expenditures made in Canada and the United States on account of benefits by the various international organizations having local branch unions in Canada, as printed in detail in a subsequent table:—

Unemployed and travelling benefits..	171,883
Strike benefits..	1,006,764
Sick and accident benefits..	3,593,239
Old age pensions and other benefits..	4,484,288

According to these figures, the expenditures for benefits in 1937 by international organizations operating in Canada were $678,295 greater than the amount expended in 1936. The expenditure for death benefits, as usual, accounted for more than one-half of the total disbursements, but showed a decrease of $488,409. For unemployment and travelling benefits there was a decrease of $1,100,440, the sum disbursed being only $171,883. The benefits paid to those on strike amounted to $1,006,764, an increase of $132,529. The disbursements for sick and accident benefits, which totalled $3,593,239, were $1,677,341 greater than in 1936. The payments made on account of old age pensions amounted to $3,946,448, an increase of $577,375, the remaining sum of $537,840 recorded in the column with old age pensions being spent for other benefits and donations to other organizations.

The largest expenditure for death benefits alone was made by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which reported disbursements aggregating $2,149,405. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers spent $1,546,373 and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen disbursed the sum of $1,235,145 for this class of benefit. Only 5 organizations reported payments on account of unemployed and travelling benefits, the largest sum being expended by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, which spent $91,025, and the Amalgamated Lithographers of America being second, with an expenditure of $65,000 for unemployed and travelling benefits. For strike benefits the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union reported the largest expenditure, having disbursed the sum of $280,000; the International Moulders' Union of North America had an outlay of $134,116; and the International Association of Machinists was third, with payments totalling $107,226. The heaviest outlay for sick and accident benefits, which also included disability benefits, was by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which reported disbursements of $1,837,108; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen was second, with payments amounting to $785,900; and in third place stood the Order of Railway Conductors, which reported payments amounting to $171,204 for sick and accident benefits. The International Typographical Union reported the largest expenditures for old age pensions, with payments aggregating $2,118,928; the next largest disbursements was by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with an outlay of $379,959; and the third largest expenditure for old age pensions was by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, with an outlay of $320,260.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen reported the largest aggregate expenditure for benefits, having disbursed the sum of $4,097,815; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen took second place, with an outlay of $2,742,235; the International Typographical Union was third, with payments of $2,715,251; and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers occupied fourth place, with disbursements of $1,870,778. The combined expenditures for benefits by the four railroad brotherhoods, the members of which are engaged in engine and train service, comprise $9,782,715 of the total of $20,906,473 expended for benefits in Canada and the United States by the international labour organizations operating in Canada.

BENEFITS PAID BY LOCAL BRANCHES

Returns supplied by 811 local branch unions in Canada show that these bodies expended a total of $323,562 to their own members for the various benefits provided by their respective laws. This amount is $88,345 less than that reported in 1936 by 717 local branches. The largest expenditure was for sick and accident benefits, for which $103,626 was spent, an increase of $3,499 as compared with 1936. The next largest expenditure was for strike benefits, $65,360 being disbursed, an increase of $16,969. For unemployed benefits, $64,979 was paid out, a decrease of $78,541. Death benefits amounted to $42,909, which was $16,770 less than that expended for this class of benefit in 1936. The expenditure for "other benefits," which represent disbursements for various purposes, including donations to other unions, amounted to $46,688, a decrease of $13,502. Of the total outlay for benefits by Canadian branch unions to their own members, the 618 locals having international affiliation disbursed $218,120, a decrease of $101,160, the expenditures for each class of benefits being: death, $20,286; unemployed, $62,336; strike, $22,805; sick and accident, $78,210; and other, $34,483. The 169 branches of Canadian organizations, including 38 National Catholic unions, disbursed $21,758 more than in 1936, having spent a total of $85,726, divided as follows: death, $13,824; unemployed, $2,553; strike, $42,555; sick and accident, $18,540; and other, $8,254. Twenty-four independent units reported expenditures for benefits of $19,716, a decrease of $8,943, apportioned as follows: death, $8,799; unemployed, $90; strike, nil; sick and accident, $6,876; and other, $3,951.

The following summary indicates the total amount disbursed by local branch unions in Canada for the classes of benefits named:—

Unemployed benefits.. . . .	64,979
Strike benefits.. . . .	65,360
Sick and accident benefits.. . . .	103,626
Other benefits.. . . .	46,688
Total.. . . .	$323,562

The expenditure of the above amounts by the local branch unions among their own members, as previously explained, was in addition to the disbursements made for benefits by the central organizations.

The arrangement of the accompanying table is similar to the preceding one giving the disbursements by the central international bodies, with the exception that the "other benefits" does not include old age pension payments, but does embrace all gratuities, etc., which are not classed in other columns:—

XXII. NEW AND DISSOLVED LABOUR BODIES

New Unions Number 576—Dissolved Unions, 204—Increase in Unions by Groups—Net Increase in Trade Union Branches—New and Dissolved Bodies by Trade Groups—New and Dissolved Delegate Bodies—Names and Location of the Various Labour Bodies Formed—Labour Bodies Dissolved.

The information received in the department indicates that there were 576 new unions of all classes formed in Canada during the year 1937, while for the same period 204 were unreported and are therefore shown as dissolved. From the accompanying table it will be observed that union activity was fairly general in all industries. The international group of organizations had a gain of 152 unions, the Canadian group had an increase of 113, the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada added 95 to its total and the independent units increased by 12. The net increase in trade union branches was 372.

By trade groups the new and dissolved unions are as follows:—

Trade Group	New	Dissolved
Agriculture.....	23	11
Mining.....	18	2
Lumbering.....	61	41
Building.....	36	10
Metal.....	49	4
Printing.....	55	10

Steam engineers.....	40	8

Railway.....	3	3

Navigation.....	37	20
Personal service.....	39	22
Miscellaneous.....	576	204

The delegate bodies organized during 1937 numbered 29—10 federations, 11 district councils and 8 trades and labour or central councils. For the same period 8 delegate bodies passed out of existence—5 federations, 2 district councils and 1 central council. As explained in an earlier chapter, the formation or dissolution of these delegate bodies does not affect the trade union membership of the Dominion, their establishment being made possible only by the existence of local branch unions, which are the foundation of the whole plan of labour organization.

LIST OF LABOUR BODIES FORMED IN 1937

The following statement contains the name of every federation, district council, trades and labour council and local branch union known to have been formed in Canada during the year 1937, as well as the names of some organizations of which particulars had not been received for previous reports. Where the locality is given for bodies covering a wide territory, it designates the address of the secretary. The list of local branches is arranged in trade groups, the name of the organization from which the charter was secured, the location of the branch and the total number of charters issued by the central organization being given.

XXIII. THE LABOUR PRESS

The Labour Press Has Attained a Position of Considerable Importance—All of the More Important Labour Bodies Have Official Journals—Method of Circulation—Canadian Labour Publications—List of International Official Journals—Periodicals of National Catholic Unions—Other Publications.

The labour press as developed by the trade union movement on the North American continent has attained a position of considerable importance. Through this medium the members are kept informed of the business of their respective organizations in particular and the activities of the trade union movement generally. All of the more important labour bodies have official journals, most of which are issued monthly. Usually the general secretary has charge of the editing and management of the official publication, but in some cases it is an elective position. While a regular subscription rate is charged for all trade union journals, most organizations arrange to include the fee in the per capita tax so as to ensure that the publication reaches every member, irrespective of where he resides. As the headquarters of all the international labour organizations are in the United States, it is only natural that the offices of publication should be similarly located.

There are fourteen labour periodicals published in Canada, eight of which are official journals of central organizing bodies. Listed in this review for the first time is the Canadian Labour Herald, official organ of the Vancouver Council of the Canadian Federation of Labour, while the One Big Union has revived its official publication under the title "One Big Union Monthly". The only journals to be removed from the list are the Building Worker, formerly the official publication of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, the Postal Journal of Canada, published by the Canadian Postal Employees, and the Shipping and Terminals, published by the Brotherhood of Ships' Employees.

There is also a number of labour papers which, although not sponsored by any labour body, are published in the interest of the trade union movement.

The following five Canadian labour publications devote some space to material printed in the French language: (1) Canadian Congress Journal; (2) Canadian Unionist; (3) Canadian Railway Employees' Monthly; (4) The Federated Railwaymen; and (5) The Labour World. The official journal of the United Mine Workers of America contains sections printed in several different languages.

More than 150 weekly papers are published in the United States under the auspices or in the interest of organized workers and recognized as a part of the labour press by the trade union movement. Some years ago the International Labor Press was established with the view of stimulating the labour press of the continent. Through this agency the editors of various recognized labour publications are brought into conference annually at the same time and place that the American Federation of Labor holds its conventions. Matters relating to their work are discussed and suggestions invited as to how the labour news service of North America may be improved. The president of the International Labor Press is Matthew Woll, 105 A. F. of L. Bldg., Washington, D.C., and the secretary, R. E. Woodmansee, Box 15, Springfield, Ill.

La Vie Syndicale.—Published by the Secretariat of National Catholic Unions.
Le Tramway.—Published by the Street Railway Employees' Union of Montreal.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the recognized trade union periodicals listed above, there are other publications which champion the cause of the wage-earner. In 1922 the Workers' Party of Canada (the name was changed in 1924 to the Communist Party of Canada) published The Worker as its official organ, and continued to do so until the party was declared illegal in December, 1931, whereupon the paper appeared under the auspices of the Worker Publishing Association. Beginning May 1, 1936, this publication was issued by the Clarion Publishing Association, Toronto, Ont., under the name of the Daily Clarion. After the Young Communist League was organized in 1922, The Young Worker, published weekly in Toronto, Ont., appeared as its official organ. In 1936 The Young Worker ceased publication and its subscription list was taken over by Advance, a monthly publication issued in Toronto by the Advance Publishing Association. It is understood that the Canadian Labour Defence League has ceased to publish its official journal, the Labour Defender.

The Workers' Party of America publishes in New York, N.Y., an official paper entitled the Daily Worker, one of the two dailies published in the English language in the interest of communism. The other communist daily is published in London, England, under a similar name. The Labour Herald, which had been the official journal of the Trade Union Educational League, was in 1924 consolidated with the Liberator and Soviet Russia Pictorial under the name of the Workers' Monthly. Beginning in 1927 this magazine was published monthly by the Workers' (Communist) Party of America under the title of The Communist as a medium for the theoretical discussion of revolutionary problems.

The Communist League of America, the opposition group to the Workers' (Communist) Party of America, published a weekly organ in New York under the title of The New Militant, and the National Youth Committee of the same group in December, 1931, commenced the publication of a monthly paper under the name of the Young Spartican.

XXV. NON-TRADE UNION ORGANIZATIONS

Information Concerning Associations Not Identified With the Labour Movement of the Dominion—Chief Associations of School Teachers—Various Classes of Government Employees—Commercial Travellers Have Strong Associations—Objects of the Organizations in This Group—Chief Officers—Standing of the Various Groups—Affiliations and Reported Membership.

In this chapter information is given concerning a considerable number of associations which cannot be included in the category of trade unions, as they are not identified with the labour movement of the Dominion. Their importance, however, warrants some reference being made to them in a report designed in part to indicate the numerical strength of organizations of wage-earners operating in the Dominion. Included in this group of non-trade union organizations are associations of school teachers, who, besides being organized locally, have their provincial federations. These in turn are brought together in a Dominion-wide body known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. The efforts put forth to secure what are considered adequate salaries for the teaching profession is cited among the advantages of membership in the teachers' organizations. Members are not supposed to accept positions at salaries below the schedules prepared by the association. With the object of maintaining this principle, members are enjoined in some instances from seeking a position where a vacancy has occurred through the refusal of a school board to pay the scheduled salary. This policy is in accord with one of the fundamental principles of organized labour.

In preceding chapters of this report mention has been made of a number of associations of government employees which are identified with the trade union movement. However, the great majority of such associations are not so affiliated, and their names are therefore included in the present group. Some of these associations are composed of various classes of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, while others are made up of employees of provincial governments. The main object of these organizations is to speak collectively for their respective memberships on matters which they desire to bring to the attention of the proper authorities.

Among the strongest numerically of the associations in this group are those embracing commercial travellers. As a result of their efforts, some of these organizations have secured numerous privileges for their members, and in addition have disbursed large sums for benefit purposes. Most of these associations have been in existence for many years, the oldest being the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was established in Toronto in 1871, incorporated by Act of Parliament on May 26, 1874, and by an amendment thereto in March, 1876, granted further privileges. The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association was formed in 1875, and incorporated in 1880; the Ontario Association was formed on December 23, 1876, and incorporated in Ontario on September 13, 1880; the Northwest Association was incorporated in Manitoba on May 23, 1887, this incorporation being confirmed by the Dominion Government on June 21, 1906. There is also the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, a grouping of French-Canadian Roman Catholic commercial travellers' societies, which accepts as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See", and is designed to direct its members towards the religious and social apostolate.

There are in the Dominion a number of ex-soldier associations formed with a view to fostering the comradeship of the trenches. Besides the one referred to under government employees, however, the only veterans' associations which it is considered fitting to include in this report are: (1) Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild, organized in 1925, composed of men who are employed in the departments of the Canadian National Railways; and (2) Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors, which was formed in Montreal in 1919 to protect its members against alleged discrimination by labour unions.

In each of the provinces of the Dominion there are associations of school teachers, with which local bodies are in most cases connected. Nine of these provincial associations are identified with a Dominion-wide association known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. The objects of this body, which was organized at Calgary in July, 1920, are as follows:—

(a) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest.

(b) To provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given.

(c) The Dominion organization shall in no way interfere with the full liberties of the provincial organizations in dealing with matters concerning their own provinces.

ASSOCIATION OF DOMINION GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

In a previous chapter reference has been made to those organizations of government employees which are identified with the labour movement through their affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. These are the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, the Civil Service Association of Alberta and the Canadian Postal Employees. The remaining government employees' associations are not connected with organized labour, but function as separate central organizations and as such are recorded in this group. The associations of Dominion Government employees in some instances cover definite branches of the civil service, while it is understood the provincial bodies embrace all classes in one general organization. The object of the civil service associations is in the main to speak collectively for their respective members on matters affecting conditions of employment. Several group associations of Dominion Government employees are affiliated with the Civil Service Federation, which is designed to represent all branches of the service, and which, although itself not connected with organized labour, does not exclude membership to those bodies which are so affiliated. Among the associations of Dominion Government employees is the Halcyon Club. This was originally intended as a social organization, but, since the passing out of existence of the Women's Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, the Halcyon Club has also become the medium of expression of the women in the government service at Ottawa in regard to conditions of employment or other matters. The list of associations of government employees, together with the names and addresses of the chief officers, so far as furnished, is as follows:—

Civil Service Federation of Canada.—Pres., V. C. Phelan, Department of Labour, Ottawa, Ont. Sec., Vernon L. Lawson, 709 Blackburn Bldg., Ottawa, Ont.

Of the 59 associations listed below the first 47 are affiliates of the Civil Service Federation of Canada:—

STANDING OF THE VARIOUS GROUPS

Appearing in this group (exclusive of those recorded in a preceding chapter) are the names of 126 organizations classed as "Non-Trade Union Associations", divided by classes as follows: school teachers, 16; government employees, 62; municipal employees, 5; commercial travellers, 9; all others 35.

In the group comprising school teachers there were 16 associations, nine of which are affiliates of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, which reported a membership of 40,000. The four remaining associations reported a combined membership of 2,059, making an aggregate of 42,059 organized school teachers.

Of the 62 associations of government employees listed as non-trade union organizations, 59 comprise civil servants in the employ of the Dominion Government, two are composed of employees of provincial governments, and one has members in the employ of both the federal and provincial governments. The 49 associations marked with an asterisk are in affiliation with the Civil Service Federation of Canada. The numerical strength of the Federation is made up of the combined memberships of the affiliated bodies and in 1937 was 14,150. This total includes the membership of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the Canadian Postal Employees (both of these organizations were referred to in an earlier chapter), together with 306 associate members or members at large. The four unaffiliated associations of Dominion Government employees had a combined membership of 8,200, making a total of organized federal Government employees of 26,446, which includes the membership of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada (referred to in a previous chapter). The two associations of provincial government employees and the Veterans' Civil Service Guild reported a combined membership of 4,625. Of the 30,765 organized government employees, 23,651 are not identified with the trade union movement.

The membership reported by the five associations of municipal employees was 1,772, and that for eight of the nine commercial travellers' associations was 30,659. The combined membership reported by 33 of the 34 other associations was 18,763. The aggregate membership of all classes of organizations, as given in the appended table, was 116,904, an increase of 1,040 as compared with the figures for 1936. The statement following gives the membership of each association, together with the number of affiliates where the organizations have subordinate branches in affiliation.
